CHAMPAGNE REGION AGLOW WITH FLAMES

Mobs Burn Cellar After Cellar and Even Destroy the Vines —Town of Ai on Fire.

TROUBLE SPREADS TO SOUTH

Grave Situation in the Bordeaux District—Chamber Votes Confidence in the Government.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

EPERNAY, France, April 12. — The anger of the growers of champagne proper, which broke loose yesterday after the Senate's decision in favor of the abolition of territorial delimitations, reached a startling climax to-night.

From early evening Ai and Epernay presented an aspect of the wildest disorder. Scenes of orgy, pillage, and wholesale destruction were enacted all the evening under the livid light of flames burning high from the factories and private residences not only of "champagne fakers," but of several legitimate growers and bottlers of well-known brands.

Eight thousand wine growers, armed with ugly-looking weapons, made regular assaults both at Ai and Epernay, becoming more and more excited by the pungent smell of the wine freely running in the gutters. In the streets bonfires were made out of the furniture, pianos, and antiques belonging to unfortunate growers.

Little by little the Boulevard Dunord at Ai, over 800 yards in length, became a mass of smoking ruins.

Late in the night the mad fury of the manifestants knew no limit. Even chickens, which had been taken out of the poultry houses of sacked villas, were thrown alive into the flames.

Troops, which were rushed into the district in special trains, were unable for a time to get control.

The peasants offered passive resistance to the charges of the soldiers, who were forced to open their way through crowds by means of the flats of their sabres. On one occasion women lay flat on the ground and challenged the troopers to trample on them. One army horse was killed and three soldiers were wounded in one encounter. It is said a bomb was thrown, but it is impossible to ascertain whether there is any truth in this.

Late to-night infantry arrived on the scene, together with a squadron of dragoons, and succeeded in dispersing the wine growers, who took refuge in the nearby hills.

The revolutionary international song has been sung everywhere in the district. Utter distrust of the Government is general. All strangers are looked upon as spies, and newspaper correspondents are made to show their credentials and establish their identity.

Among the manifestants several have been wounded.

All through there has been perfect accord in the strategy of the manifestants. It is a striking feature of the outbreak that the plan of attack was evidently discussed and arranged days ago.

EPERNAY, April 12.—Startling developments occurred to-day in the rioting which immediately followed the action of the Senate on the champagne question.

Throughout the day and during the early hours of the evening the situation was extremely grave, but at midnight, owing to the presence of formidable forces of troops, conditions have become somewhat settled.

The frenzy of the rioters exceeds all bounds, and it is feared that they will use dynamite, a large quantity of which explosive disappeared from the quarries last week.

News comes from the town of Ai that a bomb was thrown at the cavalry, wounding three troopers and killing a horse.

A large division of the wine manifestants succeeded in avoiding the troops and reached Epernay this afternoon in small groups. Then the separate bands reformed and destroyed several depots of champagne.

Altogether four establishments in Epernay have been wrecked and another has been pillaged. The safes in these establishments were forced, and the furniture and fittings were piled in heaps in the streets and set on fire. The firemen were powerless, as they were driven off by the rioters.

All around Epernay the country is dotted with blazing wine cellars, and the whole sky is aglow.

At Cumières, Moet & Chandon's great wine presses are blazing, as well as another big establishment at Pierry.

At Ai two more establishments were wrecked to-night. The cavalry charged repeatedly, but the mob showed stubborn resistance, hurling broken bottles and stones at the men and horses.

Troops continue to pour into this district. Already six battalions of infantry and four squadrons of cavalry have arrived, and a brigade of cavalry is due here from Paris. It is estimated that there will be 12,000 troops on service by to-morrow morning. Immediately on their arrival the soldiers are dispatched to the danger centres. The Prefect plans to occupy practically every town and village in the district with the military.

The soldiers have strict orders to arrest pillagers and use their arms in case of resistance.

An official list of the damage, prepared at a late hour to-night, shows that at Epernay four establishments were wrecked. At Damery five wine houses were pillaged and destroyed. The residence of the Mayor at Marleuil was pillaged. Wine cellars were wrecked at Pierry and a wine house at Dizy. The Moet & Chandon wine presses outside Epernay were burned.

In addition, the straw covering for the protection of the vines against frost were set on fire and all the vines in the region were destroyed.

AI, April 12.—At midnight a conflagration, started by incendiaries, threatens to engulf this entire village. The inhabitants have abandoned their houses, taking their most precious possessions with them.

A regiment of cavalry arrived to-night from Epernay, and is stationed around the village.

WOMAN MOTORIST KILLS MAN

William Kach Run Down Despite Her Efforts to Save Him.

Persons in Seventh Avenue, near 144th Street, at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, saw an elderly man who had started across the avenue hesitate as an automobile, driven by a woman, approached him at good speed. They saw the woman apply the brakes of her car and the man start forward as though to pass in front of it. The woman motorist turned to one side as the man stepped forward, and when he suddenly stepped back again was unable to change the direction of her car. Although she tried to bring the machine to a halt, it knocked the man down and passed over him.

Men ran into the street and carried the unconscious man into a nearby drug store, where they telephoned to the Harlem Hospital. Meantime the woman, who had a little girl with her in the car, brought the machine to a stop and hurried into the drug store, white with alarm. The ambulance surgeon found that the man had been killed, and by cards in his pocket he was identified as William Kach of the twine and paper firm of Emil Kach & Co. He was identified later by his brother at the West 125th Street Station, where his body was taken.

The woman said she was Mrs. Elizabeth Glascoe of 484 Van Cortlandt Avenue, Yonkers, and the child with her, her niece, ten-year-old Margaret Falls. She said that the accident was unavoidable, and after they had taken her name and address the police allowed her to go. She required attention at the hands of the druggist before she was able to drive her car home.

BERNSTORFF TO RESIGN?

Berlin Rumor About Ambassador Discredited in Washington.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 12.—A telegram from Berlin to The Daily News says:

"According to a report which comes from an ordinarily reliable source, Count Johann Heinrich von Bernstorff, German Ambassador to the United States, has handed in his resignation. In explanation of his action it is said that considerations of health make his retirement necessary.

"Councillor Arthur Zimmermann of the German Foreign Office is said to have been practically decided upon as Count von Bernstorff's successor, though the facts are witheld pending the formal acceptance of the resignation by Kaiser Wilhelm, who is in Corfu."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—No suggestion of a basis for the report that Count von Bernstorff is to resign can be found here. At the German Embassy it was said to-night that nothing was known of any intention in Berlin to remove the Ambassador, and that he had no intention of resigning.

The Ambassador's relations in Washington, both official and social, have been of the pleasantest, and no one can be found who believes that there is any truth in the report.

NOT A BURGLAR.

Guileless Farmer Roped by Persian Consul General Explains in Court.

Special to The New York Times.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., April 12.—Looking somewhat battle-scarred, the early morning caller captured at the home of Persian Consul General H. H. Topakyan who was sewed up with several yards of clothes line, was arraigned before Police Judge Pierson to-night. A complaint of drunk and disorderly had been made against the prisoner, who said he was Jesse Darbin, a farm hand. He was discharged.

"Did that foreign fellow take me for a burglar, Judge?" asked the prisoner. "Well, say, by heck! I certainly thought I was getting kidnapped. All I know was that somebody throwed me down on the ground and roped me. Gee! He wound that rope around my body like he was tying up a bundle to ship over to Europe."

Darbin, according to the police, was much under the influence of liquor when he was taken, bound hand and foot, to headquarters early this morning in Mr. Topakyan's automobile. The police had been asked to come and get the intruder, but refused on the ground that the Topakyan residence is outside the city limits.

The Consul General criticised the police for refusing to act, but to-night telephoned an apology to Chief Holloway. The Chief says that Mr. Topakyan declared he was sorry he abused them for not responding to his appeal, as he did not know where the jurisdiction of the local police ended.

"I will come in your police station some time and shake your hand," the Chief says Mr. Topakyan promised over the telephone.

HOOTED BY SUFFRAGETTES.

W. H. Wright Tells Them Their Charms Have Faded.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 12.—Willard Huntington Wright, a local literary figure and Harvard student from 1906 to 1907, was hooted from the platform of the Women's Press Club to-day when he declared that woman's chief charm lay in her personal attractiveness.

"Suffragettes," he said, "are mostly women whose attractiveness is so run down at the heel that it no longer commands attention."

Bedlam broke out at this declaration and nothing further of Mr. Wright's speech was audible to the spectators. There were hoots and hisses from every part of the room until Wright was forced to stop and leave the platform. Even then Mrs. David C. McCan, who was presiding, was unable to restore order, for some one moved that the speaker be thanked. Instantly there were were shouts of "We will not thank any one who has insulted us so gratuitously." The motion was never put, for Mrs. McCan, who has been seriously ill for some weeks and was just out of the sick room, almost fainted from the noise and excitement and left the room. The meeting thereupon broke up in a wild scramble.

Mr. Wright had been selected as one of the speakers for the anti-suffragette organization to present its views. There were two speakers on each side. First a suffragette advocate presented her views. Then Wright was called upon. The other two speakers never got a chance to deliver their messages.

To Revise Moving Picture Regulations

Mayor Gaynor has appointed a committee to co-operate with the Aldermen in drawing the new ordinances for the regulation of the moving picture business in the city, recommended in a recent report by Commissioner of Accounts Fosdick. The committee is composed of Michael Furst, a Brooklyn lawyer; John Collier, of the People's Institute; Assistant Corporation Counsel Crowell, attached to the Mayor's office; Maurice Wertheim of 49 West Seventy-second Street, and Dr. J. F. Warbasse of Brooklyn.

NEW PARTY FOUNDED TO RESCUE MEXICO

NEUTRALS ISSUE APPEAL

Rebels' Source of Money a Puzzle—Federals Active Putting Fighting Machinery in Effective Shape.

Special to The New York Times.

MEXICO, April 12.—A long list of very prominent men who have not been identified with either side in the present Mexican trouble,—among them Pedro Lascurain, Xavier Icasa, Tirso Saenz, Roberto Gayol, Jacinto Pimentel, and Carlos Rincon Gallardo—have announced the formation of a non-political society for the welfare of the country.

A long statement of intentions was posted yesterday. One passage of this statement reads:

"Nature has seen fit to place us beside a powerful Nation of expansive and achieving temper, a Nation that affords us means of enrichment on account of being an inexhaustible market for the products of our soil, and that holds up to us a great object lesson, owing to its practical genius and democratic institutions, but at the same time constitutes the greatest of our dangers. With peace disturbed here, intervention might come, and even the loss of our national territory. Whatever be the point of view from which this threatening problem be regarded, we must not try to put aside the serious preoccupation which it is calculated to arouse, nor allow it to be regarded otherwise than as a feature of paramount importance in the development of a sound national policy. We must keep the matter constantly in mind, and act as if danger were present. Divided, tearing, and rending one another in opprobious civil wars, wasting our substance, lives, good names—what resistance could we offer to any enemy, how assert claims for justice before the world? Were there no other motive, this alone should suffice to unite us into solidarity, sacrificing pettinesses, animosities, and resentments."

The new party being formed is named the Republican. The moving spirit, Dr. Fortunato Hernandez, pledges its support to no re-election, to universal suffrage, and the destruction of class lines.

Correspondents with Madero, the rebel leader, say his troops are paid in cash every night. These statements again bring up the question where the funds of the revolution are coming from. Prominent men say it is as big a mystery as ever. Motive seems lacking to support the report which credits the Standard Oil with supplying the sinews of war, even as an act of vengeance for Pearson oil concessions. It is certain the Maderos are not giving much, while the fact that most of the rebels' cash is American money is thought to be proof that the source o fsupply is in the United States. The best posted men refuse to hazard a guess of the source of support, but all admit that it must be powerful.

Meantime Mexico's Department of War is rapidly placing its fighting machinery in the best possible condition. Francisco I. Madero may yet, it is hoped, be induced to agree to terms which do not include the resignation of President Diaz, or, it is said, his following may be taken from him by those who are spreading the propaganda of peace.

Officers say every day of delay serves to strengthen the Government forces. The spending of 8,000,000 pesos appropriated by Congress last week as a special war fund has begun. To-day it was announced that the Government has placed in England an order for 50,000 rifles of the Martine-Hale pattern and another order for 5,000,000 cartridges. It is asked that these orders be filled as rapidly as possible. To-day a large consignment of cartridges bought in Germany arrived.

One of the most significant expenditures announced is that which will be incurred when the increase in the pay of soldiers and officers becomes effective Sunday.

No direct call for volunteers has been made, but in almost every State not in the control of the rebels, volunteer companies have been organized and their services offered to the Government. In many cases the services of these men have been accepted.

Indicative of the demand for officers at the front, general orders were issued to-day instructing all Sub-Lieutenants now employed in a clerical capacity to report for active duty in the field.

To-day formal announcement was made that the President had promoted eight Colonels to the rank of Brigadier Generals. Among them are Gens. Cuellar and Lis, the two officers who distinguished themselves in the fight at Casas Grandes, and Gen. Trucy Aubert, who led the Federals at the battle at Aldama. All are men who have participated in the campaign in the north.

URGING PEACE ON MADERO.

Gomez Has Opened Communication by Wire—Agent Sees Rebel Leader.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Initial steps to bring about peace in Mexico, supplementing various informal advances that thus far have been made to that end, were taken here to-day. Dr. Vasquez Gomez, head of the confidential agency of the revolutionists in the United States, who was recently designated by Francisco I. Madero, leader of the insurrection, as the only person besides himself who was empowered to receive or initiate peace proposals, to-night announced that he had completed special arrangement for expeditious telegraphic communication between the camp of Madero in Chihuahua and Washington. The results of the telegraphic conference, which will include a definite set of terms by which peace may be effected, will be transmitted by Dr. Gomez to Mexico City.

The first message from Dr. Gomez to Madero was sent to-day in the cipher of the revolutionists, and an answer is expected within twenty-fours hours. Assurances have been given by the various authorities concerned that the messages will have right of way over the Mexican Telegraph lines. To-day's message from Dr. Gomez was addressed to Francisco I. Madero, in care of a friend in the City of Chihuahua. Permission has been given to the agent of Dr. Gomez there to pass through all lines to execute his mission. Dr. Gomez would not reveal the contents of his messages, declaring only that several long telegrams would pass back and forth in the next few days, so that their position might be fully defined.

As Dr. Gomez has been unable to communicate to Francisco I. Madero the details of his meeting with Señor de la

FLIES FROM LONDON STRAIGHT TO PARIS

BREAKS DISTANCE RECORDS

Journey Occupies 236 Minutes—Aviator, a Newcomer, Wildly Acclaimed on Descending at Issy.

ISSY-LES-MOULINEAUX, April 12.—The aviator, Pierre Prier, arrived here at 5:33 o'clock this evening from London, having made the trip of about 290 miles in a monoplane without a stop.

Prier left Hendon, near London, on his flight to this suburb of Paris at 1:37 this afternoon. Above the English soil the aviator found fog and squalls, and, going higher and higher in an endeavor to obtain better weather, crossed the English Channel near Dover at a height of over 3,200 feet.

Leaving the channel behind him, Prier encountered fine weather until he reached Beauvais, fifty-four miles from the French capital, and from that city the rest of his voyage was made through a haze.

Prier was wildly acclaimed by a dense throng as he stepped out of his machine after alighting on the Issy aviation field.

The monoplane used by the aviator was the historic machine with which Alfred Le Blanc, the French aviator, won the $20,000 prize by finishing first in the great cross-country race of 488 miles on a circuit east of Paris last Summer.

LONDON, April 12.—Prier's time, as announced here, for the London-Paris flight, is 236 minutes, he having started at Hendon at 1:37 and finished at Issy at 5:33 P. M.

Including Pierre Prier, three Frenchmen, two Englishmen, and two Americans have crossed the English Channel in aeroplanes. Two—Prier and the late John B. Moisant—have flown the entire distance between Paris and London, while the remaining five flew from coast to coast. Lieut. Conneau, an American living in England, lost his life in his attempt. He crossed from Dover to Calais and was recrossing to the English coast, when he was lost in the fog. His body was recovered more than a month later.

Prier's flight places him, a newcomer, in the ranks of the world's foremost airmen. The best previous cross-country flight was made by Lieut. Camerman, who covered 147 miles in four hours and two minutes, last Dec. 22, in France. The record for an over-sea flight was established on March 5 of this year by Lieut. Bague, who flew over the Mediterranean from Antibes to the little island of Borgona, off the Italian coast. His flight measured 124.5 miles. J. A. D. McCurdy, on Jan. 31, flew, in a Curtiss biplane, from Key West, Fla., to within a few miles of Havana, traveling over 90 miles before he was compelled to descend.

Moisant, carrying a passenger, started from Paris Aug. 17, 1910, and reached Deal, about ten miles from Dover. By short stages, during which he was handicapped by bad weather and accidents, he reached London in twenty-one days from the start.

The first attempt to cross the Channel was made by Hubert Latham on July 20, 1909. He got half way over when his engine broke down. In his second attempt eight days later Latham got within two miles of Dover, when his engine again failed and he gave up further attempts.

Blériot started from Calais on July 25, five days after Latham's first effort. He landed safely at Dover, the trip occupying a little over an hour. Blériot's feat was heralded as the greatest in the history of aviation up to that time.

The second airman to cross the Channel was Comte Jacques de Lesseps, who competed in the Belmont Park international tournament last October. He started from Calais on May 21, 1910, and landed at Winston Court Farm, one mile inland from Dover, fifty minutes after he left the French shore.

Using a Wright biplane, the late Hon. Charles Steward Rolls made the first double flight across the Channel on June 2, 1910. He started from Dover, flying to Calais. After making a circuit of that town he returned to Dover without alighting.

Baron de Forest offered a $20,000 prize for the first flight by an English-built machine across the Channel. Lopwith won the prize last Dec. 19.

Special to The New York Times.

HEMPSTEAD, L. I., April 12.—A maid in the household of Jacob H. Roberts, a Brooklyn real estate man, whose home is about a mile and half from this town on the Lynbrook Road, aroused Mr. Roberts and his four daughters at 10:30 o'clock last night, telling Mr. Roberts that she had found a fire in the kitchen near the chimney. Mr. Roberts ran to the kitchen, but finding that the flames had got beyond his control shouted to his daughters and the maid to hurry from the house while he telephoned to the fire department here.

There is a rule in the fire department that the fire engine must not be taken from the village limits except on a third alarm. Mr. Roberts's home is just beyond the village limits, so the engine was left in the fire house. When the firemen reached the Roberts home it was a mass of flames, and two more alarms were sent in instantly, bringing the fire engine this time. By the time it reached the building, however, there was nothing left but a smoldering heap of burned timbers.

The fire was made the occasion of a nighttime picnic by dwellers for miles around. Every one who owned an automobile hurried to the scene and other folk came in carriages and afoot. Nearby neighbors helped Mr. Roberts save some of the furniture on the ground floor, but everything else in the house was lost.

Mr. Roberts and his family were taken in for the night by Mr. and Mrs. Theophilus Parsons.

TORNADOES KILL 23 IN WESTERN STATES

MAN BLOWN FROM ENGINE

Hurled Through the Cab Window—Woman Victim Carried Half a Mile—Fifty Others Injured.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, April 12.—Twenty-three persons were killed and more than fifty injured in tornadoes that swept through Kansas from the northern border to Big Heart, Okla., in the Osage Nation, this afternoon. Six towns were in the path of the storm and three were blown off the map.

The heaviest loss of life was at Big Heart, in the northern part of Oklahoma, on the Midland Valley Railroad. Eight persons are known to be dead and a score injured. Only six of the houses that sheltered the 400 population of Big Heart were left standing. The tornado, accompanied by a driving rain, struck at 4 o'clock and swept everything in its path. Houses were picked up from their foundations and shaken to pieces, and the occupants were whisked through the air.

Telegraph communication was cut off and a messenger went to Pawhuska for aid. Relief trains were started from Pawhuska and Avant. Automobiles with doctors and supplies also started for the stricken town.

At Mesker, Okla., four persons were killed and a score of houses were wrecked.

The town of Whiting, Kan., where the first tornado struck, was destroyed. Sixty houses were reduced to debris and thirty persons were injured.

One man and a child were killed in a tornado two miles south of Checotah and at Lawrence, Kan. Two people were killed, scores of houses destroyed and the streets piled high with debris.

At Hiawatha, Kan., a school was blown down and a boy named Pelton killed, and several buildings were struck by lightning.

Geraldine Meisenheimer, 10 years old, and a small child of Otis Mellott, were also killed near the same town. The Meisenheimer girl sought refuge, with three companions in a country schoolhouse, and the building was wrecked soon afterward. The dead girl's companions were injured. It is not known how the Mellott child met its death.

Mrs. David Shone, wife of a farmer living near Whiting, was swept from the steps of her home into a neighbor's yard half a mile away, and was picked up dead.

The storm traveled in a southwesterly direction, and in addition to Big Heart, where it ended, and at Whiting, the beginning, it touched Powhatan, Netawaka, and Manville, in Kansas.

Mrs. Ray Garnum was sitting on the porch of her home in Powhatan when the wind lifted the roof of the house from over her and tossed her into the yard. She suffered many cuts and bruises.

Another woman and child were reported to have been killed in Pawhuska, and many buildings were unroofed and shattered as they were torn from their foundations.

Eskridge is twenty-five miles south of Topeka, Kan. The storm struck there at 3 o'clock, and the new high school building was blown down and twenty students were injured. It is not believed any of the wounds will prove fatal.

Couriers brought reports from Netawaka, Kan., that several persons were hurt and the damage to property is heavy.

George M. Scott, an Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé engineer, was in Eskridge when the gale struck. He says fifteen persons were hurt. Benjamin Resch, his fireman, was blown through the window of his locomotive cab and across the street. He struck a building and was severely injured.

The St. Joseph & Grand Island Railroad station at Manville and two box cars were blown away. Four houses were wrecked and a child was killed, according to dispatches from St. Joseph, Mo.

It is thought that many more people were killed and injured than have been reported at this time.

Only one wire was left intact between Kansas City and Topeka and telegraphic communication between Kansas City and Oklahoma points was cut off.

In Kansas City the storm did little damage. A few horses were killed by lightning and some buildings struck. The rain in Kansas City lasted about half an hour and was very heavy, accompanied by some hail.

The weather observer at Sioux City, Iowa, reports a seventy-two-miles-an-hour gale, which damaged farmhouses and barns within a radius of twenty-five miles. The wind in St. Louis registered forty-five miles an hour and several pedestrians were hurt by falling signs.

UNIONIZE THE CAPITOL JOB.

Contract Taken Away from Man Who Employed Non-Union Plumbers.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 12.—The employment of non-union plumbers in connection with the work of repairing the Capitol, which was recently damaged by fire, has given some of the State officials no little trouble, but the matter was adjusted to-day, when the contractor surrendered his contract and union men were engaged.

The President of the Plumbers' Union called on Gov. Dix yesterday and complained that non-union men were at work. The Governor referred the matter to State Architect Ware, who had given John H. Moran a contract for repair work in the Assembly chamber. It was announced later that union men would be employed hereafter.

As there has been a strike in the plumbers' trade in this city since last Summer the announcement from the Capitol angered the master plumbers, and they sent a delegation to call on Supt. John Bowe of the Department of Public Buildings. The employing plumbers declared that the State had no right to dismiss workmen because they were not members of a union. It was finally agreed to pay Mr. Moran in full for the contract and get some one else to do the work.

To-day the State Architect received a protest from New York to the effect that non-union electrical workers were employed in rewiring the Capitol. On investigation it was found that the contractor, N. A. Cornell of New York, was employing men who were members of a union.

GREELY FOR CORONATION.

Leader of North Polar Expedition to Represent United States Army.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Major Gen. Adolphus W. Greely, retired, has been selected as representative of the United States Army on the American special embassy to the coronation of King Georve V. This appointment supersedes the original selection of Major Gen. Frederick Dent Grant, commanding the Department of the East, who on reconsideration has declined the honor.

Gen. Greely commanded an expedition to the north pole in the early eighties, and for years was Chief Signal Officer of the army.

CROKER BLAMES IRISHMEN.

Thinks They Are Ill-Advised in Incurring King George's Hostility.

DUBLIN, April 12.—In an interview on his return here Richard Croker, the ex-leader of Tammany, expressed the opinion that Irishmen were ill-advised in incurring the hostility of King George.

Mr. Croker said he had no ambition to witness the coronation, but would willingly attend if he could thereby advance home rule. This end, he thought, could best be obtained by appealing to England's sense of justice.

EXONERATES JUDGE WHITFORD

Colorado House Adopts Committee's Report Rejecting Labor Men's Charges.

DENVER, Col., April 12.—By a vote of 43 to 18, the House to-day adopted the majority report of the committee which investigated the charges against Judge Greely Whitford in impeachment proceedings brought against him by labor leaders. The report exonerates Judge Whitford.

The charges grew out of the commitment to jail for a year of a number of striking coal miners of Routt County for contempt of court in persisting in intimidating methods against strikebreakers.

WOMAN CHIEF OF POLICE.

Mrs. Wilson, New Mayor of Hunnewell, Kan., Offers the Place to Mrs. Osborne.

HUNNEWELL, Kan., April 12.—Mrs. Ella Wilson took her seat as Mayor and presided over the City Council for the first time last night. Mrs. Wilson said that she would appoint Mrs. Rosa Osborne, defeated candidate for Police Judge, to the office of Chief of Police.

Mrs. Osborne, it is understood, has agreed to accept that office provided she has an assistant.

CHICAGO'S SHARE OF FARES.

Has Received $6,109,845 from Street Railways in the Last Four Years.

CHICAGO, April 12.—The city of Chicago has received $6,109,845 from the street railways in the last four years, according to the report of Controller Wilson issued yesterday.

This sum represents 55 per cent. of the net earnings of all the surface lines in the city, and is paid to the city in consideration of a twenty-year franchise granted four years ago.

BUY LAND FOR GAME COVERT.

Wall Street Men Said to Have Acquired 275 Acres in Connecticut.

Special to The New York Times.

WINSTED, Conn., April 12.—The Hampden Forestry Company, said to be composed of Wall Street men, has purchased the Dietert and Weingart properties, comprising 275 acres, situated at the south end of Highland Lake, for a game preserve. A trout stream a mile long, running through the land, is to have a dam which will flood twenty acres.

The property about Highland Lake is one of the most popular Summer resorts in the Litchfield hills.

WOMAN KILLED IN BROADWAY

Homegoing Throngs See Her Crushed Under an Express Wagon.

Homegoing throngs from the office buildings of lower Broadway saw a woman run over and killed late yesterday afternoon at Broadway and Chambers Street. She was Mrs. Fannie Mindek of 17 West 111th Street. She was struck by an express wagon as she started across Chambers Street.

Policeman McArevey of the Traffic Squad picked her up and carried her into City Hall Park. Then he called a surgeon from the Hudson Street Hospital, but the woman was dead. She was identified by cards in her purse and later by a son-in-law.

It Makes 60 Carloads and Goes Out from Here in One Shipment.

Carpet enough to lay a width the entire length of the main line of the New York Central from New York to Buffalo, thence to Niagara Falls, and across the Niagara River into Canada goes out in one shipment from here to-day by a special train of sixty freight cars. It goes through from New York to San Francisco via the New York Central and Michigan Central Railroads and connections.

It is the product of the Alexander Smith & Sons' Carpet Works, Yonkers, and is said to be the largest and most valuable single shipment ever made in this or any other country. The weight of the carpet is 1,500,000 pounds, and it is valued at about $1,000,000.

To make this carpet required the labor of 8,000 workers for eight days. Railroad men have figured out that if it were piled up in rolls one on top of another over an area of 400 square feet it would overtop the Singer Building tower.

DOG BITES A LITTLE CHILD.

Attacks a Dozen Other Dogs in White Plains, and Schools Are Quarantined.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., April 12.—Because a dog supposed to be rabid ran through Hartsdale, and, in addition to lacerating the face of a three-year-old child, attacked at least a dozen dogs, E. J. Preston, Assistant State Commissioner of Agriculture, this afternoon quarantined School Districts 6, 7, and 8 of the town of Greenburgh.

It first was intended to quarantine all the dogs in White Plains. Commissioner Preston said to-night that he would not do so for a while.

The child victim of the dog was the 3-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Wallian of Hartsdale. She was walking with her mother when the dog jumped at her and bore her to the ground. Mrs. Wallian fought the dog and rescued the child after its left cheek had been cut and the eye nearly destroyed. Mrs. Wallian used her hatpins to such a good advantage that the dog fled. Later it was found dead in a barn.

EX.-GOV. GUILD NAMED ENVOY TO RUSSIA

TURKISH POST IMPORTANT

Rockhill Will Have More Diplomatic Scope in Developing American Interests Under Young Turks' Regime.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—At the White House this evening it was announced that William Woodville Rockhill, Ambassador to Russia, will succeed Oscar Straus at Constantinople and be succeeded at St. Petersburg by ex-Gov. Curtis Guild, Jr., of Massachusetts. On the surface Mr. Rockhill's transfer looks like a reduction in Ambassadorial rank; but as a matter of fact the possibilities in Turkey for developing American interests under the Young Turks makes the post much more important than that which Mr. Rockhill has held for two years in St. Petersburg, due to his great knowledge of Russia's relations in the Far East.

The announcement ends the expectation that Huntington Wilson, Assistant Secretary of State, would go to Constantinople. Mr. Rockhill for some time has been anxious to leave St. Petersburg, where the social obligations are onerous, while there is little scope for diplomatic achievement. The nominations will be sent to the Senate to-morrow.

Ex-Gov. Guild has been conspicuous in the political and military affairs of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts for the past fifteen years. He went to the National Republican Convention in 1896 as a delegate and was made Vice President of the convention. Later he was conspicuous on the stump for McKinley and Roosevelt, speaking through the East, South, and West. When the Spanish war broke out he was Brigadier General on the staff of Gov. Wolcott, but resigned to become a Lieutenant in the Sixth Massachusetts Regiment. He was rapidly promoted, and when the war closed was Lieutenant Colonel and Inspector General on the staff of Gen. Fitzhugh Lee of the Seventh Corps and had charge of the cleaning up of Havana Province after the war. He served as Lieutenant Governor of Massachusetts for three years and followed it with three terms as Governor in 1906, 1907, and 1908.

The new Ambassador comes of an old Massachusetts family, having been born in Boston 51 years ago, and has a string of degrees from universities in this country and Europe. He received the degree of A. B. "summa cum laude" from Harvard in 1881, and honorary degree of LL. D. from Holy Cross College in 1901, and of S. T. D. from the University of Geneva in 1909.

Under President Roosevelt he declined a colonial commissionership and also an Assistant Postmaster Generalship. At the Republican National Convention of 1908 he received 75 votes for the Vice Presidential nomination. Ex-Gov. Guild is an intimate personal friend of President Taft. He was appointed by the President as Special Ambassador to Mexico at the time of the centennial celebration of the foundation of that republic.

Mr. Rockhill has had a long diplomatic career. He was born in Philadelphia in 1854, where his family is well known. He was graduated from the famous French Military School of St. Cyr, and since 1884 has held various diplomatic posts. He began as Second Secretary of the American Legation in Peking, and two years later was Chargé d'Affaires ad interim at Seoul.

Mr. Rockhill was a member of two scientific expeditions sent to China and Tibet under the auspices of the Smithsonian Institution. In 1893 he was Chief Clerk of the State Department, and later First Assistant Secretary of State. Then he became Minister to Greece and the Balkan States, and left the service temporarily as Director of the Bureau of Pan-American Republics, from which post he went to St. Petersburg in 1909. He gained added insight into Chinese affairs after his mission to Peking in 1900 for the adjustment of the Boxer troubles.

NEW YORKER A SUICIDE.

H. D. McCurdy, Insurance Agent, Shoots Himself in Chicago Hotel.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 12.—H. D. McCurdy, a life insurance man of New York, was found dying in his room at the La Salle Hotel this evening as the result of a pistol wound self-inflicted. He died shortly after his admittance to the Practitioners' Hospital.

McCurdy, who was about 28 years old, registered at the La Salle this morning as coming from New York. He intimated that he was connected with the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company of Milwaukee. He stayed around the hotel during the greater part of the afternoon listening to the orchestra, and then went to his room. Shortly before 6 o'clock other guests of the hotel were alarmed by a pistol shot.

The manager broke in the door of McCurdy's room and found him lying on the floor with a bullet wound in his head, holding a new automatic magazine revolver, apparently recently purchased. Near him on the floor was a newly opened box of cartridges. On the dresser was found a penciled note requesting that J. F. Gray of Williams, Gray & Co., paper mill supplies, of this city be notified.

The police tried to find Mr. Gray, but were unsuccessful. Four stamped letters were also found, two addressed to people in Chicago, one to the President of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company of Milwaukee and one to John J. Bristol of New York.

John I. D. Bristol is manager of the New York City agencies of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company, with offices in the Metropolitan Life Insurance Building. At his home, 45 West Seventy-fourth Street, it was stated last night that he was out of town. No one in the house had ever heard of Mr. McCurdy.

Pledge Delegates to Taft.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 12.—The South Carolina Republican Executive Committee at Columbia to-day passed resolutions indorsing President Taft and pledging the State's eight delegates to his renomination. State Chairman Blalock and other officers of the committee telegraphed this action to the White House.

HERESY CHARGES FOR DR. W. A. BROWN

Union Theological Seminary Professor Is Accused by the Rev. Dr. McEwan of Pittsburg.

HIS WRITINGS IN QUESTION

Accuser Confuses His Identity in One Case with President Brown of the Seminary.

Charges of heresy have been brought against the Rev. Dr. William Adams Brown, Roosevelt Professor of Systematic Theology at the Union Theological Seminary, by the Rev. Dr. W. L. McEwan of Pittsburg. Dr. McEwan asserts that the teachings of Dr. Brown are not in accordance with those of the Church, and he has demanded of the Pittsburg Presbytery that Dr. Brown be brought before the General Assembly of the Church next month at Atlantic City. His objections are especially directed against the opinions expressed by Dr. Brown in The Harvard Theological Review of January and in The New York Observer of November.

Presbyterians here pointed out yesterday that the latter article was not written by Dr. William Brown but by the Rev. Dr. Francis Brown, President of the Union Theological Seminary. Dr. Francis Brown said last night he had written the article in The Observer and laughingly remarked that charges had not been preferred against him. Dr. William Brown refused to discuss the charges.

"I have received no official notice of charges of heresy having been preferred against me by Dr. McEwan," he said, "and considering the fact that according to the press reports from Pittsburg he has confused me with another distinguished theologian I shall take no notice of them. I think that they will probably be referred to a committee and that will be the end of them."

The article by Dr. Brown in the Harvard Theological Review was entitled "The Old Theology and the New." Presbyterians are divided as to whether the article contains anything that may be construed as heretical. By many it is regarded as a harmless and able exposition of theology old and new, but by others as an argument for a more liberal interpretation of the teachings of the Church, and that as such it is against the creed.

"Dr. Brown," said a member of the church, "is a type of liberal that is characteristic of the Union Theological Seminary. I can best illustrate what I mean by a liberal in the Presbyterian Church by taking as an example the Episcopal Church. In the latter there are several types of churchmanship. There is the high church man, the broad churchman, and the low churchman. They are all of them Episcopalians, yet they all have their own ideas of the manner in which their religious views should find expression.

"The liberals in the Presbyterian Church seek to interpret our creed in a manner not prescribed by the ancient teachings of the Church. They would have a broader religion, a more elastic creed, and, like the Episcopalians, we would soon have Roman Catholic Presbyterians and Presbyterians.

Dr. Brown's article in The Review begins thus: "By the old theology we mean the type of theology, which, whatever its date, ignores the modern scientific movement, and is unaffected in method by the results of the movement. By the new theology, conversely, we mean the type of theology whose method is determined by the modern scientific movement, and which is hospitable to its results by the modern scientific movement of thought, whose chief marks on the outward side are the acceptance of development as the law of the physical universe, and on the inward side the contribution of mind to the contribution of matter."

This passage is regarded by many Presbyterians as a plea for a broader theology.

A passage in the article of Dr. Francis Brown which has excited comment suggests changes in the system of worship in the Church.

Professors of the Union Theological Seminary have been tried on heresy charges before. The Rev. Dr. Charles A. Briggs was tried and found guilty in 1893. Charges were preferred against the Rev. Dr. Arthur C. McGiffert in 1896, but he withdrew from the Church and the charges were dropped.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, April 12.—This bedrock of Presbyterianism has been stirred by the charges against the Rev. Dr. William Adams Brown of Union Theological Seminary, New York. The fact that the Rev. Dr. W. L. McEwan, the leading Presbyterian in the country, made the charges, gives them weight. Dr. McEwan, speaking of the charges made against Dr. Brown, said these related to his writings more than to any of his utterances. Dr. McEwan said to-day that he had made the charges against Dr. Brown after deliberate thought.

Had Dr. Brown not been a member of the faculty of the leading seminary of the Church, he would not have paid so much attention to his writings. But as he was in a position to expound his theories to the students, who are to be sent out to preach the Gospel in the future, it made a difference. Dr. McEwan said that while he had led the attack on Dr. Brown in the local Presbytery, he was also ready to face the General Assembly, which body he had asked to take cognizance of Dr. Brown's teaching. Dr. Brown is not without his defenders here.

PREUSSEN'S OWNERS WIN.

English Company Must Pay for Damages Due to Collision.

LONDON, April 12.—The suit brought by the owners of the German five-masted ship Preussen against the London, Brighton & South Coast Railway Company, the owners of the Channel steamer Brighton, was decided by the Admiralty Court to-day in favor of the owners of the Preussen.

The Preussen, the largest sailing ship in the world, went on the rocks at the South Foreland last November after a collision with the Brighton.

The court found that the loss of the Preussen was due to the faulty navigation of the Brighton, and the Channel steamer's owners will be assessed the amount of the damages suffered by the Preussen.

MERCY FOR STINIE MORRISON.

Man Found Guilty of Clapham Common Murder Not to be Executed.

LONDON, April 12.—The sentence of death imposed on March 15 on Stinie Morrison, who, after a sensational trial, was found guilty of the murder of Joseph Beron, was commuted to-day to penal servitude for life.

The mutilated body of Beron was found on Clapham Common early in January. The police theory was that the victim was a member of the Houndsditch Anarchist burglar gang, and that he had been killed by his associates for treachery. The evidence at the trial, which occupied nine days, was mainly circumstantial.

A petition for the reprieve of Morrison was signed by 70,000 persons.

FIND FASCINATES KAISER.

Forgets His Lunch in Watching Excavation of Greek Bas-Reliefs.

CORFU, April 12.—The German Emperor, who is now residing at his villa here, was informed to-day of the discovery near the Monastery of St. Theodore of bas-reliefs of the sixth century before Christ. The find was made by workmen engaged in excavations.

The Emperor spent the day watching the work, and became so interested that he remained on the scene of the operations without lunching.

Before he left he presented to the workmen a considerable sum of money.

RUSSIA AFRAID OF TURKEY.

To Spend $75,000,000 on Warships and Naval Works on Black Sea.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 12.—The Budget Committee of the Duma to-day approved the grant of $75,000,000 for the construction of warships and naval works on the Black Sea.

The expenditure is justified on the ground that it is necessary to increase the southern defenses owing to Turkey's activity, and especially because of her recent orders for Dreadnoughts.

The building programme will extend over a number of years, but the Ministry of Marine insisted upon an immediate allotment, so that the work may begin at once.

FRENCH OFFICIAL ACCUSED.

Chief of Foreign Office Department Charged with Embezzlement.

PARIS, April 12.—Frantz Hamon, chief of the Accounting Department of the Foreign Office, was arrested to-day.

He is charged with serious irregularities in the accounts of his department and with the embezzlement of funds.

THE PASTOR'S COAT STOLEN.

Best Man's Hat Also Gone After Miss Cunningham Becomes Mrs. McAlister.

While the Rev. John Lyon Caughey, pastor of the Harlem Presbyterian Church, was marrying Frank McAllister of 245 West 116th Street to Miss Irene Cunningham of Denver, Col., yesterday in his church at Mount Morris Park West and 122d Street, a thief stole his overcoat and the silk hat of John Konieczny, the best man.

The Rev. Mr. Caughey had arranged to give a dramatic touch to the ceremony by having the lights turned low, the sexton being ordered to turn them on full as he pronounced the couple man and wife. As he said the word and the lights flashed on the telephone bell called the pastor to the parish house, 2 West 122d Street, where the bridal party had left their wraps, and a voice over the telephone added:

"I am David McAllister, Treasurer of the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity. I hear you are going to marry my son. Kindly hold the ceremony till I can arrive. I want to be present."

Mr. Caughey told him he was too late. As he hung up the receiver he found Mr. Konieczny looking about for his missing hat. The pastor joined the search, only to find that his new overcoat was gone. Then Mr. and Mrs. McAllister, the pastor, and the best man went to the East 126th Street Station to notify the police. Detectives Hart and Conroy were assigned on the case.

WE ELOPED, SAYS J. W. CREVELING

RELATED TO A BARONET

And Has Other Relatives Known to Fame—He's Athletic Also and They'll Live in Bliss in the Bronx.

"Tell the editor," said the blonde-haired young man wearing a cane and a budding blonde moustache, to the office boy at THE TIMES's gate quite early yesterday morning, "that I have important news for him. I want to announce my elopement and marriage in the paper."

The elevator man added the information that the blonde-haired young man had been around very much earlier asking for the proprietor, amusing himself meanwhile by observing the accelerating speed of the indicator on the taxicab which waited for him. A reporter sought the details of the self-confessed elopement.

"I am J. Waterlow Creveling," began the blonde young man, "a relative of the late Sir Sidney Waterlow, formerly Lord Mayor of London, son of the late Frank B. Creveling, grandson of the late James R. Waterlow, a real estate operator of Fiftieth Street and Sixth Avenue; also a grandson of Mrs. E. W. McMann of the Sherman Square Hotel, if you want to look her up; also the son of Mrs. Emily W. Wilson, my mother, whose name figured prominently in the papers in connection with the litigation over the Waterlow estate, and also a descendant of the Le Fever family—spelled with an 'e' and not an 'e,' half English, half French, you know—whom everybody knows as the great gun inventors of France. This is my picture."

He pulled from his overcoat pocket an indisputable likeness. "That proves that I am J. Waterlow Creveling.

"I think you had better cable the story which I am about to tell you to London," he continued, "and as I formerly lived in Pelham Manor, Mount Vernon, and New Rochelle, the story which I will tell you will, no doubt, travel along the line, won't it?"

The reporter assured him that any elopement story of that kind certainly would, and then the blonde young man continued:

"I am 23 years old. On March 26 I eloped with Amelia Louise Schaefer, whom I and all her personal friends call 'Billy.' She is the daughter of Andreas F. Schaefer, proprietor of a hotel in Union Square—the Grand Union Hotel, that's it."

"Isn't it the Union Square Hotel?" the reporter asked.

"Well, may be that's it. Anyway, it's on Union Square. You know I don't know very much about my father-in-law yet. It's 'Billy' who has me interested. And after all this excitement is over, Billy and I are going to live in the Hunts Point Apartments in the Bronx. Billy, just like me, is an athlete. Every morning we will take long walks, and when the weather gets warmer we intend to swim around Hunts Point every morning before breakfast. There's nothing like exercise for real health, is there?"

"How old is the bride?" the reporter asked.

"Oh, don't ask me that. I really don't know myself. What I do know is that she was educated abroad and in the Sacred Heart Convent. Her father, you know, is a member of a lot of fashionable clubs in this city, and if you want the list of them I can easily get them for you. I myself hold a responsible position with the Schollkopf, Hartford & Hanna Company of 55 Church Street. All I ask is that you don't bother my employers about this elopement. And, if you please, don't bother my relatives more than is just absolutely necessary."

"But you haven't told why you eloped. Didn't your father and mother-in-law like you?"

"Oh, yes, they liked me all right, and had no objection, except that they wanted Billy and me to get married in a church, and we talked that over, but thought it would make too much fuss. So we just went off to Stamford and got married."

"Went by automobile?"

"No, in the train. But we got a taxicab when we got there and saw quite a little of the town in that way."

Then, after being assured that the news would certainly be available when printed for London and that the residents of Pelham Manor, Mount Vernon, and New Rochelle would be able to read all about it, the blonde young man shook hands all around and bade the office force a fond farewell, adding that he was on his way to spread the news along Newspaper Row and he wished everybody in this wide world could he as happy as he.

Inquiry among the specified relatives of J. Waterlow Creveling revealed that they lived at the places specified in the enthusiastic account rendered by the happy bridegroom, but none of them was at home. No one else could be found who had ever heard of J. Waterlow Creveling, late of the British Empire, and Pelham Manor, Mount Vernon, and New Rochelle, but now with "Billy" at the Hunt's Point Apartments, the Bronx.

Mr. Schaefer, proprietor of the Union Square Hotel, said last night that he had learned yesterday that his daughter had been married to young Mr. Creveling and he not only had no objection to the match but he was pleased to hear the news. The young couple met a year or so ago. They are to sail for Europe in May 1, Mr. Schaefer said, for a honeymoon abroad.

BESSEMER'S EYE ON 1912.

Steel City Offers Democracy a Tented City and Southern Barbecue.

Special to The New York Times.

BESSEMER, Ala., April 12.—Bessemer wants the National Democratic Convention. The invitation sent to the National Democratic Executive Committee emphasizes the necessity for Jeffersonian simplicity, and offers to erect a tented city for the comfort of delegates and a colossal tent for the convention.

The letter was delivered to-day, the twenty-fourth anniversary of the steel city, to Chairman Norman E. Mack, at Buffalo, N. Y. Among the tempting offers made to the Democracy are the following:

"The delegates will be fed on the good things of life, Southern barbecue, fried chicken, Alabama ham, Bessemer District beef, Jefferson County lamb, roasting ears, water-ground corn bread, sweet potatoes, Old Mammy's biscuits, cakes and pies, and all the good things of three square meals a day to be found only in Dixie land.

It is urged that the delegates can here see the great steel mills, colossal iron furnaces which supply material for the Nation's railroads, the coal mines that furnish the fuel, and the finest timber groves and mountains in the country. The letter continues:

It is the home district of the Hon. Oscar W. Underwood, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives, second in rank to the Speaker; the home State of Henry D. Clayton, Chairman of the Democratic caucus of the House; United States Senators Joseph F. Johnston and John H. Bankhead, Congressmen George W. Taylor, J. Thomas Heflin, Richmond P. Hobson, John L. Burnett, William Richardson, and others.

The concluding paragraphs relate to the railroad facilities, Bessemer's geographical location, and concludes with the opinion that Bessemer is the logical place for the convention "in the open country where true Democracy exists in the freedom of the groves where nature holds sway, among the pines, oaks, and magnolios."

STABS ROBBER WITH HATPIN.

Milliner Jabs Him and Puts Him to Flight as "Any Girl Would Do."

ELIZABETHTOWN, N. J., April 12.—Miss Rose Bauch, a New York milliner, got the better of a highwayman to-day. She was returning to her home in Fairtoute Avenue, Roselle Park, when she was attacked and beaten. She freed herself from her assailant, pulled out a hatpin, and jabbed him everal times. He fled. She was modest to-day when telling of her action, declaring that "aany girl would do it."

BURY SLAIN STATION AGENT.

More Than a Thousand Attend Funeral of Conklin, Who Was Murdered.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, April 12.—While the funeral of Charles H. Conklin, the murdered station agent at Croton Lake, who was shot to death on Saturday evening while defending the contents of his office, was being held here to-day George Green, alias Williams, the wounded negro who was found near the station, identified William Amos, a negro suspect held in the White Plains Jail, as one of two negroes who accompanied him to the station on the night of the murder. Amos was also identified as one of two negroes who robbed Tony Quick, a Russian employed at the Glendon Camp, of $33 at the point of a pistol near Yorktown Heights last Thursday.

More than a thousand persons followed the body of the station agent to the grave. The New York Central Railroad, Western Union Telegraph Company, and American Express Company were represented. In the long procession were citizens from Millwood, Kitchawan, Yorktown Heights, and other stations on the Harlem Division. It took two hours and a half for the funeral to reach White Plains from Croton Lake.

According to the latest story told by Green, the wounded negro in the hospital wing of the White Plains jail, two negroes, one of whom was Amos, met him north of Croton Lake station late Saturday afternoon and told him that they proposed to borrow some money from Station Agent Conklin. He went with them, he said, but remained outside the station. But for this variance he repeated his previous story that he was wounded by a stray bullet in the fight in which Conklin was killed.

Sheriff Scherp of Westchester County brought three new suspects here to-day, but held them merely as witnesses.

Barra, Minister of Foreign Affairs here on Sunday, March 26 last, it is believed that Dr. Gomez took occasion to-day to advise his chief of what happened at that informal conference.

Dr. Gomez declined to state how permission for communication through the Federal lines had been secured, declaring merely that it had been effected through a friend.

MADERO'S CAMP, West of Bustillos, Mexico, April 11, Via Laredo, Texas.—Peace overtures, for the first time since the Mexican insurrection began, were laid before Francisco I. Madero, the insurrecto leader, at his camp west of Bustillos hacienda to-day. The preliminaries are of an unofficial character, but are looked upon as possibly opening a way for more direct negotiations between Señor Madero and Mexico City.

Federico Moyo, a merchant, went to Mexico City, where, he says, he held a conference with Government officials relative to peace. Minister Limantour is said to have been one of those consulted. Señor Moyo was told that the Government had already made great concessions, and it was hinted that even greater changes pertaining to the Presidency and Vice Presidency were discussed.

Hurrying to Chihuahua, Señor Moyo was joined by Dr. J. R. Heyffert, and to-day they drove in an automobile to Madero's camp. Meantime the telegraph wires in Chihuahua were hooked up with those in the field controlled by Madero, and messages were sent advising the insurrectos' leader of the coming of the messengers. Señor Madero halted in his march to Casas Grandes region, and with a force of men returned to a point near Bustillos. The meeting took place as Madero sat surrounded by his staff.

Asked on what terms he would conclude peace, Señor Madero said he only could repeat the demands already made.

Señor Madero was told the war was causing great hardships, that it was injuring industry and imposing intense suffering, not only to those fighting, but on non-combatants. He replied he was fully aware of this condition, and was as anxious for peace as anybody, but he could see no way to peace until his cause triumphed, and in the end he felt the insurrection would prove a great blessing. He then inquired as to the news from Mexico City.

A conference was then held, with the statement that possibly information might be given out later.

WIRELESS GUARDS BORDER.

Four Stations Connect Patrols and Carry Reports to Headquarters.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, April 12.—The Mexican border east of Eagle Pass, Texas, is now in constant touch with division headquarters here by wireless telegraphy. Major George O. Squier, commanding the Signal Corps detachments on duty here and along the border, made this announcement this afternoon. Four Signal Corps wireless stations are now in operation on the border, with Eagle Pass as the wireless clearing office through which the various border patrols report to division headquarters and the headquarters of the Department of Texas here in San Antonio.

The three sub stations are known as A, B, and C, and each of them reports officially three times each day to Eagle Pass, which in turn reports to the commanding officers here in San Antonio. Major Squier said that the sub-stations are located in the most desolate parts of the border line, seven men of the Signal Corps being on duty at each sub-station.

The border patrol, made up mostly of troopers of the Eleventh Cavalry and soldiers of the Twenty-third Infantry, patrol every inch of the territory east of Eagle Pass twice each day, the patrols being so arranged that the men are able to report the result of the patrol at least three times each day.

"The system is working perfectly," Major Squier said this afternoon, "and not only is the patrol being directed by wireless but all the administration work on that part of the border is carried on in the same way.

The gist of the reports received to-day was: "All quiet along the border."

The tests of the Wright and Curtiss aeroplanes to determine the military value of these machines are scheduled to begin to-morrow. Phil Parmalee, who will direct the testing of the Wright machine, and Eugene Ely, who will act in a similar capacity for Glenn H. Curtiss, are both in San Antonio to-night. Both machines are now completely assembled, and if the weather conditions are favorable the first tryouts will be to-morrow morning.

It was also announced this afternoon at the McCormick-Roome hangar that the huge umbrella-shaped aeroplane, invented by Mr. Roome, is ready for its first trial, and that, too, is scheduled for some time to-morrow. With its 750 square feet of plane service and its big centre mast, this giant of the air is easily the most unusual looking flying machine since aviation became a fact. The McCormick-Roome machine has never left the ground, and in event the engine, which is a 4 cylinder arrangement of American design, fails to get the machine off the ground, a second attempt will be made with a Gnome engine, which is used in the Blériot monoplane. A Gnome engine for the purpose arrived from France a few days ago.

Gen. Carter, the division commander, said this afternoon that he would parade the entire division of troops through the streets of San Antonio next Tuesday afternoon. Next week is carnival week in San Antonio, and the parade is given as a compliment to the citizens of the city for the generous welcome that has been extended the officers and men of the division.

The Maderos are out with another statement this afternoon, in which it is again stated that Francisco I. Madero, Sr., and his son Alfonso will leave for Chihuahua to consult with Francisco I. Madero, Jr., within the next two days. They say they will travel on one of the regular trains of the National Railway of Mexico system.

REBELS BEFORE CANANEA.

Threaten Town Held by 1,100 Mexican Federals with Machine Guns.

AGUA PRIETA, Mexico, April 12—(Via Douglas, Ariz.)—The combined force of rebels under Juan Cabral, Antonio Garcia, and Ricardo Romero, appeared suddenly to-day before Canapea, in Sonora, not far from the Arizona border. Three bridges between Naco and Cananea on the railroad were burned and wires were cut. All communication was thus suspended. No trains arrived in Naco today.

The Federal force of 1,100 men, including 200 cavalry, under command of Medja Barron and other leaders, which went out from Cananea a few days ago, entered Arizpe to find the rebels gone.

All the Federal troops are now in Cananea. In the heart of the town is a rising mesa called Swansea Hill. This has been fortified with high, strong rock walls on its crest. No person is permitted to approach this mesa, and it is thought to be mined. One machine gun is placed on the east mesa between the two largest hotels, one on the south mesa and another on the west slope beyond the smelter.

Late to-day the rebels retired to the south of Cananea. This is taken to mean that an immediate attempt will be made to capture the city.

REBEL DASH TO GET ARMS.

Drew Fire of Zacatecas Garrison and Stole Their Munitions by Trick.

MEXICO CITY, April 12.—Just why Luis Mona made a spectacular attack on Zacatecas Sunday and then abandoned the fight without having been placed at any great disadvantage, was explained by an unofficial report here to-day. Mona wanted a small consignment of arms and ammunition which had been delivered at Zacatecas for the federals. He got it. After sending a message to the garrison demanding the surrender of the city, and after having seen the messenger clamber back up the long trail to the top of the hill, shot at repeatedly by the federals, Mona himself led a hundred of his 500 men down into the city. The force on the hill was instructed to keep drawing the fire of the garrison, while he and his hundred men went after the arms and ammunition.

What has been described as an "attack" by this little detachment, was really a mad dash across the town to the station where the guns and cratridges were. Mona's men lost as little time as possible in fighting. It cost them a few men, but they succeeded in getting the guns and ammunition, and after making a detour back to La Bufa, the hill, where the remaining 400 were dutifully sustaining the fire, the order was given to cease firing at about 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

Resting until about 2 o'clock in the morning the rebels continued their march northward.

SEEKS AMERICAN CAPTIVES.

American Cousul on Way to Investigate Trouble at Alamo.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—With the American Consul at Ensenada, Mexico, on his way to Alamo to investigate personally the plight of the American women and children held prisoners by insurgents at that point, the State Department is awaiting the result of his inquiry before taking any further action in the matter. The Consular advices so far received indicate that the Americans are not in danger.

Lee Hudspeth to-day telegraphed the State Department from Douglas, Ariz., that all his saddle horses had been stolen by Mexican revolutionists. The American Consul at Agua Prieta, Mexico, across the line from Douglas, has been instructed to investigate.

Wine presses and wine cellars in several towns in this district have been demolished, and hundreds of thousands of bottles of champagne have been destroyed.

At Damery, six wine houses were wrecked, and the streets are so littered with broken bottles and a mixture of mud and wine that traffic has been impeded.

At Venteuil the rioters destroyed several large wine presses, and the troops were forced to charge with fixed bayonets before the mob could be dispersed.

DAMERY, April 12.—Damery to-day is a picture of desolation. The streets are literally running with a dark mass of champagne mixed with mud.

Within a stone's throw of the red banner floating over the City Hall stand the ruins of six houses of wine merchants, which were practically destroyed by the mob last night.

The riots were continued to-day by the excited populace. Wine cellars are being destroyed, and the disorder is spreading in spite of the presence of troops called out to preserve order.

Seven thousand wine growers left here this morning, marching on the Epernay, four miles distant, to destroy the wine cellars there.

The manifestants were admirably organized and were aroused to a high pitch of fervor in the justice of their cause. During the progress of the advance they sang revolutionary hymns and waved red flags. This they did to disown the Government, which, they affirm, has abandoned them to ruin. They declare that the Government acted as a result of the steps taken by the makers of inferior grades of wine.

The column had reached the town of Ay at noon. Co-operating with another band which had reached Ay from a different direction, the rioters proceeded to Venteuil, where they destroyed the huge wine presses. Troops, which had hurriedly been dispatched to Venteuil, charged and dispersed the mob, but not until the manifestants had accomplished their purpose.

The Attorney General went to Venteuil by automobile to-day with the object of investigating the situation, but was unable to advance through the streets because they were piled high with broken champagne bottles.

PARIS, April 12.—The storm raised by the vote in the Senate yesterday reopening the delimitation question with reference to the champagne district shows no signs of abating. On the contrary, there seems a probability of the disturbances spreading to the Bordeaux wine region.

Serious agitation has already begun in the Charente, Dordogne, and Lot et Garonne Departments, whose situation with respect to Gironde corresponds to that of Aube to Marne, and the President of the United Unions of the Gironde Wine Growers declared to-day that the suppression of the territorial delimitations in the Bordeaux region would be followed by the gravest consequences.

The latest dispatches from the champagne district describe the situation as greatly aggravated to-night. Mobs continue to burn and ravage the property of unpopular merchants, whom they accuse of importing grapes from Aube and other departments, from which they manufacture a wine designated as "Marne" champagne.

The authorities are rushing reinforcements of troops to the affected centres, but the movement of the wine growers has been so skillfully organized that the destruction has been done and the rioters have gone before the troops reach the scene.

The champagne question formed the subject of a debate in the Chamber of Deputies to-day, and after listening to a statement by Premier Monis, the Chamber voted confidence in the Government practically unanimously.

The Senate's resolution is not legally effective. The Premier maintained his decision to refer the matter of the modification of the delimitation law to the Council of State, France's highest administrative court, which, he said, might be trusted to pronounce on this grave question with entire impartiality and independence of judgment.

The Cabinet met late to-night and decided to place at the disposal of the Prefect of Marne all the troops that he needs. He has at present eight regiments of cavalry and three of infantry, and orders have been sent to four more regiments of cavalry and one of infantry to proceed at once to Epernay.

WE SAVE THE CONSUMER MONEY, GIVE A BETTER LIGHT, AND MAKE A LARGE PROFIT DOING IT.

The average profit on Rector Lights is unusually large. In fact, so large that we would not care to make a statement in figures without an opportunity to set forth in detail the facts in relation to this business which make possible this unusual profit.

The RECTOR GAS LIGHTING COMPANY has an established, growing business. The character of the concerns named above, who vouch for the superiority of the RECTOR LIGHTS, is sufficient guarantee as to the safety and profitableness of an investment in our stock.

John S. Gregory, in an article in the April Munsey's Magazine, states: "The ideal investment bond is that of a corporation producing an article that is in constant demand. For instance, the country must have steel for building, and sugar and flour for food. Corporations producing these staple things are sure to have a market. Even if panic or depression should come, there will still be a demand, even if it is slightly restricted."

The preferred stock of the RECTOR GAS LIGHTING COMPANY meets these ideal conditions. Everybody must have light all the time. The market is established. Over 8,000,000 various styles of gas lights are sold each year. Certainly the RECTOR LIGHT, giving greater efficiency at less cost, will surely secure a fair percentage of this business. In fact, the business is growing faster than our ability to take care of it. That is why you have the opportunity to secure stock on an unusually favorable basis.

HUNDREDS IN SEARCH FOR MISSING WOMAN

VICTIM OF NEURASTHENIA

Former Bryn Mawr Student Wandered from Home Tuesday Night—Mother Asks Police for Bloodhounds.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, April 12.—Miss Lydia Mason, daughter of the late Joseph Mason, who was a prominent lawyer of this city, wandered from her home at Leopard, Chester County, last evening, and, notwithstanding the efforts of hundreds of men of the surrounding countryside and troopers of the State Police, had not been found up to a late hour to-night.

Miss Mason is past 30 years of age, and is said to have been suffering for the last twelve years from neurasthenia, and that at times she was not accountable for her actions. She has been under the care of a physician for years, and until last January was watched by a trained nurse. She is of medium height and weight and of dark complexion, with hair cut short. When last seen she was wearing a plain black dress, but no coat or hat.

Mrs. Mason, her mother, and another daughter, Mary, have been driving in an automobile up and down the many roads and lanes of Chester and Montgomery Counties, in search of the missing woman. Although distracted with grief, she insisted upon keeping on the road all through the night and until daylight this morning. The house is surrounded by large grounds, and from the porch the twinkle of the many torches of the hunters could be seen throughout the night. Shortly before midnight Mrs. Mason telephoned to the police of this city, asking their aid and that they employ bloodhounds to trail her lost daughter.

Searching parties of farmers and their helpers were divided into small posses under the leadership of State troopers, and each allotted to a different district. Within two hours after her disappearance hundreds of men were out searching the fields, roads, and creeks of the two counties.

The case is one of the most peculiar ever brought before the State police. If Miss Mason had fallen into one of the creeks her body would have come to the surface, and it seems impossible for her to have got far on the roads without being seen.

Miss Mason was a student at Bryn Mawr College at the age of seventeen, when she was first affected by the disease, which is said to have weakened her mind. Her sister, Miss Mary Mason, is a student at the University of Pennsylvania, and a brother, Joseph Mason, is a prominent business man of this city. The family is well-known in social circles here.

FREE LIST BILL IN; RECIPROCITY ALSO

Underwood Introduces Them and Sets Debate on Canadian Measure for To-morrow.

EXPECTS FARMERS' APPROVAL

Duty Removed from About Everything They Use—To Consider Popular Elections Amendment To-day.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The grandmothers of the House to-day, individually and collectively, were effective in obtaining an adjournment within twenty-nine minutes after the body was called to order, and the 391 members, including Speaker Champ Clark, were speedily headed for the American League Park, where President Taft was to start the game with the fastest throw ever seen on the diamond.

In the short time the House was in session, Mr. Underwood, the majority leader, introduced the farmers' free list, which received the approval of the Democratic caucus last night, and the Canadian Reciprocity Agreement bill. The latter, as brought in, is identical with the McCall bill which passed the House last session and failed of passage in the Senate owing to the opposition of the lumber interests and the objections of the insurgent Senators on the ground that the farmers of the country had not received sufficient concessions.

The third section of the bill is an addition to the McCall bill, and it sanctions further negotiations with Canada by the President to obtain additional trade advantages for the two countries.

The first bill introduced by Mr. Underwood is generally called the free list bill and is an omnibus measure to meet the demands of the various sections of the country where the sentiment is strong against the Canadian reciprocity bill because it omits from its provisions many articles that enter into general consumption. This free list bill, it is believed by the Democratic leaders and by the progressives, will satisfy the insurgents who refused last session to support the reciprocity bill.

Articles on the Free List.

The list of articles to be placed on the free list as set forth in the bill brought in by Mr. Underwood is as follows:

Plows, tooth and disk harrows, headers, harvesters, reapers, agricultural drills and planters, mowers, horse rakes, cultivators, thrashing machines and cotton gins, farm wagons and farm carts, and all other agricultural implements of any kind and description, whether specifically mentioned herin or not, whether or in whole or in parts, including repair parts.

Bagging for cotton, gunny cloth and all similar fabrics, materials, or coverings suitable for covering and baling cotton, composed in whole or in part of jute, jute butts, hemp, flax, selg, Russia seg, New Zealand tow, Norwegian tow, aloe, mill waste, cotton tares, or any other materials or fibre suitable for covering cotton, and burlaps and bags or sacks composed wholly or in part of jute or burlaps or other material suitable for bagging or sacking agricultural products.

Hoop or band iron, hoop or band steel, cut to lengths, punched or not punched, or wholly or partly manufactured into hoops or ties, coated or not coated with paint or any other preparation, with or without buckles or fastenings for baling cotton or any other commodity, and wire for baling hay, straw, and other agricultural products.

Grain, buff, split, rough and sole leather band, bend, or belting leather, boots and shoes made wholly or in chief value of leather made from cattle hides and cattle skins of whatever weight, of cattle of the bovine species, including calf skins, and harness, saddles, and saddlery, in sets or in parts, finished or unfinished, composed wholly or in chief value of leather; and leather cut into shoe uppers or vamps or other forms, suitable for conversion into manufactured articles.

No Duty on Wire, Either.

Barbed fence wire, wire rods, wire strands or wire rope, wire woven or manufactured for wire fencing, and other kinds of wire suitable for fencing, including wire staples.

Beef, veal, mutton, lamb, pork, and meats of all kinds, fresh, salted, pickled, dried, smoked, dressed or undressed, prepared or preserved in any manner; bacon, hams, shoulders, lard, lard compounds, and lard substitutes; and sausages and sausage meats.

Buckwheat flour, corn meal, wheat, flour, and semolina, rye flour, bran, middlings and other offals of grain, oatmeal and rolled oats, and all prepared cereal foods and biscuits, bread, wafers, and similar articles not sweetened.

Timber, hewed, sided or squared, round timber used for spars or in building wharves, shingles, laths, fencing posts, sawed boards, planks, deals, and other lumber, rough or dressed, except boards, planks, deals, and other lumber of lignum vitæ, lancewood, ebony, box, granadilla, mahogany, rosewood, satinwood, and all other cabinet woods.

Sewing machines and all parts thereof.

Salt, whether in bulk or in bags, sacks, barrels, or other packages.

Mr. Underwood stated to-day that he did not expect that the Ways and Means Committee would spend much time in consideration of the Reciprocity bill, as it had been very thoroughly discussed last session, and there appeared to be no desire from any quarter for hearings at this time, probably because the interests that would naturally seek to be heard and who desired to be heard last session had little reason to expect the measure to be defeated by a Democratic Ways and Means Committee or a Democratic House.

Reciprocity Bill Up To-Morrow.

It is now the programme to report the bill to the House on Friday, and start the debate on it then. The debate will be free and practically without limit of time, and anybody who wants to be heard will have his chance. Mr. Underwood said he thought there were about four days speechmaking in sight.

The Omnibus Bill will be taken up as soon as the Reciprocity bill is passed, and the debate on that is expected to run along for a week or ten days.

To-morrow will be given up to the consideration of the joint resolution for the Constitutional amendment for the election of Senators by the people, and if this is passed promptly the bill for the publication of election expenses and contributions will be taken up. It is the plan of the majority leaders to expedite the passage of the latter measure so that the State Legislatures that will be in session during the next month or so may pass similar legislation so that there may be conformity of action required of National and State campaign committees in the matter of publishing campaign expenses.

The National Campaign Publicity Law Association, of which Perry Belmont is President, has taken steps to have bills similar to the one to be taken up by the House to-morrow introduced in the New York Senate and Assembly, and the expectation is that the measure will be passed by the New York Legislature within a few weeks.

Mr. Belmont has recently seen a number of New York legislators who are favorable to the passage of the publicity bill, and has also had a conference with Gov. Dix, who favors the measure. The effort is to get similar action by State Legislatures to that taken by Congress before the next Presidential election over as much of the country as possible.

GAINS FAVOR IN CANADA.

Government Member Expects Parliament to Approve Reciprocity.

OTTAWA, Ont., April 12.—"The position of reciprocity in the Canadian Parliament has been greatly improved by the decision of Congress to deal with it before taking up other questions on the extensive programme of the Democratic leaders," said a member of the Government to-day.

"The Opposition at Ottawa, which has been aggressively against reciprocity from the first, has been basing its hopes largely on the expectation that at Washington the Democrats would delay ratification of the agreement until they had carried through the remainder of their legislative programme, or would combine the consideration of the agreement with the woolen schedules or with something else.

"I expect to see Parliament ratify the agreement soon after the Easter recess, which ends on the 19th."

Parliament adjourned to-day for a week's recess covering the Easter holidays. Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the members of his Government will remain at Ottawa to clear up routine business which has been accumulating for some time.

New York Dispensary In Need.

The New York Dispensary, 145 Worth Street, has recently established a social service department, which takes care of the families of sick persons, and on their recovery finds them employment and otherwise helps them to prevent their relapse. The dispensary was established in 1790 and 3,000,000 sick poor have been aided by it. To-day a lack of funds threatens its activities. Checks may be sent to W. Emlen Roosevelt.

Reunion of Loreto Academy Alumni.

Loreto Academy at Niagara Falls, Ontario, Canada, will celebrate its golden jubilee on June 20 to 22, when the Ladies of Loreto, as the nuns conducting the academy are known, will entertain former students. Upon the first day the alumni will attend the commencement exercises, on the second there will be a reunion of students, and on the third the golden jubilee celebration.

SENATE DEMOCRATS GET MORE PLACES

INSURGENTS HOLD WHIP HAND

Enough of Them to Defeat Regulars by Combining with the Democrats —Personnel Not Ready.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The Republican Committee on Committees of the Senate to-day decided on the ratio of apportionment between their party and the Democrats in ten of the more important committees. In each of these committees the Democratic proportional representation is increased, though in some cases these increases are partly offset by small increases on the majority side. In no case do the Democrats get their full demand for representation on the basis of four to five, the ratio of the party division of the present Senate, though no particularly bitter protest is expected from them.

Indirectly, however, in many committees the Democrats will gain the full tactical advantage they had hoped for over the regular Republicans through the fixed ratio of representation promised the insurgents by Mr. Gallinger. Thus in the ten committees decided to-day, the insurgents will be entitled to two places on each committee. In every case a complete combination between the insurgents and the Democrats would result in putting the regular Republicans in the minority. The basis of apportionment to-day varies from nine to six on two of the committees to nine to seven on others, and a switching of the two insurgent members on any of these committees would give the radicals a majority of one in some instances and two in others.

As was expected, the smallest Democratic concession is given in the Finance Committee, though Foreign Relations is adjusted on the same basis. In the make-up of the Finance Committees the Republicans retain nine places, while the Democrats go up from five to seven. These seven Democrats combined with two insurgents would dominate the committee, but the Republicans have counted their strength here carefully, and they realise that no such combination can be made. On the minority side of the committee, as at present constituted there are Mr. Bailey of Texas and Mr. Simmons of North Carolina, moderate tariff Democrats, and Mr. Stone of Missouri, radical tariff Democrat.

The Democratic Committee on Committees has the predominating complexion of the tariff-for-revenue plan so that it can be counted on to fill the three vacancies with low tariff Senators. That will give only four low tariff Democrats, and they can combine with the two insurgents as much as they please without seriously embarrassing the protectionist wing of the committee. Of course, on many items all the Democrats are low tariff, and in those cases a powerful combination with the insurgents may be affected.

The Committee on Agriculture is increased from thirteen to sixteen members, the Republicans gaining one place and the Democrats two, the parties dividing nine to seven. The Committee on Appropriations up from thirteen to seventeen, each party gaining two, leaving the apportionment ten to seven. The Committee on Commerce remains seventeen strong, but one Republican place is transferred to the Democratic column, so that the committee divides ten to seven. The Committees on Finance and Foreign Relations each add another place to the Democratic side and divide nine to six.

The Inter-State Commerce Committee increases its membership from thirteen to sixteen, the Democrats gaining two and the Republicans one place; the parties will then stand nine to seven. The Judiciary adds one Democratic place to its total strength of fifteen and leaves the parties divided nine to seven. The Committee on Naval Affairs goes up from eleven to fourteen members, the Democrats gaining two and the Republicans one place, the parties dividing eight to six. The Post Office Committee gives the Democrats two more places and the division stands nine to seven.

An interesting feature of the committee increases is the possibility now presented of Senator O'Gorman getting a place on the Judiciary Committee. The Democrats get an additional place there, and talk has been heard that because of his long training on the bench as well as the importance of the State he represents the new Senator from New York might be assigned to that committee. Except for the new place, the minority side of the committee is already full.

The fact that Mr. Clapp, a radical of Minnesota, will be Chairman of the Committee on Inter-State Commerce gives special interest to the make-up of that committee. The parties divide 9 to 7, with Foster of Louisiana the only out-and-out conservative on the Democratic side, though Mr. Tillman, now at home ill, inclines heavily under the guidance of his personal friend, Mr. Bailey. Besides Mr. Clapp, Mr. Cummins will be on the majority side, and it is said that Mr. La Follette will also get an assignment to this committee. With three insurgents to combine with at least three Democrats, while Mr. Tillman is absent, the committee would stand tied at 6 to 6 on progressive railroad legislation.

As to the personnel of the various committees little progress has been made by either Republican or Democratic committees on Committees. Both of them were in session to-day, and in both parties there were factional conferences on the possible influencing of the controlling committees, but neither side is yet ready to announce any names, and it is expected that two or three weeks will elapse before the announcements are made.

It is now definitely understood that Mr. Penrose will take the chairmanship of the Finance Committee and relinquish the Chairmanship of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads. Mr. Crane of Massachusetts will retain his Chairmanship of the Rules Committee and let the Chairmanship of the Committee on Post Offices go by default to the near-insurgent, Mr. Bourne of Oregon. Mr. Cullom will retain Foreign Relations, and that leaves Mr Clapp's title to the Committee on Inter-State of Foreign Commerce undisputed.

BEST COINER OF BAD DOLLARS

Harry Reporter's Counterfeits Almost Perfect—Caught in Denver.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—After a search of two years, Secret Service men arrested Harry Reporter in Denver last night and charged him with making the best counterfeit silver dollars ever circulated in this country. The coins, made largely of tin and lead, were almost perfect in workmanship, and for two years have been passed upon merchants in Denver and on the street railway company there in great quantities.

Every effort to locate the plant was futile until last night. Official advices to Acting Chief Moran said 500 coins were found in Reporter's house.

The arrest of Fred Millburn and Jesse Handlon is reported from Indianapolis. They are charged with passing bad half-dollars. They are not connected with the Denver case.

GOLF FOR TAFT'S SECRETARY.

Hilles Gets a New Outfit and Will Take the Field Saturday.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—C. D. Hilles, secretary to President Taft, intends to qualify for the golf cabinet. Mr. Hilles received an entire new golf outfit at the White House to-day—sticks, balls, cap, a check suit, and heavy shoes. He expects to begin play shortly after the President himself seeks the freedom of the links next Saurday.

Mr. Hilles says he is not an amateur at golf, for he has been playing for eight years, but he has never appeared on the links near Washington.

ELECT W. S. KENYON AS IOWA SENATOR

Republican Deadlock, on Since Jan. 17, Is Broken on Sixty-seventh Ballot.

ASSISTANT TO WICKERSHAM

Also Has Been a District Judge and General Counsel to the Illinois Central Railroad.

DES MOINES, Iowa, April 12.—The deadlock in the Iowa Legislature ended this afternoon shortly before 1 o'clock, when William S. Kenyon, Republican, of Fort Dodge, an Assistant United States District Attorney General, was elected United States Senator to serve out the unexpired term of the late Senator Jonathan P. Dolliver, following perhaps the hardest Senatorial contest ever fought in Iowa. The election came with the sixty-seventh ballot and was attended by tumultuous scenes, in which Kenyon adherents displayed their enthusiasm by tossing books and papers about the Legislative Hall.

As the hour for the first joint ballot of the day approached it was evident that a determined effort to end the deadlock was to be made by friends or Kenyon. The galleries were thronged by friends of the candidates when the first roll call was announced. This resulted in a vote of 76 for Kenyon, 28 for Supreme Court Justice Horace E. Deemer, and 51 for Claud R. Porter, Democrat. It was on this ballot that Senator Adams of Fayette changed his vote from Deemer to Kenyon, thereby starting the movement that ended the deadlock.

Senator Saunders immediately asked for and obtained a second ballot. During the count it was seen that no change had been effected and Senator Chapman of Cedar County arose from his seat and said that in view of the possibility of the Legislature adjourning in a deadlock he would go over to the Kenyon side. Representative Van Camp of Adam immediately followed. His vote was enough to elect. Kenyon had 78 votes, the required number.

Then came other changes in quick succession and when the ballot was counted it stood 85 for Kenyon to 19 for Deemer and 51 for Porter.

Kenyon soon appeared before the joint session and was received with great enthusiasm as he stepped forward to express his thanks for the election, which he said had come after "many trials."

The balloting for United States Senator began in the Iowa Legislature on Jan. 17, with Senator Lafayette Young, Gov. Carroll's appointee; A. B. Funk, Warren Garst, H. W. Byers, and Mr. Kenyon in the race. Mr. Funk withdrew after the nineteenth ballot, Mr. Garst continued until the twenty-third, while Mr. Byers dropped out after the fifth. Young was succeeded on the twenty-second ballot by Justice Deemer.

Mr. Kenyon, the new Senator, was born in Elmira, Ohio, on June 10, 1869, and finished his education at Grinnell, Iowa. He was admitted to the bar following his graduation and shortly after was elected Public Prosecutor of Webster County, Iowa. He was Judge of the Eleventh Iowa Judicial District until 1908, when he was appointed as Attorney for the Illinois Central Railway. In 1907 he was made general counsel of that company, with offices at Chicago, and served in that capacity until 1910. He was appointed Assistant to the Attorney General of the United States March 14, 1910. Fort Dodge, his home town, was also the home of Senator Dolliver.

DENVER, Col., April 12.—Congressman Martin received the 34 votes of the anti-Speer Democrats in to-day's ballot for United States Senator. Mayor Speer polled 28; Congressman Maupin, 1, and Dr. B. L. Jefferson, 2.

Thirty-one Republicans voted for C. W. Waterman.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The election of William S. Kenyon for United States Senator from Iowa was especially pleasing to President Taft because of Mr. Kenyon's official connection with the Administration and because of his progressive attitude in many matters in which the President has been interested. The President commented to-day on Mr. Kenyon's selection as follows:

"He will make an excellent Senator because of his splendid equipment for the place. He is a good lawyer, a man of courage and high ideals."

Our tailoring organization maintains a special department which devotes itself exclusively to the tailoring of auto apparel for men. The fabrics (to match suits or of contrasting colors) are worsted whipcords, wax cloths or fancy materials, extremely light in weight; and the coats are finished with combination high or low collars. Even these collars tell a story, for whether you wear them low or high, they sit perfectly.

A Unanimous Verdict

There is a wide divergence of opinion as to the respective merits of different cars. And not all are agreed as to which is superior, the chain drive or the shaft. But this much in motordom finds unanimous assent:

The Saks Auto Apparel Department has no equal in the world

And such has been its reputation since the date of its opening, now nine years ago. It was then the greatest and the finest department of its kind in existence. And thanks to a wide and growing patronage it still occupies the same position. Indeed, nothing short of this would suffice, for lukewarm success could not sustain a department of such magnitude.

Today, isolated in its superiority, exclusive in its styles, comprehensive in its assortments and unique in its values, it enjoys a monopoly of the best domestic and European apparel ideas that has made it the authoritative centre for motor fashions.

CARNEGIE TRUST MEN PUT IN BANKRUPTCY

Banks Start Proceedings Against Cummins, Condon, and Charles A. Moore, Jr.

THEY ARE CITY GUARANTORS

Liabilities of the Three Alleged to be $13,500,000; Assets $1,000,000—Cummins Says It's a Friendly Action.

Petitions in bankruptcy were filed yesterday against William J. Cummins, Martin J. Condon, President of the American Snuff Company, and Charles Arthur Moore, Jr., a former member of the machinery manufacturing firm of Manning, Maxwell & Moore, of which Mr. Moore's father is now the head. The proceedings, which are a direct result of the collapse of the Carnegie Trust Company, in which all three were Directors, were brought in the United States District Court by Herman C. Brewster, Herbert Hatfield, and James S. Watson, to whom claims against Cummins and his two fellow Directors had been assigned by several banking institutions.

Payson Merrill, a lawyer, of 128 Broadway, was appointed receiver by Judge Holt and his bond was fixed at $275,000. Of this bond $150,000 was named as covering the Condon receivership, $100,000 to cover that of Cummins, and $25,000 for Moore.

The petitioners allege that to the best of their information and belief Cummins's liabilities are $5,000,000 and his assets $400,000. Condon's liabilities are $6,500,000 and his assets $500,000, and Moore's liabilities $2,000,000 and his assets $100,000.

The names of these three Carnegie Trust officials appear on the personal guarantee for the city's deposit of $630,000 in the Carnegie Trust Company, along with the names of four of their banking associates. In view of the bankruptcy proceedings, those who are familiar with the Carnegie Trust situation said yesterday that the city was in danger of losing a considerable part of its deposit in the Carnegie Trust, although each guarantor may be held for the full amount.

While the names of the banking institutions which assigned their claims to the three petitioners did not appear in the application papers, it was learned that the institutions are the Madison Trust Company and the Twelfth and the Nineteenth Ward Banks. The amount of the claims named in the papers does not represent the total amount loaned to the Cummins syndicate by these institutions.

Three separate petitions were filed, each bearing the name of the three petitioners and the amounts alleged to be due from Cummins, Condon, and Moore. The petition against Cummins sets forth that $30,000 is owed to Brewster on money loaned, $9,644 is owed to Hatfield, and $80,000 to Watson. In the Condon petition Brewster's claim is $30,000, Hatfield's $664.60, and Watson's $20,000. The claims listed against Moore in the third petition are Brewster, $1,000; Hatfield, $9,644.60, and Watson, $20,000.

Charges Against the Three.

The various amounts are said to correspond with notes signed by Cummins, Condon, and Moore, and held by the three banks. All three of the Carnegie Trust Company Directors are charged in the petitions with having made preferential payments to creditors while insolvent. Cummins and Moore are charged with the concealment and transfer of properties while insolvent, but this charge is not entered against Condon. All three are charged with having attempted to hinder, delay, and default the petitioning creditors.

The petitions set forth that suits are now in progress against Cummins, Moore, and Condon, and judgments are about to be entered, also that several banking institutions holding Cummins collateral are about to close out their holdings. It is also set forth that several efforts have been made to straighten out the tangled affairs of the three bankers without success, and that the best interests of creditors would be conserved by putting the three men into bankruptcy.

Samuel S. Koenig of 115 Broadway and Parsons, Closson & McIlvaine represent the petitioning creditors. Parsons, Closson & McIlvaine are also counsel for the Nineteenth Ward Bank. An effort will be made by the lawyers in the case to have the bankruptcy hearings begin at once so that the real assets of Cummins, Condon, and Moore can be determined. Other claims against the Cummins bankers will be filed with Receiver Merrill. The known claims by the seventeen banks and trust companies which loaned to the Cummins Syndicate at or about the time they were getting generous deposits of city money approximates $3,000,000.

Already the investigators have learned that the creditors will have to look to Mr. Condon for most of the money. Although the stock holdings of Cummins are extensive, one of the concerns in which he is heavily interested is already in a receiver's hands—the Tennessee Packing and Stock Yards Company—and stock in his various other concerns is said to have greatly depreciated in value owing to the pending litigation. The Tennessee Packing and Stock Yards Company is the holding concern for several of the Cummins enterprises.

The other companies which are generally referred to as Cummins enterprises are the Enterprise Soap Works of Nashville, Tenn.; the Cummins-Bennett Company, the Merchants' Wirebound Box Company, the Tennessee Packing and Provision Company, the Cassety Oil Company, the Independent Fertilizer Company, which is capitalized at $50,000,000 but exists on paper only, and the Platt Iron Works of Dayton, Ohio, of which Joseph B. Reichmann, another Carnegie Trust Company Director, is President.

Although the Platt Iron Works is accredited with being the most valuable of all the Cummins properties, its debts are large and most of its stock is held as collateral by Andrew Carnegie for his $2,100,000 loan to the Carnegie Trust Company.

Cummins Vainly Sought Aid.

In the last few weeks Cummins and his associates have been struggling hard to ward off bankruptcy proceedings. Mr. Cummins has been dividing his time between Nashville and here, in constant consultation with his lawyers and trying hard to obtain outside aid which would save him from the bankruptcy courts.

Mr. Moore is in Europe at present, although he is expected back shortly. District Attorney Whitman having notified him that his presence here was wanted by the Grand Jury. Mr. Moore severed his connection with Manning, Maxwell & Moore shortly after he became associated with Cummins in the Carnegie Trust Company.

Mr. Moore is not yet thirty years old. It was his ambition to amass a million dollars quickly, and for that purpose he cast his lot with Cummins. Mr. Moore's stock holdings in Manning, Maxwell & Moore are now pledged as collateral on several so-called Cummins loans. Whether his father, Charles A. Moore, Sr., will come to his aid is not known as yet. Mr. Moore, Sr., is wealthy. He is ill at present in Rome, and friends of Mr. Moore, Jr., say this illness may prevent his father from coming here to aid in paying off his son's indebtedness.

While Mr. Condon is still President of the American Snuff Company, a subsidiary of the American Tobacco Company, his liability on the Cummins notes has no bearing on the American Snuff Company. Already Mr. Condon's valuable estate at Pelham Manor has been attached. This property cost Mr. Condon $400,000, and is said to be worth half a million dollars.

The country home of Mr. Moore at Greenwich, Conn., was also attached by the Savoy Trust Company a few weeks ago to satisfy a $50,000 claim.

Mr. Cummins was in Nashville yesterday when he heard of the bankruptcy proceedings.

City Chamberlain Hyde, when asked if he had any comment to make regarding the city's guarantee on which the names of Cummins, Condon, and Moore appear, declined to discuss the matter.

The committee of bankers appointed by Superintendent of Banks Cheney to appraise the assets of the Carnegie Trust met again yesterday, but had no report to make. Several bankers who loaned money to the Cummins syndicate and have a keen interest in the plan to reorganize the Platt Iron Works and the Tennessee Packing and Stock Yards Company were inclined to censure Supt. Cheney yesterday for his refusal as receiver of the Carnegie Trust Company to join the Creditors' Committee which is trying to save the two Cummins enterprises.

The bankers on this committee complain that Supt. Cheney is overtimid, and there was a report in banking circles yesterday that Gov. Dix might be urged to compel the Banking Superintendent to join with the other creditors. Should the reorganization plan fall through, the bankers say, creditors of the Cummins concern will lose a large part of their claims.

The Grand Jury continued yesterday its investigation of city deposits and Cummins loans. District Attorney Whitman was before the jury for a while. The witnesses examined were President W. McMaster Mills of the Plaza Bank, President Robert C. Lewis of the Guardian Trust Company, Secretary M. Ferguson of the Central Trust Company, and A. M. Barrett, Assistant Secretary of the Guardian Trust Company.

The investigators learned yesterday that the Plaza Bank loaned $75,000 to the Cummins syndicate. Their city deposit about that time was $50,000.

Cummins loans by the Guardian Trust Company amounted to about $75,000. They received $125,000 of the city's money. The Central Trust Company loaned in excess of $200,000 to the Cummins group. The city deposit in the Central Trust was $250,000.

Other bankers will be examined to-day, and at least one indictment is expected to be forthcoming early next week.

CUMMINS NOT WORRIED.

Says His Affairs Are in Good Shape and Carnegie Has Given More Time.

Special to The New York Times.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 12.—William J. Cummins was not surprised when the news of the bankruptcy proceedings reached here to-day from New York, as Lawyer Tompkins McIlvaine had sent him word the night before.

"It is a friendly litigation," he said, "and was done to prevent several small bankruptcy lawyers from taking such a step. You know a man can't keep from being thrown into bankruptcy, and ever since the Carnegie Trust was closed several little lawyers up there have been trying to get together sufficient claims to throw both me and Mr. Condon into bankruptcy, but we have beaten them to it.

"Nearly all my indebtedness has been settled; the Platt Iron Works is in the hands of a Creditors' Committee, the Tennessee Packing and Stock Yards Company is in the hands of a friendly receivership, and the loan made to us by Andrew Carnegie has been extended two years. Mr. Carnegie also has told me and Mr. Condon that if we could not pay at the end of that time even further time would be given.

"My indebtedness now is only about $500,000 or $600,000," continued Mr. Cummins, "and some $3,000,000 bank stock is up as collateral for this. What we want is a Creditors' Committee, which, I am informed, will be named next Monday.

"Mr. Condon and myself are simply indorsers on the pool paper which was carrying the stock of the Carnegie Trust Company, the Madison Trust Company, the Twelfth Ward Bank, and the Nineteenth Ward Bank, the four institutions which we operated. There are also seven other names on the paper.

"For some time the attorneys of J. C. Robin, the man I put out of the Carnegie Trust Company soon after going to New York, have been trying to get claims against us so that they could put me and Mr. Condon into bankruptcy. They secured two small claims, and were negotiating for a third, when our lawyers, seeing the turn things were taking, stepped in and filed a petition themselves in order to protect my interests and those of Mr. Condon.

"Mr. McIlvaine, the attorney who filed the petition, is an active member of the firm of Parsons, Closson & McIlvaine; he is also a Director and counsel for the Madison Trust Company, the Twlefth and Nineteenth Ward Banks, and you may rest assured he would not have filed the petition except it had to be done in our interest."

Mr. Cummins said that evidently the New York papers had figured the Platt Iron Works, the Tennessee Packing Company, and the Carnegie loans as liabilities, but that all this had been settled satisfactorily, and that the other little debts came up just when things were about to be settled and the bankruptcy lawyers got busy in their efforts to get a fee.

"Everything will be adjusted," said Mr. Cummins, "and we are going to win out. I am giving you this statement so that my friends and those of Mr. Condon in this section may know the whys and wherefores in this fight."

He said he was in Nashville to go over some matters in connection with the Tennessee Packing and Stock Yards Company, and would return to New York just as soon as these were arranged.

CRIME-WAVE INQUIRY NEARING AN END

Prosecutor Moss Expects Much Good to Follow Even If Indictments Are Not Found.

POLICE BEFORE GRAND JURY

Efficiency of the Department Under Bingham and His Successors Made a Basis of Comparison.

Rapid progress was made yesterday by the special Grand Jury which is inquiring into the so-called crime wave. After half a dozen witnesses, mostly policemen, had been examined, it was stated by one of the counsel that there was a prospect of an early end of the investigation, and that if no indictments were returned, important recommendations concerning the uniformed police force would be made.

"It may be only a coincidence," remarked First Assistant District Attorney Moss, "but a great deal of the evidence so far examined was produced at the psychological moment and fitted in with the testimony of witnesses. For a time the Grand Jury seemed to be merely groping, but now they have reached the point where they intend to find out if the people of New York are getting proper police service, and, if not, why not.

"The investigation may lead to some indictments or it may result in important recommendations; it is too early to tell which. The investigation is going to be very thorough, and in the end it will be found to have been worth while."

It became known yesterday that the investigation will include the examination of every police blotter in the city covering a filed period of time. The blotter of the West Thirty-seventh Station has already been examined and it shows that from Feb. 8 to March 17, 1911, complaints were entered concerning forty-eight burglaries, fifty-four larceny cases, twelve highway robberies, and nine assaults. Only six arrests were made in all the cases combined. It is the intention of the investigators to compare this record with the corresponding period in 1909 when Gen. Bingham was Police Commissioner. The same comparison will be made with the blotters in every precinct during this period in both years. This comparison is expected to show conclusively if there is any increase in crime or if the police are as efficient at present as they were under Commissioner Bingham.

Clubbing Cases Takes Up.

A number of policemen were called yesterday to testify concerning fines for clubbing. The case of Policemen Noll, Flaherty, and Brown, who have already been before the Grand Jury, was up again. Noll and Flaherty were fined fifteen days' pay each and Brown thirty days' pay on complaint of Tanner Smith, who was subsequently convicted and sentenced for shooting a policeman. George W. Gale, a banker of 2 Wall Street, appeared yesterday to testify concerning Noll's good character. He said he had known Noll a number of years and had always found him to be an efficient and honorable man. Once he said Noll was proposed for membership in the Masonic lodge and his record was thoroughly scrutinized. It was learned that he was a college graduate, a member of the National Guard, and an upright citizen. Mr. Gale said he did not think Noll would have been guilty of clubbing Smith unless he had to do it. He said he had spoken to Mayor Gaynor about Noll without Noll knowing it, but had received no satisfaction.

It was also brought out that Patrolmen James O'Sullivan and Matthew J. Hogan of the East 104th Street Station had been brought up on charges before Commissioner Baker for clubbing three members of the car-barn gang, who were later sent to Sing Sing for burglary. These convicts were brought down from prison under a writ and testified against the policemen, but the charges were dismissed. The policemen testified, however, that it had cost them $450 for counsel fees, and that the charge stood against them on the record in much the same way as a dismissed indictment hangs over a citizen.

Wagon Thieves at Work.

Charles Haslop of the Grocers' Association testified regarding the number of grocery and butcher wagons that have been stolen recently. One Harlem grocer, it was said, had lost five wagons within a few weeks, and another concern had lost six. Reports from police records supplied by Lieut. Henry Cohen of the Detective Bureau, verified these complaints. Lieut. Cohen also produced the Detective Bureau records concerning burglaries, larcenies, assaults, robberies, and other crimes, and all, it is said, showed that these crimes were on the increase, while the percentage of arrests were far below normal. A complete record of property stolen in 1910 and in March this year shows, it is said, that a very small percentage has been recovered.

Capt. Corcoran of the Thirty-ninth Precinct, a crayon portrait of whom was found detectives in a raid Tuesday night upon an alleged gambling house in 142th Street, was summoned, but his case was not reached. Other policemen who will be summoned to-day are Lieuts. William E. Barrett and Thomas Lancer, and Patrolman Thomas Manning of the Seventh Precinct.

Official denial was made yesterday that friction exists between Mr. Moss and Lawyer George Gordon Battle, who was appointed a Special Assistant District Attorney to assist in the investigation. This statement was issued:

For the purpose of settling conflicting reports we desire to state that the investigation of the Police Department by the March Grand Jury under the instruction of Judge O'Sullivan is proceeding with conservative thoroughness; that it is in charge of Assistant District Attorney Frank Moss, assisted by George Gordon Battle, Special Deputy Assistant District Attorney, and James B. Reynolds, Deputy Assistant District Attorney; that the reports of friction between counsel are unfounded.

FRANK MOSS,
GEORGE GORDON BATTLE,
JAMES B. REYNOLDS.

Secret Service Man After Gamblers.

It was learned yesterday that much of the evidence against gambling places is being obtained by a Government Secret Service man who served eleven years under Deputy Commissioner Flynn when the latter was in the Secret Service. It is said that he is an adept in disguises, and, although he appears in court as a complainant against prisoners his various disguises are so natural that he has no trouble in gaining admission to other gambling houses.

The five men who were arrested in the recent raid in 112th Street were arraigned yesterday before Magistrate Steinert in the Harlem Court. Samuel Smith of 52 East 111th Street, who, the police say, was cutting a wire on the roof of the building when the raid took place, was held in $1,000 bail for examination on Friday, and the other four, arrested on warrants issued by Chief Magistrate McAdoo as being common gamblers, were held in $500 bail each.

Detective James V. McCarthy of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station was tried before Deputy Commissioner Walsh yesterday on the charges of failing to take proper action in the case of an assault upon a citizen; in reporting to his commanding officer that there was no cause for police action; for making an improper proposition to a complainant in a criminal case, and for accepting money for aiding in the unlawful settlement of a case. McCarthy was suspended by Commissioner Cropsey following an investigation which McCarthy made of an alleged assault upon Paul Pindt of 225 West Thirty-eighth Street by an employe of an alleged gambling house.

Pindt, the first witness, said he was in the habit of visiting certain poolrooms and gambling houses. He went to a poolroom run by a man named Kennedy in West Fifty-ninth Street and made several bets. He said he was told to go to Columbus Circle on Saturday night and get $500 which he had won. There a doorkeeper named Cook, employed at the gambling house, met him, but instead of giving him the money assaulted him. He said he was taken to the Roosevelt Hospital, and later the case was reported to the West Sixty-eighth Street Station, where McCarthy was assigned to find Cook. He said he met McCarthy in the West Side Court the following Monday and McCarthy said:

Advice from McCarthy.

"If you want to get a warrant you won't be able to settle this case. If you get a warrant and an arrest is made you will have to go before the Grand Jury. The case may not come up for trial for ten or fifteen months. In the meantime you will have lots of trouble over it. If I were you I'd settle it."

Pindt said he offered to settle for $200, and that McCarthy told him he would go and see Kennedy. When he returned Pindt said that McCarthy told him that Kennedy would give only $102. Pindt agreed to take that, and McCarthy went away again. The witness said McCarthy returned with $102 and gave it to him, at the same time remarking:

"Now I ought to get about $10 at least out of this. Kennedy did not give me anything." Pindt said he gave McCarthy a $20 bill and McCarthy gave him change from a large roll of bills he had in his pocket.

On cross-examination Pindt stoutly denied that he had ever been arrested. It was brought out that he had used the name of Harold J. Hager when he went to poolrooms, for he didn't want "to bring disgrace on his family." Pindt admitted that a few days before coming to New York he had cashed three checks, amounting to $105, with merchants in Haverstraw, and that it turned out that there was only $8.75 in the bank. He replied that he thought he had had sufficient funds to cover the checks.

Lieut. Sullivan of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station testified that McCarthy had reported that the complainant had refused to ask for a warrant, and that he (McCarthy) had torn up his report in consequence. McCarthy made a flat denial of all the charges. He said he had made out a report, but finding one or two errors in it he had decided to make out a new one when he returned from court. Then when Pindt refused to ask for a warrant he said he did not see the necessity of submitting his report and he tore it up. Commissioner Walsh reserved decision.

Ellen H. Cotheal Gives Liberal Amounts to Different Institutions.

The Society for the Destitute Blind receives $6,000 under the terms of the will, the General Theological Seminary of the Protestant Episcopal Church $20,000, of which $15,000 is for a fellowship and $5,000 for a scholarship, to be named after the testatrix; the Vaughan Teachers' Rest $10,000, the Domestic and Foreign Missionary Society of the Protestant Episcopal Church $5,000, on the death of Catherine Lewis Davies; the General Clergy Relief Fund $10,000, on the death of Jane Jones, a servant, who receives the interest on that sum for life; the Trustees of the Church Property for the Diocese of New Jersey a third interest in the residuary estate, value not stated, for the St. James' Church and Sunday school, Piscataway, N. J., on the death of Matilda F. Rhinelander; Mary E. Lewis, a servant, $3,000 outright, and various relatives sixth and ninth interests in the residue of the estate.

BLAME FOR FIRE ON CITY OFFICIALS

Coroner's Jury Ready to Find Against Four Persons at Least to Extent of Severe Censure.

EVIDENCE OF LOCKED EXIT

Hallways Found Dark While Fire Raged in Triangle Waist Factory —More Indictments Expected.

The special investigation of the District Attorney's office into the Triangle Waist Company fire and the culpability of others besides the two proprietors, who have been indicted, for the great loss of life was carried on yesterday behind closed doors. The Grand Jury adjourned its sessions until Monday, when it will receive from Assistant District Attorneys Bostwick and Rubin new data on which to work.

It became practically certain yesterday that some responsibility would be fixed upon city officials, at least in the form of censure by the Coroner's jury. Coroner Holtzhauser announced that the jury sitting with him had made up their minds to go this far in its findings.

The report of the jury should be in this morning. It was expected yesterday, but was postponed in order to hear a number of new witnesses on the much-disputed question of the locked exits.

"I can say that there will be findings against at least two persons," Coroner Holtzhauser said, "and there will be severe censure, if nothing more serious, against two more. There is no difference of opinion about going this far, although we are not quite united on the matter of going further."

Recommendations as to consolidating fire-prevention responsibility in the hands of one official body will accompany the report of the Coroner's inquest.

Fire Nets of No Service.

Witnesses heard yesterday included Capt. Howard C. Rush of Engine Company 18, high-pressure service; Jacob Woll, Jr., Assistant Foreman of Hook and Ladder Company 20, and several Triangle Company employes, who differed in their views of closed doors and blocked exits.

Capt. Rush of the high-pressure service had made some mathematical calculations as to the speed with which those who jumped from the Asch building's ninth story struck the fire nets spread for them in Washington Place. These are his figures:

Time required for victims to reach the ground, 3 seconds.
Average rate of speed per second, 76 feet.
Force of impact of bodies on fireneta, 11,040 pounds.
Weight of their combined impact, 16½ tons.
Result of body's impact upon twenty firemen holding net—they were thrown headlong to the ground.

Capt. Rush sought by his testimony to show that the breaking of the fire nets was not the result of preventable carelessness or rotten nets.

"I had hold of a net at the corner of Greene Street and Washington Place," Capt. Rush said. "The first person to jump was a man. Then three girls came together. There were firemen and citizens holding the net, but we all toppled over together on top of the victims. Before we regained our feet the bodies were coming so fast it was impossible to catch them.

"The life net was virtually new, being only nine months in use, and was in good condition. It had been tested and was strong."

Capt Rush said the hose had been burned away from the ninth-floor standpipes when he reached there, and the valves were all closed.

Fireman Jacob Woll, Jr., of Hook and Ladder Company 20, told of his work while in charge of the fire-fighting activities on the ninth floor.

Hallways Kept in Darkness.

"We found bodies on top of the elevator as we worked our way upward," he said, "and then, when we got to the ninth floor, we found them lying in heaps so badly burned they could hardly be recognized. Fire was still coming from the eighth-story windows, and was rushing out through the roof."

"What was the condition of the elevators?" asked Coroner Holtzhauser. "Did they look as if they had penetrated into the fire zone after things became bad?"

"Yes," replied the fireman, "the wooden framework under the metal side was burned and the metal was twisted from heat. There were nineteen bodies on top of the second elevator, and three persons who were alive."

"How long after you reached the fire did you enter the building?"

"Ten or fifteen minutes after. We were busy with the fire nets until then."

"Did you see any lights in the hallways or on the stairs?"

"No, none. The hallways were dark."

From Annie Dorfety, a tenth-floor worker who escaped by way of the roof, the Coroner's Jury attempted to learn if she knew about the practice of locking doors.

"I never thought to try the Washington Place side," she said. "In fact, I didn't know there were doors there. We had never been allowed to use them. I saw smoke coming up the Greene Street stairway and seized an Italian girl, taking her with me. We ran across the showroom to the staircase and went to the roof."

Searching of Employes.

"Were you ever searched as you left work?" the witness was asked.

"Well, we usually told Mr. Alter, who had a desk by the Greene Street door what we had with us. I was never searched, but then I usually went out with a forelady."

The witness was asked if she had been promised a position in the new factory in consideration for testifying that she had not been searched as she left the place. She hesitated for some time and then said she had not.

Isaac Stern, Superintendent of the Asch Building, when questioned about the testimony of firemen that they found the halls and staircases in darkness, replied that he always kept the electric lights on the stairway burning.

"Always?" asked Assistant District Attorney Rubin.

"Well, ever since a factory inspector made a complaint about ten days before the fire."

The witness said he had not inspected the standpipes in eight years, and had never drawn any water from them in that time. He said, however, that he knew them to be in good condition.

Piled Up Behind Locked Door.

Irene Seivos, an eighth-floor worker, testified that she had always come and gone by the Greene Street entrance and had never been allowed to pass through the Washington Place doors. Her handbag, she said, had always been opened by an inspector as she left. She recalled that a factory inspector tried to come in through the Washington Place door about a year ago, and could not get in because it was locked.

"I found the girls piled up against the Washington Place door and banging on it," testified Anna Elkins, an eighth-floor packer. "I rushed into the group and screamed with them until Mr. Brown came and got the door open and we passed down." There were no lights in the hallway, the witness said.

Samuel Bernstein, Manager of the Triangle Waist Company, and a relative of Max Blanck, declared that the company's owners always kept keys handy for the Washington Place doors, and that they were kept closed, but not locked.

District Attorney Whitman said last night that when the Grand Jury resumes its work on Monday the cases brought to his attention by the Italian Consul would be taken up. These cases involve charges that girls were induced to sign false affidavits to the effect that they knew the Washington Place doors were not locked before they could draw their pay envelopes for the week's wages due them when the fire occurred.

STUDY OF HURRYING CROWDS.

Architects Base Building Code Amendment on Resultant Computation.

To determine scientifically just what fire protection is necessary for factory workers on the upper floors of tall buildings engineers employed by the American Institute of Architects counted the people last week as they passed up and down the steps of the Manhattan terminal of the Brooklyn Bridge.

They found that the people went upstairs faster than they came down; that in the rush hour people passed upward at the rate of sixteen per minute for each foot of stair tread, and that while coming down they moved at the rate of twelve people per minute.

The results of the investigation were laid before the architects at a meeting called last night in the Fine Arts Building to consider Building Code amendments intended to render impossible a repetition of the Asch Building disaster.

Robert D. Kohn of the joint conference of architects, fire underwriters, and the Building Trades Employers' Association on Building Code amendments discussed the habits of the Brooklyn Bridge crowds and told how they applied to the factory situation.

"I was startled," he said, "to find people going upstairs faster than they came down. There is only one way to determine how many exits a building should have. It is to take the number of people who can come down each foot of staircase per minute, take also the element of the time allowance you should give to empty a building, and then by figuring into the computation the total number employed on each floor you can determine just how wide you should require the exits to be.

"We have done just that in the amendments for the sections of the code relating to theatres, and these amendments are now before a committee of the Aldermen. We hold that the problem of a great number of people employed in tall lofts, demands the same treatment as to fires as that in reference to a theatre gallery, and in the proposed amendments we provide the same protection in the one case as in the other."

Mr. Korn said that an architect under the new system would be compelled to file "certificates of occupancy" with the plans of a building and that upon the completion of a building he would have to post in each room the number of people who could be employed in it upon the showing of the fire exits as to their capacity per minute. He advocated concessions in the form of reductions in the width of stairs demanded for buildings where automatic sprinklers were installed and where fire walls divided the floors into two sections. He urged that open elevator shafts be prohibited, in order to make the elevator always a safe means of exit, and that staircases be inclosed in terra cotta walls for the same reason.

The new amendments will be submitted to the Board of Aldermen through Borough President McAneny within a few days. The architects voted an indorsement of the amendments to the Building Code sections covering theatres, expressing at the same time a fear that, unless public sentiment were very active, the Aldermen would bury the amendments in committee.

The dressing-room habits of actresses, who were accused by several speakers of smuggling in alcohol lamps in which to heat cosmetics, were denounced by several architects, who desired that this practice be made a criminal offense; but the majority thought that the better way would be to make the dressing rooms fireproof.

IDITAROD FIRE LOSS $100,000

Alaska Camp Fought Flames with Buckets in a Snowstorm.

KALTAG, Alaska, April 12.—Details of the fire which on April 4 did great damage to Iditarod City are slowly coming by messenger. There is no telegraph or telephone communication with the town.

The property loss is estimated at about $100,000. There was no loss of life. Work of reconstruction was begun immediately.

The fire, which occurred during a heavy snowstorm, spread slowly, and nearly every storekeeper in the conflagration zone was able to move his lighter stocks to places of safety. Twenty places of business—all light wooden structures—were turned, the greatest loss being suffered by Charles Miller, owner of the Merchants' Cafe.

The fire originated in the Pioneer Hotel, owned by Mrs. Donaldson. A general alarm brought out many volunteers and bucket brigades were soon active. The only water available was from a remote water hole. So far as known, none of the burned houses was insured. There is no food famine, as nearly all the supplies in the stores were removed to places of safety.

New Salvation Army Home.

A new home for the Salvation Army is to be built in Harlem. Plans were filed yesterday for a five-story fireproof building covering a plot of 33½ feet front at 153½ and 157 East 125th Street. It will contain a large assembly hall for meetings and a gymnasium. The cost will be $32,500. A. R. McKay is the architect.

WHY B. R. T. MADE TRIBOROUGH OFFER

Proposal Followed Interborough's Demand That It Be Excluded from Broadway.

KEPT SECRET FOR 2 WEEKS

Williams Says City Officials Were Told That Its Attitude Mustn't Be Used as a Club in Interborough Negotiations.

The publication yesterday of the fact that the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company had offered to add the Triborough subway system to its recent proposal for extensions in Brooklyn, Manhattan, and Queens had the effect of removing the cover of mystery from the pending transit negotiations. A statement was issued by Col. Timothy S. Williams, President of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit, which, in connection with other information obtained from authoritative sources, made the exact status of the whole matter plain for the first time in many weeks.

The city's Conference Committee, composed of the entire Public Service Commission and Borough Presidents McAneny, Miller, and Cromwell, which completed its sessions with the Interborough Directors more than three weeks ago, and since has been engaged ostensibly in framing the city's demands for modifications of the Interborough offer, has known for two weeks that the Brooklyn Rapid Transit was ready to take over the Triborough system complete if the city and the Interborough did not get together. Col. Williams sought to have this information made public at the time he told the Public Service Commission and the McAneny Committee, but was asked by Chairman Willcox not to say anything about it.

Borough President McAneny explained yesterday that the offer of Col. Williams to take over the Triborough system was made to the commission in an "informal way," and therefore was subject to the general condition of secrecy, which by the consent of the conferrees was cast over the whole series of transit conferences. Reporters who visited Mr. McAneny yesterday asked him whether this willingness of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit to take on the Triborough route had not been used to force concessions from the Interborough. He replied that no further avail had been made of it than was inevitable "from the nature of the case."

When the meetings with the Interborough Directors broke off it was known on the one side what demands for concessions the city's conferrees would make, and on the other side that the Interborough in all probability would not grant these demands. It was said then that a very few meetings would be necessary to put the city's demands into formal shape and then to submit them to the Interborough, which would be asked to give an answer in the near future.

The transit conference had at that time before it the offer of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company involving the construction if a subway up Broadway to Fifty-ninth Street, the annexation of most of the Triborough lines in Brooklyn, extensions to Woodside in Queens, and connections over all the East River bridges, as well as a new tunnel under the East River. This offer appealed very strongly to several of the city's representatives, and it was felt that even if the Interborough's offer were accepted there were features of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit offer which would be valuable to the city.

However, as it became known yesterday for the first time, the Interborough representatives informed the city's conferrees that if the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company was admitted to Broadway in Manhattan the Interborough would withdraw its offer. This led the city conferrees to ask Col. Williams and his fellow-Directors if, in such an event, they would undertake to provide through facilities into the Bronx in connection with their other routes in this borough.

They heard in reply that the Brooklyn Rapid Transit would be quite willing to take over most of the rest of the Triborough subway. It was suggested to the Brooklyn Rapid Transit that it might add the Lexington Avenue system above Fifty-ninth Street and the Bronx branches of the Triborough, but this suggestion was declined, and Col. Williams and his associates indicated that the plan they would approve would be to take over the whole Broadway-Lexington Avenue route, plus a line up Broadway from the vicinity of Eighth Street to Fifty-ninth Street and through Fifty-ninth Street over the Queensboro Bridge to the Queens connections already laid out in the Brooklyn Rapid Transit offer.

The main problem connected with this arrangement was to harmonize the operating proposition in Broadway below Eighth Street, and to this end the B. R. T. representatives expressed a willingness to use six tracks from that point downtown, four on one level and two on a level below, the distribution of these tracks, as between local and express service, to remain subject to determination later, when the demands of the traffic were further studied out.

Next Chairman Willcox of the Service Commission sought to ascertain if the B. R. T. would consent to conditions under which the city might buy all its property and become owner of the entire five-borough transit system. Col. Williams and his associates indicated a willingness to consider this also, but said that if such terms were insisted upon by the city, the financial basis of the B. R. T. offer would have to be changed somewhat.

On information obtained yesterday it appeared that the work of preparing the city's objections to the Interborough offer, apart from the negotiations with the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, could have been finished up in a few conferences at almost any time, but that there was delay owing to the hope on the part of several of the city's conferrees that the Interborough might be brought to terms which those members of the conference who have been opposing the adoption of the Interborough's present offer would accept.

Here is the statement of Col. Williams:

"Before the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company filed its subway proposal it emphasized informally to the city's officials and the members of the Public Service Commission (with whom the plan was gone over) that the proposition was not to be regarded as furnishing a club to assist the city in its negotiations with the Interborough Company.

"We insisted that the proposal should be treated on its merits as a plan primarily for solving Brooklyn's transportation needs; that it was not presented in antagonism to the Interborough Company nor with any desire to compete with that company for Manhattan business, but solely with the view of giving Brooklyn, Queens, and Richmond people through transportation from those boroughs into and through the business centres of Manhattan.

"We should have preferred postponing the filing of our proposal until after the city should have acted upon the Interborough proposal, but that would not have been fair either to the city's representatives or to our people. We cannot conceive, therefore, that the city's representatives are for a moment using our proposal as a means to procure better terms from the Interborough Company as is suggested in publications in this morning's newspapers. Such a use of our proposal would be not only inconsistent with the apparently sincere and conscientious study which the joint committee has given to our project, but would be a breach of good faith and a marked disregard of the interests of the people of Brooklyn.

"It may be true, although we cannot believe it, that the Interborough Company will attach, as a condition of acceptance of the city's demands, the exclusion of Broadway, Manhattan, as a distributing line for Brooklyn's, Queen's, and Richmond's passengers, and of course if such a stipulation should be made, no city officer could for a moment directly or indirectly accede to it. But in order that the city's interests might not be jeopardized by such a situation, the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company has assured the joint committee, in response to their inquiry, that it would in such an event include in its proposal of March 2, the entire triborough route, for which bids were recently received, subject to such slight modifications as may be necessary to fit the route into our general plan, and with such changes in specifications as would reduce the cost without diminishing the efficiency of operation.

"That assurance was given some weeks ago and still stands. In other words, as the situation is now left, every essential interest of Manhattan and Bronx, covered by the Interborough proposal, would be included in our proposal, and in addition we would be giving tremendously additional transportation advantages to Brooklyn, Richmond, and Queens, and no question of debt limit would stand in the way of carrying out this larger proposition.

"Not a single objection has been raised to the merits of our proposition as a transportation plan. In fact its merits are conceded, both by the public officers and by the people generally. We should prefer that it be carried out mainly as originally presented, but in any event, in view of our later assurances, it cannot be defeated upon any ground that the interests of Manhattan and Bronx are not also adequately taken care of."

COURT HOUSE FILES ARE STILL IN DANGER

Several Loads of Combustible Materials Removed, but More Remain.

ALL SAFE, SAYS McANENY

Justice Giegerich's Order to Clean Up the Basement Issued Under a Misunderstanding, He Asserts.

Steps were taken yesterday to rid the County Court House of much of the combustible material stored near the public records. Several wagon loads of oil, turpentine, and paint were taken away and placed in the Rutgers Street baths. The work was under the direction of Superintendent of Public Buildings Robert B. Insley, but he refused to discuss what he was doing, referring inquirers to Borough President McAneny.

President McAneny was greatly exercised Tuesday afternoon when he received an order from the Supreme Court Justices to remove the combustibles discovered by Supreme Court Justice McCall, and hurried to the Court House and begged that the order be withdrawn. His request was granted, and Justice Giegerich issued a memorandum in which Mr. McAneny was credited with the desire to safeguard the Court House.

After the clean-up a TIMES reporter inspected the basement. Nine oil barrels, some of which seemed empty, were still in the corridor. In another place carpenters were adding to the heaps of shavings on the floor. Hundreds of feet of lumber were piled up, while demolished desks and partitions from city offices were spread over a large area, piled almost to the ceiling within a few feet of the public records. No steps to remove this lumber were taken yesterday.

After the publication of the order Borough President McAneny made a statement in which he said that the statement that the Bureau of Public Buildings had turned the basement of the County Court House into a storage place for inflammable materials was a piece of misrepresentation, and that he understood the Judges were not accountable. He added:

A letter of the sort was prepared by some one for signature by the Judges, but the Judges upon learning the actual facts, promptly recalled this and filed instead a brief note requesting that an inspection be made and proper action taken to correct any conditions that might be found to be hazardous.

As a matter of fact, the shops and storage rooms, which it was said I had installed in the basement, have been there for many years. When the present Superintendent took office they really were a menace, but he has instituted and completed various improvements, not only in the basement, but throughout the building, that have reduced the fire risk materially. He advises me that from the basement alone, some months ago, more than twenty-five loads of old furniture were removed, and more than one hundred loads of debris and miscellaneous inflammable material of lighter character.

The other improvements made include the removal of all wooden partitions, the removal of the old wooden floors, and the substitution of cement, the removal of gas pipes and fixtures, not only in the basement, but wherever else records were stored, and the substitution of electric light, the cutting off of the high-pressure steam service, and the installation of a low-pressure connection with the Hall of Records, the storage of all of the more inflammable materials in a stone vault outside the building, protected by an underwriters' fireproof door.

As these changes have proceeded the records formerly in the cellar have been gradually shifted to fireproof rooms on the upper floors, and the County Clerk advises me that practically none of them is now exposed to any real danger.

The Superintendent has also taken out the painting and varnishing work previously done in the shops, and, as far as I am informed, the conditions that remain are perfectly safe, though the Superintendent will consult the Fire Department about them also and make any further changes that it may suggest.

Mr. McAneny was seen at his office on Tuesday afternoon, after the order of the Judges had been served on him. This order bore the "O. K." of Justice Leonard A. Giegerich. Mr. McAneny did not deny receiving this order, but refused absolutely to make public its contents. He was unwilling also to give to the press the second message from the Court House, a personal letter from Justice Giegerich.

DR. KUNITZER GOT SYDENHAM FUNDS

Committee Tells the State Board of Charities He Owes $595 to the Hospital.

KEPT NO BOOKS OR ACCOUNTS

Vice President Said to Have Taken Supplies, and It Is Charged That In His Work Home Was Paid for by the Hospital.

In a report submitted last night to the State Board of Charities in the United Charities Building, 104 East Twenty-second Street, a committee which has been investigating the affairs of Sydenham Hospital strongly condemned methods of conducting the hospital's affairs and proposed drastic action. The committee consisted of President William Rhinelander Stewart, President of the State Board of Charities; Dr. Stephen Smith, and Richard L. Hand of the board.

The investigation was instigated by the complaint of Egon Egghard, former Superintendent of the Sydenham Hospital, and was directed against Dr. Robert H. Kunitzer, Vice President of its managers and head of its Medical Board. Egghard is a nephew of Dr. Kunitzer. The committee recommends that Dr. Kunitzer withdraw from all business and financial administration of the hospital and calls his methods irregular. They suggest also that the business methods of the hospital be revised and that the City of New York withhold its support until the changes are met. The report says:

There can be no doubt but that at times during the years 1907 to 1910 certain materials were sent from the hospital to Dr. Kunitzer's residence, such as sheeting, cheese cloth, sheets, pillow cases, bathrobe material, and the like, and a sewing machine; some medicine was taken from the dispensary; some painting and repairing of electric lighting was done for which the hospital paid; some sewing was done by a maid in the employ of the hospital; considerable printing was procured for Dr. Kunitzer at the expense of the hospital; furniture which had been his was purchase for the hospital; certain of his livery bills were paid from hospital funds, and perhaps other things for his personal use and benefit were also paid from such funds.

Dr. and Mrs. Kunitzer testified generally that they had reimbursed the hospital, through cash payments to Superintendent Egghard for moneys thus expended upon their request, although they had never taken receipts for such payments. Mr. Egghard denied that these payments had ever been made to him, and in some cases it was shown that Dr. Kunitzer had, by his own signature, approved the payments from hospital funds of items that had been ordered for him. At any rate, none of such moneys, as far as could be ascertained, ever reached the hospital treasury.

When the fact is considered that Dr. Kunitzer practically controlled hospital finances, even to the smallest details, the presumption in this matter can hardly be in his favor, whatever his intentions in matters of this nature, and although the amount involved was insignificant his example was nevertheless bad and not conducive to an absolutely honest and scrupulous administration of the hospital's finances.

After criticising the "loose and unbusinesslike system" practiced "as to the custody and use of current income and expenses," the committee says "there appears to be a discrepancy, so far as we have been able to discover, for the months of March, April, and May, 1910. The sum of $595.56 is therefore, in our opinion, due to the hospital from Dr. Kunitzer."

The administration of the finances, it is said, "reflects seriously upon the capacity of the managers," and it is said:

The deliberate consignment of the funds generously contributed for the support and upbuilding of the hospital, and which were in the nature of trust funds, to the Vice President, who deposited them to his own account in banks and with brokers with whom he was doing business, and who acknowledges he kept no books of account, was in the highest degree censurable, not only on the part of the individual members, but especially of the Vice President, who, as the second officer of the board, approved of its action and administered the trust in the most reprehensible manner.

The "remarkable indifference to their duties" by the managers, it is said, is shown by "the fact that a deficiency of $19,000 was allowed to exist without an effort on the part of any member to raise this sum. Isaac Guggenheim offered to contribute $10,000 if the managers would raise the remainder, and subsequently to give $15,000, but," it is said, "not a cent was forthcoming from them." The committee then recommends:

First—That because of the irregular methods of Dr. Kunitzer as above set forth he be required to withdraw from all connection with the business and financial administration of the hospital.

Second—That a full Board of Directors be secured, composed of men having a real and active interest in the institution and willing to work for its maintenance and prosperity.

Third—That a proper system of administration be adopted and enforced, in accordance with familiar business methods and principles.

Fourth—That these recommendations, if approved by the State board, be communicated to the Board of Directors of the hospital, with the request of your honorable board that they be acted upon and complied with as soon as possible.

Fifth—That a copy of this report be sent to the Controller of the City of New York with the recommendation that public moneys be withheld from the hospital until the foregone changes are effected.

The report was accepted.

The committee to investigate charges made by Mrs. Pendleton Kennedy of the National League for the Protection of Colored Women against the Brooklyn Howard Colored Orphan Asylum reported that the complaint was based largely on hearsay evidence and that while conditions might be bettered the asylum was doing as well as might be expected.

A TIMES reporter read the findings of the investigating committee to Dr. Kunitzer last night. The doctor declined to comment on them on the ground that there will be a special meeting of the Directors of the hospital this afternoon, after which an official statement may be given out.

CUPID UNITES RIVAL CLANS.

Son of J. A. Tawney to Marry Daughter of His Political Enemy, Frank Day.

ST. PAUL, Minn., April 12.—Two of the bitterest political rivals in the country, both of them sons of Minnesota, are to be united by ties of marriage. Everett Tawney of the United States Customs Service, son of former Congressman James A. Tawney of Winona, the standpat Republican who went down to defeat in the recent election, is to marry in July Miss Constance Day, graduate of the University of Minnesota and daughter of Frank Day, private secretary to the late Gov. Johnson and for years Chairman of the Minnesota Democratic Committee, maker of all its platforms, and pilot of its candidates.

Miss Day is teaching in a school in Upper Minnesota, while young Mr. Tawney is with the Customs Service in Washington, D. C., and recently won a transfer to the St. Paul district, and is now in New York on special work.

The fathers of the young man and the girl have been on opposite sides of all political issues for a number of years, and always have been opposed to each other to the utmost. And now all differences are to be set aside. Father-in-law Day is to give his daughter in marriage to the son of his old political foe. And Father-in-law Tawney is to say, "Bless you, my daughter," to the child of his lifelong political opponent.

TOO MUCH BROADWAY, GLAD TO BE IN A CELL

Youth Held for Taking Girl's Watch Says He's Tired of Dodging the White Lights.

BORROWED THINGS TO PAWN

Only Way of Keeping Up the Pace, He Tells Detective—One Young Woman Lent Him a $2,000 Ring to Copy.

John Townsend Miller, a dapper youth of 22, was locked up in Police Headquarters last night, and as he turned away from Lieut. Mannion's desk to follow Detectives Ditsch and Unger to a cell he exclaimed fervently:

"Well, I'm glad its all over."

"I got the New York fever," Miller went on to explain. "I got into third speed with my clutch stuck and couldn't quit looping the loop up and down Broadway and dodging the white lights. I guess this is the best thing that could have happened to me."

Miller was arrested on the complaint of Miss Alice Johnson, who lives at 21 West Eleventh Street, where Miller has had a room. Miss Johnson told the detectives that she had lent a watch and chain to Miller in March, and had been unable to get them back, although she had asked for them repeatedly. According to the detectives, Miller admitted that he had pawned the watch and chain, and glibly said that among other things he had pawned were rings he had borrowed from three other young women.

"After one has pawned all one's own things," the detectives say Miller confessed, "it's an easy step to pawn things belonging to one's friends."

Miller was arrested at Thirty-fourth Street and Sixth Avenue. The detectives, who had never seen Miller before, but who had a good description of him, say that he was unmistakable as he swung up Broadway, appareled in the latest Spring raiment, and carrying himself with a jaunty air. It was to meet a young woman with whom he had an appointment that he came, yet he seemed not at all put out to encounter the detectives. He admitted his identity readily, and according to the detectives confessed himself bored by the attentions which he said a great many chorus girls and some few leading ladies insisted on showing him.

"I'll be glad to spend a quiet night in a cell," the detectives say he said. "It'll be the first in many weeks that I haven't spent up and down Broadway."

Miller said he was the son of John Francis Miller, formerly Secretary of the Equitable Fire Insurance Company, and a grandson of John Miller, at one time President of that company. An uncle, he said, was Francis S. Leggett. He said that although only 22 he had spent a year or so in Amherst College, and there had joined a fraternity which he said was the "Beta Theta Phi." Some time ago he had come to New York to study medicine.

"I got the Broadway fever," the detectives say Miller told them. "I hit up a good pace and didn't seem able to slow down. My father lost most of his fortune speculating in Wall Street, but from my mother, who had an independent fortune, I received a generous allowance up to a short time ago, when she heard of the gay times I was having and cut me off. I had quite a little jewelry then, and began letting it go a piece at a time to keep up my expenses.

"That was the beginning of my trouble. Mine all went after a while, and then I pawned a few things belonging to other folks. It was very simple after having got the habit with my own stuff."

In Miller's pockets the detectives say they found twenty-three pawn tickets. They were for rings, pins, several watches, two suits of clothes, a cigarette case, an umbrella, and a pair of skates. One ticket showed that a ring had been pledged for $450. Except for this, the tickets called for small amounts, most of them less than $10, although one or two represented loans of $15 to $20. The ring on which he got $450 belongs to Miss Dorothy Posner of 301 West Ninety-second Street, Miller said, according to the police.

He met Miss Posner last Summer when he was visiting his family in Atlantic City. Miller said, according to the detectives, and became fairly well acquainted with her. On his return to the city he lost track of the young woman until one day less than two weeks ago, when he was on an automobile ride with friends and saw her in Central Park West.

She was in an automobile, too, the police say Miller told them, and he changed cars, deciding to continue his ride with Miss Posner. He noticed the ring, one of emeralds and diamonds and worth $1,800, and asked her to let him see it. After that it took little persuasion to win permission to wear it for a while. He wore it a week, but on April 7 pawned it for $450.

Besides Miss Johnson, Miller, according to the police, said that he had borrowed jewelry from Miss E. Miller, a telephone girl in the Grand Central Station, and a Miss Butler, a nurse in Roosevelt Hospital. He had got a ring from each of them, the police say Miller told them, and pawned these.

According to Ditsch and Unger, Miller also got $202.84 from ex-Police Sergeant Churchill, whose restaurant he frequented when he was in funds. The detectives say Miller told how he had fooled Churchill into advancing him the money by telling him he had fallen heir to a big poultry farm in New Jersey. When Churchill found out that he had no farm, Miller said he wrote to his father, from whom Miller had pretended to inherit his farm. According to the detectives, Miller said he didn't know just what answer his father had made when he discovered that he was supposed to be dead.

Miss Dorothy Posner, who is the daughter of Samuel Posner, a banker of 111 Broadway, learned for the first time of Miller's arrest after she returned from the theatre. She was astounded by the news, declaring that she had believed him to be the son of wealthy parents. Miss Posner said she had met Miller in Atlantic City two years ago, being introduced to him by an old friend. She had not seen him again, she said, until five weeks ago.

It was then, and not two weeks ago, as the police say Miller told them, that the encounter in Central Park West occurred. Miss Posner said that Miller admired her ring, and said that he would like to have a duplicate of it made for his mother. Finally he asked her to let him have it long enough to have it copied by a well-known jewelry firm to which he said he would take it.

Miss Posner said she gave it to him without a second thought because of the standing of the person who had introduced him to her. Miss Posner said she had not worried about the ring, as she had supposed it would take some time to have a copy made. The ring, set with three diamonds and an emerald, was a present to Miss Posner from her father, who said last night that it had cost $2,000.

Joy Riding in City Autos Keeps Up.

The Aldermanic Committee to investigate "joy-riding" in city automobiles has found that the practice has not decreased since the Gaynor administration began, despite the repeated declarations to the contrary by Controller Prendergast. Managers of city garages said the city machines have been repeatedly used outside of office hours, sometimes being kept out all night. The worst offender seems to be the Water Department. The committee hopes to report to the Aldermen next week.

THAW WON'T BE EXAMINED.

Matteawan Investigation Farcical, Says His Counsel.

Harry K. Thaw, acting upon the advice of his counsel, Clarence J. Shearn, will not submit to an examination by Dr. Carlos MacDonald or Dr. Austin Flint, who are now testing the sanity of the inmates of the State Hospital for the Insane at Matteawan at the request of William Church Osborn and George E. Vankennan, appointed by Gov. Dix to investigate that institution. Announcement to this effect was made yesterday by Mr. Shearn.

"Such an examination," he said, "would be farcical and I would not permit it. These two doctors were hired as experts to testify that Thaw was insane. For five years past they have been drawing large sums for services rendered on that side of the case. Thaw would have a fine chance at their hands. Dr. Ferris, Superintendent of the Lunacy Commission, whose administration is being 'investigated' by these two experts, was also hired with them and testified with them against Thaw.

"It is these alienists, their mistakes, and methods that need investigation. No reforms will follow their investigating themselves. If this investigation is going to be a whitewashing affair, doubtless the Legislature will take a hand and order a real investigation."

That such an investigation is to be asked for was announced in Albany yesterday by Senator Stilwell, who said that he would introduce a resolution within a few days providing for the appointment of a joint committee of the Legislature to look into the affairs of Matteawan.

Assemblyman Hoyt of Dutchess County also said that he would introduce a bill placing the hospital within the sole jurisdiction of the State Commission in Lunacy, which now divides jurisdiction with the State Prison Department.

Special to The New York Times.

FISHKILL LANDING, N. Y., April 12.—Dr. Carlos MacDonald issued a statement to-night regarding the investigation of the Matteawan State Hospital. He said that the scope of the inquiry "includes a careful personal examination into the mental condition of every patient in the institution, except such as decline, of their own volition or under advice of others, to be examined, of which there are only a few."

HUMAN LEG IN A PARCEL.

No Signs of Preservatives Used, and Detectives Are Sent to Investigate.

Part of a human leg was found wrapped in a parcel in a doorway in Harlem last night. Coroner's Physician Lehane, who examined it, could find no sign of preservatives, but he declined to say that it was not placed there by a medical student. The discovery of a hand and foot in 125th Street two weeks ago was still fresh in Dr. Lehane's mind.

The parcel was found by Patrick Delaney, janitor of the tenement at 2,158 Eighth Avenue, as he stepped out for a breath of air. He called Policeman Singer of the West 125th Street Station and the two of them opened the package, exposing the leg which had been cut off about an inch above the ankle and three inches above the knee. The skin and flesh had been cut with a knife and the bone with a saw Dr. Lehane said when he examined it, and the work could not have been done better in a dissecting room.

Detectives from Headquarters were sent to Harlem to investigate.

Magazine advertisers want responsive circulation—a circulation composed of people they can hope to convert into customers.

A magazine to provide a responsive circulation must meet three requirements:

1 It must be thoroughly read by those who purchase it.
2 It must inspire those readers with confidence in its reliability and integrity.
3 It must appeal to an audience of sufficient intelligence to be well-to-do and, in consequence, have real purchasing power.

Consider, then, the standard magazines and how they measure up to these requirements, and consider, most particularly, McClure's, the most progressive, the most influential, the pre-eminent standard magazine.

Glorious Easter Flowers, Unique Gifts, and All the Accessories of Dress Share in This Unprecedented Easter Assemblage

Yes, This Bernard Model Has Been Copied in Every Detail To Sell at $37.50

That the women who wear these Suits in the Easter parade on the boardwalk at Atlantic City, or on Fifth Avenue, will be distinctively and beautifully attired is a fact not to be questioned.

We have had this charming Bernard model so carefully reproduced that it will be difficult for anyone to distinguish it from the original model. We were fortunate in getting the exact Bulgarian embroidery that gives such a delightful touch of color. We did not skimp even the touch of red, which is inset between the black braiding—in a word, the reproduction is exact. And we are sure that women will appreciate the beautiful quality of the navy or black serge, also the rich red peau de cygne lining.

25 Models in Tailored Suits at $25
Other Suits up to $165.

How to Dress Up a Little Dress

The Slip-over is a new Gimbel creation. It is an Empire tunic, made of imported silk marquisette. The keynote of its mode is simplicity, as it is fashioned with a kimono bodice and plain tunic—and it is simply trimmed with ball fringe. It is to be worn over a lingerie or black gown—and to incidentally change the appearance of the gown to such a degree that it will make it look like another costume. Rose, Empire green, old blue and black, $18.50.

Serge Dresses for street, house and steamer wear, $14.50 to $85.

Satin Dresses, $14.50 to $95.

Marquisette, voile, crepe, chiffon and English eyelet Dresses, $12.50 to $150. Third floor

Variety in Young Women's Suits Continually Reinforced— 25 Styles Alone at $25

We anticipated these busy days by re-ordering the suits that the young women particularly favor. Then, too, we are adding new styles every day. Therefore, the young women who select their Suits at the eleventh hour will have as good selection as those who were foresighted.

Our patrons are agreeably surprised to find that very few of our young Women's and Girls' Suits, Coats and Dresses require alterations. This is one reason why the Gimbel Store has scored such success with its apparel for the Younger Set. We have skirts made the right length and coats properly proportioned, so it is not difficult to be fitted.

These Suits at $25 Are Very Unusual

Not only in quality, fabrics and tailoring, but in good style. Many of the Suits are trimmed with braid or have a touch of red, Empire green or King's blue; others have sailor collars. Some of the Coats have the high waist-line effect, while many of the skirts have the loose panel back. Nearly all the coats have charming silk linings of contrasting colors. Mixed Cheviots, Serges and Hairline Fabrics in blue and black. 14, 16 and 18-year sizes.

If a young woman is going away for Easter she will also need a Top-Coat and a little Silk Frock.

Top-Coats, $15 to $33.50
Foulard Frocks, $15 to $36.50

Junior girls and girls from 6 to 14 years may also select their Easter apparel from the largest and most comprehensive collections that have ever been assembled. Third floor

PRYOR WOULDN'T FIRE FIRST SUMTER SHOT

Aged General Tells for First Time How He Let a Friend Open the Civil War.

LAST SHOT OF WAR HIS, TOO

Ruffin Blew Out His Brains After Lee Surrendered—Lincoln Saved Pryor When Others Refused.

Roger Atkinson Pryor, soldier, editor, lawyer, on the occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of the firing on Fort Sumter, told yesterday for the first time in his life—he is now 83 years old—why, after he had been requested by his superior officer to fire the first shot that opened the war, he arranged for his old friend Edmund Ruffin to do it.

Gen. Pryor was at first disinclined to touch on his personal deeds when a TIMES reporter found him in his library on the third floor of his home, at 3 West Sixty-ninth Street late yesterday afternoon, but as the dusk began to creep over him, he suddenly became youthfully enthusiastic, for the dusk, he said, reminded him of that early dawn at Fort Sumter.

"The first shot on Sumter freed the slaves," said Gen. Pryor, "but that was not my intention when I viewed the cannon's fuse, prepared to touch it off. But, as Emerson says, 'I builded better than I knew.' As I look over all these days since that eventful day, I am more than ever convinced that never, except by war, could you have got rid of slavery."

Gen. Pryor, then a lawyer of 33 from Virginia, had made a speech from the balcony of the Mills House in Charleston, just a few days before the 12th of April, 1861, in which he said: "Strike one blow and Virginia will secede in an hour by the Shrewsbury clock." It was in compliment for this speech that Gen. Beauregard bestowed upon young Pryor the honor of firing the first shot.

"It would have looked theatrical," said Gen. Pryor, seated in an arm chair, his right hand resting on an autograph copy of a photograph of Gen. Lee, a photograph which he later complimented as the only picture of Lee which contained the subtle blend of majesty and gentlemanliness. "I did not accept Gen. Beauregard's kind offer because it was not for me to accept it.

"Let me tell you of my friend Edmund Ruffin, however. Ruffin had a paper of which he had been editor for many years. It was really an agricultural paper, but when the war talk began he gave it a political tone. It was Edmund Ruffin who first advocated secession as distinct from Calhoun's doctrine of nullification. Virginia did not favor Ruffin's notion strongly, for the convention then in session at Richmond, had thrice voted on secession and had each time voted against it with an increasing majority. That is why Ruffin went to South Carolina to propound his doctrine where it would have more effect.

"He came to Charleston in early April. Charleston was beleagured with 3,000 or 4,000 young Southern gentlemen at the time who were all in fighting trim. With these boys Ruffin enlisted, donning the South Carolina uniform and shouldering a musket—this man with snow white hair and almost 75 years old. And he was present when Gen. Beauregard asked me to fire the first shot. I introduced him to the General, and told the General what Ruffin had done to further the cause of the South and persuaded him to let Ruffin fire that shot.

"The General was persuaded. Ruffin fired the shot. Virginia thereupon seceded, uniting the entire South. Ruffin then renewed his allegiance to Virginia, living in Amelia County, not far from Richmond. And it was there, when he heard of the surrender of Gen. Lee, that he blew out his brains literally, thus firing the last shot as well as the first.

"I cannot forget the civil war," Gen. Pryor went on as the dusk was growing deeper, "but in generations to come people will think of those differences less and less. The words North and South are simply geographical expressions now and have no political significance whatever. You need not ask me why—the single word 'Union' expresses everything."

"And what can you say of Lincoln?"

"I can have but one expression, seeing that he saved my life," replied Gen. Pryor. "I was held a prisoner in Fort Lafayette, New York Harbor, charged with being a spy, a dangerous spy, because I had succeeded in getting around Grant's rear when in West Petersburg and cutting his wires—and here the old veteran chuckled all over—a terrible thing because it cut poor Grant off from Washington. And when I was captured both Grant and Stanton refused to exchange me.

Two friends of mine, one of them John W. Forney, co-editor of a Democratic paper which I had owned in Washington, the other 'Wash' McLean, father of the publisher, John R. Mc Lean, called on me in prison and agreed to intercede in my behalf.

"Secretary of War Stanton, when confronted by my friend 'Wash,' had his little baby girl on his knee. 'Wash,' hoping to touch him, told him that I had several children at home, who were waiting for me, whereupon Stanton turned on him and said: 'No, damn him, we won't free him. We're going to hang him.'

"Then my friends went to see 'Old Abe.' But just here you must allow for a transition. At the second battle of Bull Run I was a Brigadier General of a brigade which marched in advance of the Confederate Army, which had severely defeated Gen. Pope, commanding the Federal forces. I came upon Pope's hospital camp, consisting of thousands of wounded soldiers, and without consulting Gen. Lee I took upon myself the responsibility of taking from all these wounded men a pledge, and sending them to their own lines on parole.

"When the President heard this from my friends, against the continued protest of Grant and Stanton he wrote an order for my exchange on a visiting card and ordered word sent to Col. Burke, commanding Fort Lafayette, to release me for exchange. But Stanton suddenly stopped exchanging prisoners, saying that all those he sent to the Federal lines were well fed, whereas all those he received in return were physically exhausted, and so I went home to Petersbury on parole instead. I was there at the evaucation of the city. Lincoln came there the day after the town surrendered. He and Grant were sitting together on a porch of a house not far from where I lived. Lincoln asked whether I was in Petersburg, and sent a messenger asking that I call on him in Grant's quarters.

"But I was still a Confederate soldier, and Lee had not surrendered, and so I decided that I could not go to see him. Nor did I ever see him after that. I had relations with him before that in the Lincoln-Douglas debates when Lincoln quoted from one of my editorials and gave me credit for the point of view which he tried to score against Douglas, but I never met him personally.

"Just one more word," he said, realizing that the room was dark; "it's a bit of the romantic, too. A long time after the war it chanced that I was going to London to defend the Phoenix Park murderers. On the boat I recognized a lady from Richmond who was taking a party of girl tourists abroad. She recognized me and introduced me to one of her pretty protégés. This young girl proved to be the daughter of Stanton, the same girl who sat on her father's knee when he made that truculent remark which almost sent me to perdition. By strange fate I was this girl's escort when the ship stopped at Liverpool."

SURVIVOR OF FORT SUMTER.

Francis Oakes of Flushing Says He Fired First Shot at Confederates.

One of the men who sighted one of the three guns fired in the defense of Fort Sumter, surrendered fifty years ago yesterday, held a quiet celebration with friends and relatives at his home, 23 Ash Street, Flushing. This man is Francis T. Oakes, head of the Oakes Manufacturing Company of Long Island City, where also he was once Water Commissioner when Patrick J. Gleason was Mayor. Mr. Oakes appears still to be in his prime. He received a medal nearly fifty years ago from the New York Chamber of Commerce as one of the soldiers who marched out of Fort Sumter. He is inscribed as a Corporal in Company E on the authentic roll of the garrison of the fort. Abner Doubleday, afterward Major General, was his Captain.

While telling of his experience Mr. Oakes said that he did not know whether any one else who was engaged at Fort Sumter was still alive, but if there were any such he would be glad to hear from them so that a reunion might be arranged.

On the night of April 10, 1861, Mr. Oakes was Corporal of the guard. About 10 o'clock a parleying party came to demand the surrender of the fort. The Confederates were placed in the guard house under the charge of Mr. Oakes, while Major Anderson discussed the proposition with his officers.

"Of course, I did not know who the men were," said Mr. Oakes. "But after Major Anderson had given them his answer I heard one of them say, 'That means that we will open fire,' to which Major Anderson replied: 'Very well, Sir.' This incident was followed by their departure. The hour was about midnight. As Corporal of the guard it was my duty to relieve the guards stationed on the ramparts, and I was thus engaged when I saw the first shot fired from Fort Johnson.

"We opened fire in reply at 7 o'clock. Gun No. 1 was under command of Sergt. Kearney, Gun No. 2 was under my command, and Gun No. 3 was under that of Corporal Ellerbrock. When the order was given to fire we all wanted to be first. I have always believed that my gun was discharged first, although, of course, that has been disputed by the other gunners."

Mr. Oakes was in command of one of the guns which fired the one hundred gun salute to the flag on April 13, when the troops marched out. He had a narrow escape in the accidental explosion which occurred during the firing and by which a private was killed.

He was promoted shortly afterward to be Orderly Sergeant, and as such finished his enlistment term, which expired Nov. 9, 1863. He re-enlisted as a Sergeant and continued as such until the close of the war. Mr. Oakes is a member of Lafayette Post No. 140, G. A. R., of this city.

FORT SUMTER'S FLAG.

Miss Cowley in Massachusetts Said to Have Colors Maj. Anderson Gave Up.

LOWELL, Mass., April 12.—The flag which flew over Fort Sumter when Gen. Beauregard opened fire on the Federal force there fifty years ago to-day is said to be in the posession of Miss Eliza Cowley of this city. Miss Cowley says that while in Charleston during the war the flag was presented to her brother Charles, now dead, and that it has always remained in the Cowley family.

Charles Cowley was Judge advocate on Admiral Dahlgren's staff in the South Atlantic Squadron during the latter days of the war. Her brother, Miss Crowley says, always maintained that the flag was the one which Major Anderson, the Federal Commander of the Fort, displayed at the time of the attack.

LIQUOR DEALERS WARNED.

Must Stop Selling Intoxicants to Minors, Says Children's Society.

The Children's Society, co-operating with the Wine and Liquor Dealers' Central Association, yesterday distributed to saloons in Manhattan and the Bronx 5,000 large cardboard notices calling attention to the law prohibiting the presence of persons under 18 years of age in barrooms. The Liquor Dealers' Association has notified saloon keepers that it will not furnish legal aid to its members prosecuted for selling intoxicants to minors.

Supt. Thomas D. Walsh of the Children's Society says that fully three-fourths of the cases of cruelty investigated by the society result from the sale of liquor to children under the age of 16 years. In these cases, he says, they are sent by their parents or guardians to the nearest saloon to buy whisky, gin, or beer, with which the adults carouse until they become furious and treat their little ones sometimes with the greatest cruelty.

AUTOISTS HALED TO COURT.

1911 License Numbers Lacking, but the State Secretary Gets the Blame.

Ten indignant owners of automobiles and chauffeurs were forced to appear in the Yorkville Court yesterday on summonses served on them by the police for not having displayed on their automobiles the license numbers for this year. In every case proof in the form of receipts and paid checks were shown to prove that the numbers had been applied for and paid for since last December, but that the Secretary of State had failed to send the new numbers, except in one case, and that arrived after the owner had been summoned.

Among those caught was George Roux, chauffeur for George J. Gould. He told Magistrate Butts that Mr. Gould had applied for his new number last year, but that it had not yet been received.

Magistrate Butts, in dismissing the cases against all of the defendants, denounced the delay on the part of the State Secretary, and said he was of the opinion that the automobilists had a right to run under the old numbers so long as the new licenses had been applied for and paid for.

Alleged Kidnapper a Fugitive.

Judge Rosalsky, in General Sessions yesterday ordered the $1,000 bail bond of Giacomo Crimi, who is charged with kidnaping the 5-year-old son of Mrs. Maria De Stefano of 214 Elizabeth Street on Aug. 8, 1909, forfeited on account of the non-appearance of the defendant when his case was called. The kidnapped boy was the son of wealthy parents, and $10,000 ransom was demanded for his return. This was later reduced to $2,000, which was paid. Crimi was caught by Detectives Vachris and Trabucci and held in $5,000 bail. This sum was later reduced to $1,000, which was furnished. It is believed that Crimi is still in the city.

Mrs. Coutant Gains Her Suit.

A jury before Supreme Court Justice Pendleton awarded yesterday to Mrs. Margaret B. Coutant $250 and the household furniture of her late husband, Charles A. Coutant, against the contention of her stepdaughter, Mrs. Jennie Coutant Mason. The value of the furniture was fixed at $5,000, which Mrs. Mason must pay if she does not return it. The $250 was awarded as damages for the detention of the furniture from Mr. Coutant's death to the present time.

GAY EASTER BONNETS GLADDEN 101 GIRLS

ONE WAS "A HETTY GREEN"

This Gorgeous Confection, with its Clusters of Sweet Peas, Won by a Small East Sider.

There were 101 happy little Italian girls in town last night, all with brand new Easter bonnets, the result of the hat-trimming bee and prize contest given by the New York Sunday School Association.

The 101 hats, trimmed with radiant colors, decorated the walls of the dining room of the apartment of Mrs. George Kemp, in the Hoffman Arms, Madison Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street, where the trimming bee has been going on. The walls were covered with them, and they presented a ravishing sight to the little girls who came to get them. There was an empty store in the lower part of the building, and there the youngsters were held until they could be taken up in groups of four or five. The children did not know this at first, and droves of them were continually making their way into the main entrance of the building, only to be shooed out by the elevator man.

If any one thinks that a little Italian girl, because her mother may not always have been a hat wearer, has not a fastidious taste in hats a visit to Mrs. Kemp's impromptu millinery shop would have undeceived them. The biggest ones with the best records in the school were allowed to make their choice of hats. No Fifth Avenue milliner's customers could have been more particular.

One of the littlest girls got one of the best hats by sheer persistence, and a small boy who came all the way from Brooklyn alone showed the best taste in hats. Little Louise Partenio was the small girl who got what she wanted because she wanted it. She was a 7-year-old mite from Brooklyn, with a bright little face, which perhaps was another reason for her success. A half a dozen women surrounded little Louise, and though this was her first appearance as an applicant for a prize hat and she was too little to have a choice, as a special favor she was asked which one she would like.

The little candidate had good taste. She pointed to one of the hats trimmed by the First Prize hat trimmer, a pretty white straw trimmed with Hettie Green green ribbon—a brand new shade named for the richest woman—and some artificial cherries that looked ripe and luscious.

"No, dear," said one of her admirers, "I'm sorry, but you can't have that; one of the older girls must have that." Then pink, and blue, and yellow, and lavender, and red hats were tried on her, but with no success. She smiled sweetly, but she did not like them.

"Then, what would you like?" little Louise would be asked by one after another of the amateur milliners, and each time with the same sweet smile her small finger pointed in the direction of the First Prize Hat. And she got it. She wanted it so much and she smiled so sweetly that all the laws of the game were suspended, and Louise and the Hettie Green ribbons and cherries went away together happily.

The only boy was named Jimmie, and he had come for a hat for his little sister Grace. Jimmie was asked what hat he would like, and immediately picked out one of dark blue straw trimmed with little clusters of pink rosebuds, a pretty childish hat that any mother would be pleased to have her little daughter wear. But there was an outcry when Jimmie demanded it.

"Oh, no," cried all the women together, "your little sister will want a brighter hat than that. She won't like a dark blue hat." Then they took to Jimmie hats trimmed with pale pink, with pale blue, with daisies, and all sorts of flowers, but Jimmie was adamant. It was a serious matter, and Jimmie, with a severe masculine air, held his own against nine women who were all talking to him at once. He would only finally compromise on a little brown hat trimmed with field flowers. He had a newspaper to take the hat home in. The women pinned it up securely and wished him a Happy Easter.

"Same to you," returned Jimmie, as he trudged off happily.

Carrying the hats home was an interesting part of the performance. A few little girls were taking younger sisters' hats home with them, and they carried them in piles like pies at a baker's. Some of them had brought regular milliner's paper bags. The wisest came without hats at all and went away with the new Easter ones, which simplified matters, except that there was no elastic on them, and they were continually slipping down over the eyes or trying to soar away on the breezes.

Mrs. Hetty Green has been a sort of behind-the-scenes sponsor for the hat-trimming contest, and came in late in the afternoon, but would not make a public appearance. There was a "Hetty Green" hat among the 101, a pretty simple hat trimmed with many colored sweet peas, and was the one Mrs. Green considered the prettiest of the lot. Little Rosie Lacorta of the east side got it and had her picture taken in it.

READY FOR LONG ISLAND RUSH

Railway Increases Its Platform Facilities at the Pennsylvania Station.

In preparation for the Summer rush the Long Island Railroad is increasing its facilities in the Pennsylvania Station. At present the railroad uses two platforms at the Seventh Avenue and Thirty-third Street ends of the station. One of these platforms merely takes care of the incoming passengers. The other, the broadest in the station, is used both for incoming and outgoing passengers. With these facilities the railroad has so far been able to handle its passengers. During the Belmont Park aviation meet last Fall, however, the company used the main Pennsylvania station, which was not then in use by the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Since the opening of the tubes last September, the Long Island passenger traffic has increased steadily, and it has been found necessary to obtain the use of another platform. The company is now at work on the construction of a steel bridge which will connect this platform with the waiting room and permit of its use, both for incoming and outgoing passengers. This bridge is now well under way, and should be finished in another two weeks.

FIRE ON AEROPLANE FIELD.

Three Machines Quickly Hauled Out of Danger at Mineola Fair Grounds.

Special to The New York Times.

MINEOLA, L. I., April 12.—On his way back from supper to-night the watchman of the Mineola Fair Gorunds heard an alarm of fire and wondered where the blaze was. The sight of people running toward the northeast end of the Queens-Nassau Agricultural Society's grounds and a flickering light near the tree tops started him running, too.

He found the high board fence which runs from the old country road to the Aero Club grounds was ablaze. The brisk northeast wind was carrying sparks in the direction of the exhibition halls, two of which were soon ignited. As this part of the grounds is not in the village limits there was only an old well to draw water from.

The Mineola firemen succeeded in putting out the fire in the two halls, but were not so successful with the fence along the inside of which is a series of stalls. Across the road are the sheds of the Aeronautical Society, and the field on which all the aeroplane tests were held last year. The two or three machines that were on the grounds were immediately run out of danger.

Capt. Thomas Baldwin, who returned yesterday from an aeroplane exhibition tour of Korea, China, Japan, the Sandwich Islands, and the Philippines, set to work fire-fighting, with his mechanics and other men about the field. A loss of several thousand dollars will be sustained in the burning of about two hundred sheds and stalls. The cause of the fire is unknown. Two years ago a fire, believed to have been incendiary, destroyed the society's grandstad, at a loss of $12,000.

PLAZA CLERK BADLY HURT.

W. M. Norton in a Hospital with Three Cuts in His Head.

William M. Norton, chief mailing clerk at the Hotel Plaza, was taken to the German Hospital yesterday, according to a woman at the boarding house where he lives at 122 West Fifty-eighth Street, with three bad cuts in his head. His condition is said to be serious. Dr. Blumbart, who also lives at the West Fifty-eighth Street house, was called at 5 o'clock in the morning to attend to Norton's wounds, according to the woman, and he had the injured man taken in a private ambulance to the hospital.

According to clerks at the Plaza, Norton was married about two years ago to a St. Louis woman, but they said they understood that they had separated soon afterward. It was learned at the boarding house that Norton had lived there alone for the last two years.

The first story that reached the Plaza was that Norton had been held up in Central Park on his way home. Though his acquaintances could not understand how he came to be in the Park on his way home from Fifty-ninth to Fifty-eighth Street, credulence was given to the rumor because Norton is a man who dresses well and wears valuable jewelry. The rumor started when a man called up the Plaza over the telephone and said that Norton had met with an accident and would not be able to come to work.

At the boarding house in West Fifty-eighth Street last night it was said that Norton's injuries were the result of a fall in the street. At the hospital information was refused concerning Norton.

URGE DOTY'S REAPPOINTMENT

Commercial Bodies Want Him as Health Officer Again.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 12.—Gov. Dix has not yet made a decision in reference to the place of Health Officer of the Port of New York. Dr. Alvah H. Doty, the present Health Officer, whose term of four years expired on Feb. 28, 1911, is a candidate for reappointment, and is being strongly backed by commercial bodies of New York City and prominent members of the medical profession throughout the State. Dr. Jenkins, a brother-in-law of Richard Croker, is also said to be a candidate for the place.

It was said at the Executive Chamber to-day that the endorsements of Dr. Doty were the strongest that have been filed this year for any candidate for office. The salary is $12,500 a year, and a nomination to the office must be confirmed by the Senate. The Health Officer has control over the quarantine stations and the law requires that he shall have practical knowledge of quarantine diseases.

AMAZING WORK ON CANAL.

Matthew Clark, British Engineer, Says It Will Be Opened Jan. 1, 1914.

Among the passengers arriving from the West Indies yesterday on the Royal Mail steam packet Magdalena was Matthew Clark, the English engineer. Mr. Clark is the member of the firm of Sir John Jackson, Limited, of London, who constructed the Trans-Andean Railway from Buenos Aires to Valparaiso, tunneling the Andes at an altitude of 10,000 feet. He is accompanied here by his daughter Inez.

Mr. Clark said he was going to London to consult his firm in regard to the construction of the new railway from Arica, Peru, to La Paz, Bolivia, at a height of 14,000 feet, which would be completed, it is expected, by the end of the year. Four thousand Indians are employed in the construction, as they stand the altitude better than any of the other laborers who could be obtained on the west coast.

Mr. Clark spoke enthusiastically of the Panama Canal and said that he felt confident it would be open by Jan. 1, 1914.

"The adoption of the lock system," he said, "was a stroke of genius, and its opponents have been astonished at the rapid progress in construction of that has been made. I went over the entire works in an automobile kindly lent me by Col. Goethals. The organization and the work that has been done on the isthmus are amazing.

"The Chilean Government," continued Mr. Clark, "has appropriated $20,000,000 for improving the harbor at Valparaiso and other ports, and I am going to consult our firm about bids for the contracts."

Another passenger on the Magdalena was Gen. Pedro Ostina, the new Colombian Minister to Washington, who was in Jamaica on his way to England when he received a cable message instructing him to proceed to Washington and relieve Señor Borda, the outgoing Minister. It is three months since he left Bogota, and therefore he knew nothing, he said, of the agitation which had been going on there in regard to the separation of Colombian from Panama.

G. E. Somerset, Captain of the Marylebone Cricket Club of London, arrived on the same liner from the West Indies, with five members of his team, after a tour through the islands, where they played thirteen matches, winning five and losing four. The rest were drawn games.

AUTO RIDES IN DIVORCE SUIT.

Mrs. Sanger's Complaint Tells of Some Gay Trips Her Husband Took.

Gay trips to the Blossomheath Inn, near New Rochelle, in touring cars, and later visits to restaurants in and about Times Square are said to figure in a divorce suit against Louis P. Sanger, son of Frank E. Sanger. Sanger's wife, Florence L. Smith Burns Sanger, was a divorcee when she married him on Dec. 21, 1908. Testimony in the suit was taken before Abraham Stern as referee.

Harry Schade, former house detective at the Hotel Plaza, got the evidence on which Mrs. Sanger sued. He found that Sanger kept his car in a garage at Seventh Avenue and Fifty-first Street and followed him on his night excursions, trailing him in and about New York. He followed him on one occasion from the Blossomheath Inn after Sanger and a woman companion from an apartment in West Ninety-second Street had consumed a large amount of wine. Schade said he thought he knew the woman, but was not allowed to give her name in the testimony before the referee. At the time that Schade got the strongest evidence on which Mrs. Sanger relies by breaking into a hotel room rented by Sanger, he says Sanger gave him a hard fight.

Mr. and Mrs. Sanger lived for some time after their marriage at the Rossleigh Court, Central Park West and Eighty-fifth Street. Mrs. Sanger is now living at the Hotel Manhattan.

QUITS OELRICHS & CO. AND GERMAN LLOYD

Mr. Winter's Retirement Taken to Mean Steamship Company Is to Direct Its Business.

CHANGES HAVE BEEN MADE

New Manager from Abroad Has Reorganized Many Agencies—G. Schwab Retired on Account of Ill-Health.

Oelrichs & Co., agents here for the North German Lloyd Line, announced yesterday the resignation of Hermann Winter, assistant manager of the firm and of the steamship line it represents, and one of the most prominent men in the shipping business at this port. Mr. Winter has been twenty-six years with Oelrichs & Co., and the reason assigned for his retirement now is simply his desire to drop business cares and take a long rest. He will probably be succeeded by Frederick Nordenholdt, who has been twenty-five years with the firm.

Gustav H. Schwab, Jr., who, with his father and Herman C. Von Post, comprise the firm of Oelrichs & Co., issued this brief statement:

"Mr. Herman Winter has resigned, much to our regret, after twenty-six years of service with our firm."

While it is not admitted in the office of the North German Lloyd Line, steamship men see in the resignation of Mr. Winter another assertion of the policy of the line to assume control of its own business. The first step noticed was made several months ago, when Charles von Helmolt, who was for years the general manager of the North German Lloyd Line's passenger department at Bremen, resigned as a Director of the company and came to the New York office to become head of the passenger business in America, and also to represent Oelrichs & Co., who remain the agents of the line here. His coming followed the practical retirement of Gustav H. Schwab, who for more than a year has given little attention to business on account of ill-health. Though Mr. von Helmolt is classed as an "employe" of Oelrichs & Co., it has become apparent that he is in complete control of the passenger department and the policy of the line.

One of his first acts "for the good of the service" was to appoint Edward Wortmann, then head of the cabin department, as assistant general manager, while he made Hermann Muhlenbrock head of the cabin department. He also made changes in agencies throughout the country.

For years Mr. Winter was the right hand man of Gustav H. Schwab, and when failing health made it imperative that Mr. Schwab give up the active management of affairs at least for a time the great bulk of the business connected with the office of the North German Lloyd fell upon Mr. Winter. He worked hard and contributed much to the efficiency of the force. With the coming of Mr. von Helmolt, Mr. Winter found one to share with him the responsibility of the agency. He was then able to give more time to the outside interests of the steamship company, and has had less to do with administrative affairs. He represented the North German Lloyd Line in the Atlantic Steamship Conference and the Railroad Association. He had also the additional duty of managing affairs that had to do with the Immigration Bureau and untangling the legal differences which arose from time to time between the steamship company and the Immigration Department on Ellis Island.

When what is known as the white slave amendment to the immigration law was passed the right of the Government to deport undesirable aliens of a certain class was extended indefinitely. The Government attempted to deport several such aliens at the expense of the steamship line upon whose steamships such undesirables arrived here. The steamship lines refused to deport such free, and set up the contention that no alien after being here more than the three years, the limit for deportation under the old law, should be deported except at the expense of the Government. The court so decided, and in making this fight Mr. Winter had much to do with the conduct of the fight and the winning of the victory.

Mr. Winter's parents came to this country from Bremen, and he was born near Baltimore 43 years ago. He received much of his education under Dr. Theodore Heidenfeld of the German-American Institute in this city. After being clerk in an importing house Mr. Winter got his first taste of the steamship business as a clerk with Vernon H. Brown & Co. He went to Oelrichs & Co. as Mr. Schwab's first stenographer. Within five years he had become practically Mr. Schwab's assistant. Mr. Winter is popular in the office. Many expressions of regret were heard there when the news of his resignation became public.

LEAVES SAVANNAH LINE.

Traffic Manager Horton Is Going with Automobile Club of America.

James C. Horton, who has been for years Passenger Traffic Manager of the Ocean Steamship Company, known as the Savannah Line, has resigned to go with the Automobile Club of America. The announcement was made yesterday that Mr. Horton would leave his present place on the last day of the month.

He is well known in the railroad and the coastwise steamship business. He entered the railroad business in 1884 as an office boy in the Freight Agent's office of the Norfolk & Western Railroad at Lynchburg, Va. He rose to be in charge of the union ticket office of the Southern, Norfolk & Western, and Chesapeake & Ohio Railroads. Next he became Passengerr Agent of the Southern Railroad in Washington, and later the agent in Baltimore.

Mr. Horton left the railroad business to become General Passenger Agent of the Ocean Steamship Company, and in 1907 he was made Passenger Traffic Manager.

BIG TEXAN IRRIGATION PLAN.

$5,000,000 Project Covering 400,000 Acres and Hydro-Electric Works.

Special to The New York Times.

AUSTIN, Texas, April 12.—In making application to the State Railroad Commission to-day for extending the common point territory to Del Rio, the petitioners stated that ex-Gov. David R. Francis of St. Louis is associated with D. B. Chapin of Edinburg, Texas, and other large land owners of this State in a scheme to construct a great irrigation system and install hydro-electric plants on the Devils and Pecos Rivers in the western part of Texas.

The estimated cost of the proposed works is more than $5,000,000. It was stated that nearly 400,000 acres would be irrigated. Two large dams are to be constructed, one across each of the rivers named. Over 30,000 horse power will be developed by the hydro-electric plants, and several hundred miles of power transmission lines will be built.

It is the greatest private irrigation and hydro-electric project ever planned in the Southwest. Most of the land to be irrigated has already been purchased by the syndicate.

Want a Home for Two Children.

The State Charities Aid Association is appealing for a good home in a private family for a little brother and sister aged respectively 7 and 6. They are unusually attractive children, according to the Assistant Secretary, Miss Clark, with regular features, brown hair, blue eyes, and affectionate dispositions. They have been in an institution for the last year because their mother is a paralytic, and their father has abandoned his claim to them. The association wants to find a childless couple that will become foster parents for them.

WATCHMAN SHOOTS CAPTAIN.

Army Officer Just Back from Philippines in San Francisco Hospital.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 12.—As a result of a fight with John J. Hayes, an aged night watchman, to-day, Capt. Frank A. Cook, subsistence officer of the Commissary Department of the regular army, lies dangerously wounded in the Central Emergency Hospital.

Cook, accompanied by his two sons and two daughters, arrived here yesterday from Manila on the transport Sheridan. With his family he visited relatives last night. Leaving them at their hotel, he went to another hotel, where, according to his story, he had a few drinks. Early this morning he broke in the door of a store on Market Street and was met by Watchman Hayes. Hayes says that he struck Cook on the head with his club when the latter refused to leave the place. According to Hayes, Cook seized the club and returned the blow. Hayes then fired two shots and the officer, one penetrating his left lung and barely missing his heart, the other going wild.

Policemen then entered the place and separated the men. Cook was taken to the Central Emergency Hospital, where Dr. G. H. Terrill probed for the bullet. While Dr. Terrill was operating he recognized Cook as a brother officer, who served with him in the campaign against the Apache Chief Geronimo in Arizona in 1885. At that time Cook was a Lieutenant of the Fourth Cavalry and Terril was a post surgeon.

When Capt. Cook regained consciousness he declared that from the time he left the hotel his mind was a blank, and he inquired eagerly for the details of the fight which had led to his wound. He will probably recover.

MAY BE JOHN P. HARRINGTON.

Man Found Exhausted in Mojave Desert Thought to be Scientist.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Officials of the Bureau of Ethnology believe that the man found half dead from hunger and thirst near Reno, Nev., may prove to be John P. Harrington of Santa Fé, N. M., the youngest member of the Government research party which went among the Mojave Indians on March 1. The party was composed of Harrington and Prof. Junius Henderson, and W. W. Robbins of the University of Colorado at Boulder, Col. Prof. Hodge of the Bureau of American Ethnology has telegraphed for further particulars of the finding of the man.

Dispatches from Reno last night told of the discovery of the unknown by two miners, Frank Heine and Elias Dart, forty miles south of Searchlight. The man had neither food nor water for more than two days. He was carrying heavy packs of camera plates and camping utensils. It is thought that he became separated from the rest of his party and the guides, who are thought to have reached Fort Mojave safely.

While Prof. Hodge is not certain, he feels reasonably sure that the man in the desert is Harrington, youngest member of the party. This party went into the field March 1 under joint direction of the American Bureau of Ethnology, the National Museum, and the Archaeological Institute of America.

ELUDES ARREST BY SUICIDE.

Ex-Schenectady Mayor Shoots Himself as Officers Wait at His Door.

Special to The New York Times.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., April 12.—Jacob W. Clute, who held the distinction of being Mayor of this city for three terms, committed suicide to-day at his home when the Sheriff was waiting at his door with a warrant for his arrest, indirectly caused by the misappropriation of funds intrusted to the former Mayor.

Mr. Clute had never confided in any one that he needed financial assistance. He owned a home, valued at $12,000, and was thought to be in good circumstances. It is now learned that his home is mortgaged for $8,000, and that he had become embarrassed in other directions.

In December, 1905, Peter Banta died in Clinton Park, in Saratoga County, and Mr. Clute was named executor of the estate. The property was valued at $67,936.66. In February last the Citizens' Trust Company obtained a judgment for $914.90 against Mr. Clute for his indorsement on a note. Eight days later five judgments in favor of Banta legatees against Mr. Clute as trustee were filed, the largest being on a claim by Anna Eliza Mackey for $1,146. It was on the action taken by Anna Eliza Mackey, to whom Mr. Clute is said to have been indebted for about $800 on the above judgment, that the warrant for his arrest was issued.

STRANGLED HER CHILD.

Insane Mother Tightens Towel When Girl Begs for Life.

BOSTON, April 12.—Mrs. Clara Russell strangled her daughter Marjorie to death at their home, 1,191 Washington Street, Lower Mills, Dorchester, to-day. Mrs. Russell, who is about 45 years old, lived alone with her child, who was 12, having been separated from her husband for several years.

The tragedy was disclosed this morning when Gilbert Munroe, an uncle of the child, called at Mrs. Russell's home. Munroe talked with the woman for a few minutes, and then asked "How is Marjorie?"

"She is dead," replied Mrs. Russell.

"What has happened?" asked Munroe in amazement.

"Oh, I killed her," answered Mrs. Russell. "I thought it was about time to put her out of the way," she added.

Munroe notified the police and Mrs. Russell was taken into custody. An investigation showed that the mother had strangled the child with a towel as the little one was asleep in bed.

Mrs. Russell told the police that as she was tightening the towel about Marjorie's throat the child awoke and begged the mother not to kill her. It is supposed that Mrs. Russell became suddenly insane.

$2,800 IN JEWELS MISSING.

Mrs. Douglass's Trinkets Disappear While She Is at Sister's in Baltimore.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, April 12.—Detectives are searching the city for $2,800 worth of jewelry stolen from or mislaid at the home of General Passenger Agent C. W. Bassett of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. Mrs. S. J. Douglass, who lives at the Sherman Square Hotel, New York City, a sister of Mrs. Bassett, is the owner of the jewels. Mrs. Douglass came to Baltimore on Sunday to look after the Bassett household while her sister underwent an operation in a hospital.

The detectives up to this time have not found any clues to the missing jewels, and think that Mrs. Douglass in the excitement may have mislaid them. Detective Captain McGovern describes the missing jewels as follows:

Two-stone diamond ring valued at $400; two-stone diamond ring valued at $1,200; diamond crescent - shaped breastpin, twelve large stones finished on ends with rose diamonds; plaque of nine large diamonds, set in platinum, and finished in rose diamond. Each of the last is valued at $600.

ROOSEVELT DENIES MORMON CHARGES

HAD NO SECRET AGREEMENT

Consulted Senator Smoot Often as President Because He Favored His Conservation Policy.

Col. Roosevelt, whom Mrs. H. S. Owen accused of being in collusion with the Utah Mormons in a speech before the League for Civic Education on Monday, is out in the current Collier's with his views on the Mormon problem. He says that the Mormons have been much misrepresented in recent magazine articles, especially as to some matters which he had the Secret Service look up while he was President, and at the same time pays his respects to editors who repeat certain charges against him.

The Colonel's views are in the form of a letter written to a correspondent, who sent to him the charges to the effect that he had traded his support to Senator Smoot, when the latter was on trial, for Mormon votes, and at the same time pledged that he would cease working for a Federal marriage law which would be likely to interfere with Mormon polygamous tendencies.

A note from the correspondent explained that this charge was originally formulated in the office of a Salt Lake newspaper, and has been repeated since by persons engaged in raising money for anti-Mormon work, and by politicians who were troubled over Col. Roosevelt's failure to fall in with their plans to have Senator Smott ousted.

"It is difficult to know how to deal with a story like this," says the Colonel. "It is not merely an outrageous lie, but one so infamous, so absolutely without the smallest particle of foundation, that it is utterly impossible that the men making the charge should be ignorant of the fact that they are lying.

"I never heard of this magazine article, and do not know who wrote it. But whoever did, knew perfectly well that he was lying. The other magazine articles you quote I have not seen, but if they in any shape or way resemble the one from which you quote they are equally false.

"The accusation is not merely false, but so ludicrous that it is difficult to discuss it seriously. Of courrse, it is always possible to find creatures vile enough to make accusations of this kind. The important thing to remember is that the men who give currency to the charge, whether editors of magazines or the Presidents of colleges, show themselves in their turn unfit for association with decent men when they secure the repetition and encouragement of such scandals, scandals which they perfectly well know to be false.

"Not only was no such bargain made by me, but equally, of course, no such bargain was made by President Taft or by any one who could speak for any portion of the Republican National organization. No such bargain was ever in any way, directly or indirectly, suggested to or considered by me. It is not merely an atrocious falsehood, but it could by no possibility be anything but a falsehood.

"Neither the Church nor any one on behalf of the Church ever agreed to deliver to me the votes of the States mentioned, nor to try to do so; nor was any allusion to the matter ever made to me. Neither Senator Smoot nor any other citizen of Utah was, as far as I know, ever so much as consulted about the patronage in the States surrounding Utah, nor did the Mormon hierarchy, through Senator Smoot or any one else, ever express a single wish in connection with that patronage.

"The appointments were made in Wyoming and Idaho precisely on the same system as they were made in New Jersey and Massachusetts, and no more attention was paid to any candidate's religious qualifications in one set of States than in another. Moreover, the same policy precisely was followed in Utah. One Senator was a Gentile and one a Mormon. I consulted both. Generally I found Senator Smoot more favorable to the cause of conservation than the majority of his colleagues in the Senate, and on this matter I consulted him more freely than I did most other Senators, although there were some I consulted even more freely than I did him.

"As to there being a cessation of the movement for Federal control of marriage, including divorce and polygamy, so far as I know there never was such cessation; personally I have always favored such control.

"Senator Smoot came to me of his own accord and assured me that he was not a polygamist, and I may also add that it was the universal testimony of those who knew anything about his domestic life that it was exemplary in every way. I did not interfere in any way as to retention in the Senate, save that where Senators came up to speak to me on the subject I spoke to them freely along the lines I have here outlined, taking the view which I believe is the only view that an American can consistenly take, namely, that if Mr. Smoot or any one else had disobeyed the law he should, of course, be turned out, but if he had obeyed the law and was an upright and reputable man in his public and private relations it would be an outrage to turn him out because of his religious belief."

$20,000 FOR HIS LOST LEG.

Salesman Gets a Verdict Against a Taxicab Company.

William B. Cappell, a salesman, won a $20,000 verdict against the New York Transportation Company yesterday in the Supreme Court before Justice Delany and a jury. He was run down by a taxicab belonging to the company, and a ruptured blood vessel in his leg necessitated its amputation a year after the accident. He sued for $50,000. It was shown that he had been earning $8,000 a year. His only witnesses were himself and a newsboy, Meyer Bernstein, from whom he bought a newspaper just before the accident, which happened at Broadway and Twenty-ninth Street.

The defense of the taxicab company was that Cappell was intoxicated. One of the company's witnesses testified that he had seen Cappell zigzagging on the car tracks for five minutes before he was struck. Francis X. McCollum, Cappell's lawyer, asked the witness how many street cars passed during that time, and the witness replied that he had seen but one. Thereupon Mr. McCollum declined to cross-examine him further.

In his charge to the jury Justice Delany said that the jury need not consider the amount of liquor which the defense contended Cappell had drunk previous to the accident, but only what he did as a result of his drinking. "Intoxication," ruled the court, "is not an excuse for negligence."

LEASES EHRICH'S STORE.

J. L. Kesner of Chicago Is to Begin Business in It After It Is Remodeled.

Speculation and rumor concerning the disposition of the former Ehrich Brothers store property were set at rest last night by the announcement that J. L. Kesner of Chicago had taken a long-time lease of the land and buildings and would open a new store as soon as the buildings could be remodeled and an addition built to the Twenty-second Street corner. The location in Sixth Avenue, extending from Twenty-second to Twenty-third Street, is one of the choicest spots for retail business in the city.

J. L. Kesner's experience in retailing began as a cashboy in the Fair—one of the big department stores of Chicago. With this he was connected for thirty-two years, passing through every department and grade up to the position of General Manager, which he held for fifteen years, resigning a year ago because he had become one of the largest individual owners of downtown real estate in Chicago, and his property demanded his personal attention.

When he heard of the closing of the Ehrich store he took the next train here to see what could be done with the site and buildings.

DIES OF A RARE DISEASE.

Case of J. M. Rhodes, Jr., the Nineteenth in Medical History.

PHILADELPHIA, April 12.—After three years' illness from a disease so rare that it is said to have been the nineteenth case in the history of medicine, James M. Rhodes, Jr., widely known socially and who, while attending Princeton University, was a guard on the 'Varsity football team, died to-day at his home at Villanova, near here.

The disease that killed Mr. Rhodes is known to physicians as blastomycetes, and is manifested by a malignant vegetable growth which attaches itself to the intestines. Mr. Rhodes was attacked by the malady while on a visit to the South. He was 35 years old, and was graduated from Princeton in 1897.

ADIRONDACKS IN DEEP SNOW.

New York Central Need Not Use Oil in Engines Until May.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 12.—Because of the severity of the past Winter in the Adirondack region, the Public Service Commission has granted a petition of the New York Central Railroad Company deferring from April 15 to May 1 the time when the company must install oil-burning apparatus on its lines running through the forests.

The company states that there is still from 12 to 18 inches of snow along its lines in the north.

OLD CONVICT'S PLEA WINS HIS FREEDOM

TELLS A PATHETIC TALE

Seventeen of His Sixty Years Spent in Prison and Never Got $20 by His Thefts.

James Brown, an ex-convict 60 years old, who has been in the Tombs awaiting sentence on his fourteenth conviction, received his freedom and a job from Judge Rosalsky in General Sessions yesterday after he had written a letter to the court in which he admitted his guilt. When the prisoner was arraigned for sentence he appeared without a lawyer and standing up said in a voice which was so weak that few could hear:

"Your honor, I have never had a chance, and have never expected one. I make no claim that I have been persecuted by the police; nor have I been driven back to crime because of the action of detectives. All my crimes have been nothing more or less than insane freaks, and God Almighty knows that I have suffered for them. I have spent seventeen years of my life behind prison bars, and all that I have ever realized from the proceeds of my crimes would not amount to $20."

Judge Rosalsky told Brown that he knew him well and said he had received a letter from the prisoner. He then read the prisoner's letter so that all those in the courtroom could hear what he had to say. Here it is:

I wish you would look this statement over. I want to call your attention to the fact that I am no desperate character nor a professional thief. Of course, I expect you will send me to State prison. I pleaded guilty to attempted burglary in the third degree, and have a record which reaches back to 1873.

I was discharged from prison in 1875, and from that time on to 1889 I worked hard for a living. I was never during that time under arrest. Then my eyesight failed me, and, crippled with rheumatism, I was handicapped in my struggle for existence. I worked whenever I was able and could get it. I am simply an unfortunate burglar in hard luck.

This is a case of breaking a window, and the authorities made a case of attempted burglary of it. My prison experience has been a hard one. No man knows any better than myself that what a man sows that shall he reap. But, on the other hand, walking through the streets day after day on an empty stomach, with no prospect of work in view, is a mighty tough proposition. I am not a criminal at heart, and if you will make my sentence consistent with the demands of justice, that is all I ask.

"Now, Brown, I am going to give you your chance," said Judge Rosalsky after reading the letter.

"You are charged with breaking a window in a building at 306 Broadway and attempting to steal trinkets valued at less than $2. Your life clearly shows that crime is unprofitable. If you had been indicted as a fourth offender as your record would justify, I could impose a life sentence upon you. This world is cold and unsympathetic, but I believe society would be far better off if another chance be given you. Prison does not reform the wrongdoer in my estimation, but dangerous men should be caged like wild animals. I will suspend sentence upon you, Brown, if you can get employment."

Paul Armstrong, the playwright, who asked Judge Rosalsky to release a prisoner in his parole several weeks ago, and who has been in the Criminal Court Building studying the characters of criminals to get material for a new play, said he would give the aged criminal a life long job if Judge Rosalsky would suspend sentence. The court thereupon patroled Brown in Mr. Armstrong's custody after he had warned the prisoner that he would be indicted as a fourth offender if he ever went back to crime again.

Brown was so overcome that he could scarcely utter his thanks to Judge Rosalsky and Mr. Armstrong. He managed to say, however:

"I thank you, your Honor, for being so kind to me. Now that I have a chance to become a man once more I will take it. I am old and feeble and never expected to be able to get a position, but now that Mr. Armstrong has been kind enough to take pity on me I will show both your Honor and him that a criminal can reform if he gets his chance."

Brown then went back to the Tombs, a free man, to get what few belongings he had left there.

Goldberg Brothers, Who Jumped Bail Here, Found In Austria.

Jacob and Joseph Goldberg, safe-crackers wanted in Boston, who jumped their bail in this city a year ago, have been captured in a small town in Austria by a Boston detective on information furnished by the Detective Bureau of this city. Chief Inspector Russell of the Detective Bureau here announced the capture yesterday, and he implied that he considered it quite a feather in the cap of the police.

The Goldberg brothers were arrested in this city on March 26, 1910, charged with having robbed a month before the safe of Samuel E. Ullian of Boston, getting $15,000 worth of jewelry. They were arrested after a desperate club and pistol fight with Central Office Detectives Kinsler, Duggan, and O'Farrell, and when arraigned before Magistrate Barlow were held in $10,000 bail each for extradition to Massachusetts. Several days later Magistrate Barlow, at the behest of their counsel, cut the bail in half, which amount they furnished. When the case was called again they had disappeared, and the bond was declared forfeited.

When the city came to collect the forfeited bail it was found that the property which had been accepted by Magistrate Barlow was worth much less than $10,000, and charges were entered against him by District Attorney Whitman. These were dismissed and the Magistrate acquitted by the Appellate Division.

After the Goldbergs disappeared their whereabouts was unknown to the police for some time. Last February, however, a clue was obtained through Stephen Maglyn, who had been arrested for beating Stanislas Krakowsky. In Maglyn's pockets pawntickets were found for three watches, which Detective Andrew J. Ward discovered were part of the plunder taken by the Goldberg brothers from Ullian's safe. Maglyn said he got the tickets from Krakowsky, his victim. Krakowsky was arrested and identified as one of the Goldberg gang, and through him the police learned that the brothers were in Europe.

Krakowsky said he had accompanied them as far as London, leaving his wife in the care of Maglyn. From London the Goldberg brothers went to Austria and he returned to Brooklyn. Here he found that Maglyn had become over-intimate with his wife, and the two fought it out in the street, Krakowsky getting the worst of it. Before he went to Europe, Krakowsky said, he gave Maglyn three of the gold watches which he had taken from the Boston jeweler's safe and Maglyn pawned them.

The police learned that the Goldberg brothers had gone to the town of Gallietsia, in Austria. Detective Lynch of Boston went there, and yesterday Inspector Russell received word that he had arrested them. They will be brought back to this country in July. The fourth member of the gang, a man named Harris Rothstein, is thought to have been burned to death in Houndsditch, England, after a murder there.

The society's representatives are in constant attendance in Ellis Island to protect Italian immigrants from fraud and exploitation. Howland, the Treasurer, will receive donations.

FOR UNIVERSAL ARBITRATION.

Board of Trade Also Censures Bill Affecting Mercantile Agencies.

Some important resolutions were passed yesterday by the Board of Trade and Transportation.

One of these, after commending the proposed unlimited arbitration treaty between the United States and Great Britain, suggested that the American Department of State revise all of our existing arbitration agreements with a view to securing unlimited arbitration treaties with all nations. The resolution, which was offered by G. Waldo Smith, Chairman of the Executive Committee, was adopted by a unanimous vote.

The Committees of City Affairs and Insurance and Fire Regulations presented a resolution, the result of their joint deliberations, providing for a special committee to make recommendations looking to the avoidance of such calamities as the Asch Building fire, and inviting the Chamber of Commerce, the Merchants' Association, and other industrial and reform organizations to co-operate.

Senate Bill No. 774, relating to the licensing and regulating of mercantile agencies, was sharply criticised, and resolutions were adopted petitioning the Legislature to reject it. It was declared that the bill would seriously injure the usefulness of mercantile agencies. The provision which requires all reports of a mercantile agency to be made in writing would prevent, it was said, the giving of valuable information. Verbal reports—privileged communications—would be excluded. At present the agencies cannot be called to account for such communications, and it is to obtain just such information that the subscriber employs their services. Objection was also made to the provision of the bill requiring the payment of license fees. The resolution, which was adopted, says on this head:

The unreliable concerns armed with a guarantee of good character in the form of a license would, under the proposed law, be infinitely more dangerous, because, being devoid of honor and principle, they would be in a position to demand a consideration for ratings to which a concern would be justly entitled, and thus the door would be opened for the practice of blackmail, and, on the other hand, by the payment of a consideration, a rating would be given which actual conditions would not warrant, and the agency would thereby become in effect the partner in conspiracies to swindle concerns, which, by such ratings, were induced to give credits.

In another resolution the city administration was asked to postpone final action on the west side freight terminal controversy until the commercial interests could make a thorough study of the various conflicting plans recently submitted.

A resolution asking Mayor Gaynor to recommend to the Board of Education that the Spanish language be placed in the curriculum of the higher classes of the public schools, which was introduced by Louis Nixon, the shipbuilder, was adopted.

SAFETY IN RESERVE BANK.

Mr. Cornwell Believes Wall Street Couldn't Possibly Gain Control.

The Finance Forum of the Y. M. C. A. in West Fifty-seventh Street was informed last night that Wall Street or political control of a Central Reserve Association, such as that advocated by former Senator Aldrich, would be impossible. This assertion was made by William C. Cornwell, a writer on financial subjects and editor of The Bache Review, which is published by J. S. Bache & Co., bankers.

"The only way for a large money power to obtain control," said Mr. Cornwell, "would be to buy up a majority of all the banks of the country. This would be inanifestly impossible, as the amount required would be far beyond the reimerlin of Mount Olive, N. C.; Edgar Walker Harris of Rockwood, Ontario, a graduate of the Philadelphia Textile School, and William Oscar Jellome of Passaic, N. J.

FOR EXCHANGE PRESIDENT.

Opposition to Ogden D. Budd Revived in the Consolidated.

Ogden D. Budd, who was President of the Consolidated Stock Exchange from 1906 to 1908, and held office when the "Little Board" sold its property and built its present Exchange Building on Broad Street at the Beaver Street corner, was nominated for President on the regular ticket announced yesterday.

Mr. Budd ran for a third term two years ago on an independent ticket and was defeated. No sooner had the regular nomination been announced yesterday than the leaders in the movement which opposed Mr. Budd when he last ran for office started a movement for an opposition ticket. This party expressed dissatisfaction with the Nominating Committee for its failure to put up President Robert M. Jarvis for a second term. Efforts were under way yesterday afternoon to induce President Jarvis to accept the nomination on the opposition ticket.

The regular ticket is as follows:

President, Ogden D. Budd; First Vice President, W. L. S. Webster; Second Vice President, L. B. Wilson; Treasurer, E. R. Grant; Chairman, Valentine Mott. Board of Governors, to serve two years—N. W. Peters, B. Hinkley, O'Connor De Cordova, L. McLaughlin, J. Frank Howell, John E. Hoey, W. W. Erwin, F. A. Farnsworth, D. E. Levey, E. C. Adams. Arbitration Committee—J. Calhoun, S. J. Drake, R. J. Hoffman, L. Tweedy, L. K. Taylor, F. H. Schuyler, G. Philbrick. Trustee, Gratuity Fund—T. D. Scoble. Nominating Committee—D. J. Gould, P. L. Vollmer, B. Smith, G. W. Van Ness, G. L. Turton, W. P. Eager, C. H. Terhune.

COMMISSIONER NORTH OUT.

San Francisco Immigration Head Was Already Under Suspension.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Announcement was made here to-day that H. H. North, Commissioner of Immigration at San Francisco, has resigned. No reasons were given and no successor has been decided upon.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 12.—Owing to charges of laxity in the conduct of his office, especially as to Hindu and other immigrants from the Orient, Hart H. North, Commissioner of Immigration at this port, was suspended several months ago pending an investigation. In the meantime the office has been in charge of Rufus C. Steward as Acting Commissioner.

Katzenstein Case to the Jury To-day.

The taking of testimony in the trial of Simon Katzenstein, the Bronx bone and fat dealer who is charged with receiving 100,000 pounds of stolen meat from the Manhattan State Hospital for the Insane, was closed yesterday, and Justice Davis will submit the case to the jury to-day. Several witnesses were called by the prosecution in the morning. They testified to the receiving of the meat at the hospital. In the afternoon John F. McIntyre, Katzenstein's counsel, opened for the defense. Katzenstein was not called to the stand.

HELD AS POSTAL THIEVES.

Detectives Trail and Arrest Nine Suspected of Robberies in Ohio.

After following their trail for seven weeks through Ohio, Indiana, and Michigan, United States officers and private detectives to-day arrested nine men in Toledo suspected of being implicated in bank and Post Office robberies in this vicinity. They are "St. Louis Slim," Earl Redman, Felix Brock, "Ham" Dempsey, alias Hamilton; "Slim" Carruthers, a man named Haggerty, and three others whose names are unknown.

The prisoners are suspected of being implicated in the robbery of the Farmers and Merchants' Bank at Riga, Mich., last Fall, and later of the robbery of the Post Offices at Chelsea, Mich.; Winfall, Ind., and Gahenna, Franklin County, Ohio. The prisoners were arralgned before a United States Commissioner and were bound over to be taken to Columbus for trial on the Gahenna Post Office case.

FOR CONTROL OF PRICES, TOO

Representative Martin Proposes Thus to Regulate Corporations.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—With a view to having Federal control of inter-State railroad rates extended to prices of articles in inter-State trade which tend to become monopolized, Representative Martin of South Dakota, who has lately been appointed to a place on the House Committee on Inter-State and Foreign Commerce, is planning to urge legislation which will give the Federal Government the right to regulate prices of corporations which are monopolies or attempted monopolies, as judged by the Sherman law.

Mr. Martin is convinced that in the absence of legislation for the regulation of prices of the articles sold by such corporation it will be difficult to reach them effectively. If the Government were clothed with that power he thinks the purpose of the Sherman law, to prevent monopolies and combines in restraint of trade, could be carried out.

The measure, if introduced, will not be considered at this session.

COTTON MILL MEN REPORT POOR TRADE

If the Curtailment Continues the World May Run Short of Necessary Clothing.

MORE RAW COTTON NEEDED

President Hobbs Blames Politics and Uncertainty—Charles T. Main Wins the Association Medal.

BOSTON, April 12.—"Misery likes company," said President Franklin W. Hobbs in his annual address before the opening session of the annual meeting of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers in this city to-day, in referring to the fact that the Lancashire cotton mills had been having "hard sledding" as well as those in the United States. President Hobbs said:

"Last September I remarked that the cotton manufacturing industry had been in troublous times since we met in April last, and I regret to be compelled to state that the troublous times have been continued. The cotton crop has been a disappointment, curtailment has continued, and a most unsatisfactory condition has resulted. Buying is on a hand-to-mouth basis. Added to perplexing business conditions have been the upset political situation and the uncertainty, due to expected decisions of the Supreme Court, which will have far-reaching effects. Uncertainty of the future is the most dreaded condition in which business can get. With these two factors removed, we shall know where we stand and be prepared to go forward.

"It is undoubtedly true that the consumption of cotton is steadily increasing each year, and it seems equally true that this increase in consumption will continue. It is estimated there are now on the earth 1,500,000,000 people, of whom only 500,000,000 are completely clothed, while 750,000,000 are only partly clothed and 250,000,000 practically do not possess any clothing at all. It is further estimated that to clothe the whole of humanity would require 42,000,000 bales of cotton each year instead of about 17,000,000, the last year's production of the world.

"I think I am not too much optimistic to believe that from the present acreage the American production could be doubled if proper methods were used, and it is along such lines that our friends in the South must work to secure the best results for themselves and the spinners."

Following President Hobb's address, Richard C. MacLaurin of the Institute of Technology and Theodore H. Price of New York spoke to the delegates, who were much interested in a demonstration of cotton picking by machinery, given by the New York man.

The association medal for 1910 was awarded to Charles T. Main of Boston in recognition of his contributions to textile publications.

The students' medals for the encouragement of textile education, supported by a fund given for that purpose by the late Moses Pierce of Norwich, Conn., were awarded this year to Thomas Bryan Sum-actively small capital of the present money ruiers of Wall Street. Further than this, the control would give little advantage, inasmuch as the powers of the Central Reserve Association are limited practically to the receiving of deposits from banks only and to the discounting of commercial paper, always to a limited amount, for the banks and the banks only."

In the quizzing which followed the address one member of the Forum wanted to know what would prevent a banking monopoly by existing National banks, owing to the fact that the entire capital stock of the Reserve Association was to be purchased by the banks. Mr. Cornwell said that such an emergency as providing newly organized banks with stock and membership would doubtless be taken up and met when the time came.

SETTLES LADING BILL DISPUTE

Foreign Bankers Satisfied with Agreement at Conference Here.

The plan proposed by the Liverpool Bill of Lading Conference Committee for the further protection of foreign bankers in the acceptance of cotton bills of lading, through the establishment of a central office in this city, to which advices of all bills issued shall be sent, was approved yesterday by a conference which included representatives of the Southeastern and Southwestern cotton-carrying railroads, the Liverpool committee, and the sub-committee of the Bill of Lading Committee of the American Bankers' Association.

Details remain to be worked out, and a committee, comprising representatives of the four parties to the conference, was appointed for that purpose. The general plan is said to be satisfactory to the foreign bankers and cotton firms, and to offer a final solution of the troubled question, which has been a source of perplexity to American bankers ever since it became an issue nearly a year ago, through losses suffered by foreign cotton firms by the operations of Knight, Yancey & Co. and Steele, Miller & Co.

The meeting was called by the sub-committee of the Bankers' Association, and was held at the Chamber of Commerce. Those present included Fred I. Kent, Vice President of the Bankers' Trust Company, Chairman of the sub-committee; Gilbert Thorne, Vice President of the National Park Bank, and John E. Gardine, Vice President of the National City Bank, members of the committee, and representatives of practically all the cotton-carrying roads, such as the Central of Georgia, the Illinois Central, the Seaboard Air Line, the Rock Island, the Southern Railway, the Louisville & Nashville, the Missouri, Kansas & Texas, and the Missouri Pacific. Mr. Kent, who presided, said at the end of the session:

"The meeting was called for the purpose of putting in motion plans which would make it possible to handle the coming cotton crop without friction and along lines satisfactory to shippers, railroads, steamship companies, American and foreign banking interests, and cotton buyers. A resolution was adopted expressing approval of the formation of a central office in New York City, provided such an office can be established along satisfactory lines.

"It is confidently hoped that a way has been found to properly safeguard bills of lading issued for cotton and make their acceptance by financial interests, both here and abroad, justifiable."

The Liverpool committee, in proposing the establishment of a central office or sort of clearing house, has taken the position that it involved nothing more than supplying the proper machinery for carrying into full effect the agreement made by the railroads last year for the validation of cotton bills. It is admitted on all sides that this plan has not been rigidly applied, and that even since its adoption there have been many variations from the standard agreed upon between the bankers and the railroads.

The central office to be established under the present plan would receive direct from the railroads a record of all cotton bills of lading and when any banker who might purchase a cotton bill applied to this office an immediate check would be put on any irregularity in the issuance of the bill. In case any such irregularity was discovered acceptance of the bill could be forestalled. The Liverpool committee has worked out in detail a plan for the application of this checking system, which will be taken under consideration by the committee appointed yesterday.

FILIPINO OFFICER HERE.

Lieut. Palma of the Constabulary Travels at Government Expense.

The Spanish liner Buenos Aires got in yesterday on her way to Cuba and Mexico. Among her passengers were Lieut. John Merrill, who has been in charge of the Morro Prison at Zamboanga, on the Island of Mindanao, one of the Philippines; Lieut. S. B. Price of Winchester, Ky., now stationed in the Philippines, and Lieut. Manuel S. Palma of the Philippine Constabulary, stationed at Tarlaz, in Luzon.

The latter is a native Filipino, who has been in the American service ten years, and by meritorious conduct won his commission as Second Lieutenant. He is one of the first of the native officers to come to this country. Lieut. Palma will remain in America seven months. He will go to Washington, where he will be the guest of the Philippine Delegate.

The Lieutenant is 27 years old. He is exceptionally bright and of tried loyalty. He was granted leave and his expenses paid in order that he might come to the United States. It is his intention while here to perfect himself in the English language and learn something of the country and its customs. Lieut. Palma said that he was particularly anxious to come, as he is satisfied that American occupancy of the Philippines means everything in the development of the islands and their progress. He is intensely ambitious and says that he expects to rise higher in the army. Every facility has been granted him by the Government, for it is believed that his coming will have a beneficial effect in the Philippines.

Lieut. Palma said that Aguinaldo is now a farmer.

THREE DOWNTOWN HOLIDAYS.

Stock, Cotton and Coffee Exchanges to be Closed Friday and Saturday.

After the close of business to-day the Stock Exchange will remain closed until Monday morning. The triple holiday over Easter has become almost a custom on the Stock Exchange, although there have been five years in the last fourteen when it was not observed. In 1907 the Saturday before Easter was the only holiday, and in the year before there was no holiday either on Good Friday or Easter Saturday. In Europe and in South America the triple holiday from Holy Thursday to Easter Monday is general.

This year the New York Cotton Exchange and the Coffee Exchange will be closed on both Friday and Saturday, as will of course the Consolidated Stock Exchange and the Curb market. All of the American grain markets will be closed on Good Friday, and the cottonseed oil market on the Produce Exchange will be closed on Saturday as well.

Discards Jones as Too Common.

Jones said that there were so many persons of exactly the same name as himself that his mail has miscarried and that he has suffered embarrassment on various occasions.

By W. J. LAMPTON.

Fifty years ago yesterday—April 12, 1861—a ball season opened in Charleston Harbor between the Yankees on the north side and the Johnnies on the south that has any game of modern times backed clean off the platform. The players used cannon balls, and, say, they were swift. The Johnnies won the first game, but the Yanks won out finally and carried off the pennant, though they were four years doing it.

Yesterday—April 12, 1911—another kind of ball season opened at the Polo Grounds, and if Johnnie Scrappie didn't put it over G. Knickerbocker Lobster, then the figures on a score board are not to be relied upon. It was a grand opening, just the same, and that souvenir pennant, dated 1905, waved as proudly over the Manhattan field as though the Giants had one for every year since and were merely using up back numbers. What? However, somewhere between 30,000 and a million fans piled into the seats provided for those who had the price, and the enthusiasm for three hours before the real activities began was frequent and vociferous. It had to be or the waiting thousands would have been frost bitten. Cold? Oh, no, it wasn't cold. It was the usual brand of 1911 Spring and 'most everybody is used to that, by now. Still, if we are to have the same brand right along it might be suggested that the grandstand, at least, have steam heat introduced. The bleachers don't need it. They are hot stuff naturally.

The Only Silk Hat There.

The preliminaries were as simple as a poor man's funeral, the usual opening spectacular effects being omitted owing to the high cost of living. However, when Mayor Gaynor appeared with an escort of a secretary and a few faithful friends—no, Joe Corrigan wasn't with him—he was the only man on the grounds in a silk hat, and for a moment the bleachers thought they were going to have some trimmings not down in the bill, but they didn't. His Honor walked briskly across the field, the band forgetting to play "See, the Conquering Hero Comes." It is believed that "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town" would have been rendered, but the band was frozen by this time and couldn't thaw out. Shortly after the arrival of the Mayor the practice performers in the field, the camorrists—or is it camerists?—and other non-combatants were called off and a business aspect was thrown about the scene. A ball was passed to his Honor which he was to throw to the gladiators, and he threw it, first beckoning to Umpire Johnstone to back off a little further, which he did, and the ball fell just far enough short of him to fumble it and have help to get hold of it. With the Mayor and Johnstone for a battery there would be some great ball playing.

The Lid Pried Off.

At this moment the vast amphitheatre was filled with eager fans and so few fannies that their bright bonnets hardly made a dent in the gloom of masculine attire. The sun glistened in congealed beauty, and the Giants in their new whities—with a black pin stripe—and their black knicks with white collars, and the Phillies in their quiet Quaker drab took their places for the momentous occasion.

The lid was off the Polo Grounds,
The April sun shone bright,
And some were shivering with cold,
And others with delight.
Long months had fled since last the fans
Had felt the baseball thrill,
And now they trembled in their seats,
Prepared to get their fill.
A hum of deep, expectant bliss
Swept over all the grounds,
And for a moment, more or less,
Obscured all other sounds.
A moment thus, each fan alert
To hear the welcome call,
And then, like music to their ears,
The umpire yelled, "Play ball!"

This took place promptly at 4 P. M., when it might as well have been an hour earlier and warmer, and the Phillies took up the stick, with Dooin and Moore as opposing battery to Myers and Ames. Titus led and the umpire invited him to walk to first as an evidence of what he thought of Mr. Ames in the box. Knabe and Lobert followed to the bat, Knabe going out at first on a sacrifice and Titus going to second, but he didn't walk. Lobert and Magee quit before they got started. Titus, having no further use for second, quit it right there. Nought for Phillie.

Now came the Giants, an dthough they played a sharper game than the Phillies it didn't count for any more in the sum-up, though Devore, Doyle, Snodgrass, and Murray done their derndest to make it different. Doyle, however, made the first hit of the game, which called for loud applause. Doyle tried to purloin second, but was taken in the act by Dooin to Lobert. Larry ought to get "protection" when he wants to steal anything in this town. Another nought on the score board.

The Phillies in the second did a contineous performance of strike-outs with Mr. Ames handing them the material. Paskert, Doolan, and Luderus being the strikers. What the Phillies needed then was a strikebreaker. No runs. How could there be with everybody striking out? Merkle for the Giants thought he would make a record, or something like that, and knocked a hard one over toward second, hoping nothing was Dooin over that way, but there was. Bridwell and Devlin added up the same number to the score, and another cipher went up on the board.

How No Runs Came In.

Dooin, Moore, and Titus made the third showing for the Phillies, and there was no more doin' than usual. For the Giants, Meyers got a pass to first from the umpire, Ames hit the air hard enough to make a home run on it and didn't, though he had three tries. Devore hit to first and Meyers was forced to quit at second, later being apprehended at that point while attempting to smuggle it in. No runs.

Knabe for the Phillies got to first by Doyle's fine fingering of a good one hit to him. Lobert bunted for a sacrifice and Knabe went to second. Magee, the heavy hitter, Caseyed to a finish, and Paskert put a fly to Murray which stayed put. No runs again.

Doyle walked. It's the easiest way. Snodgrass flied to Paskert with a long one, which Paskert gathered in fine style. Doyle was pinched at second while trying to abstract it for his own use. Dooin and Knabe done for him. Murray didn't even get to the first bag. No runs yet.

In the fifth the Phillies noughted some more and so did the Giants, though it took the Giants longer to get theirs than it did the Phillies. Speaking of goose eggs, Merkle knocked five or six fouls in the fifth, and then found the walking good enough to get to first. Bridwell sacrificed and Merkle went to second, and was caught trying to get away from it. Devlin stole second. Meyers didn't run to first, but got there just the same, thanks to the umpire. Before Ames had a chance to fan out he was given his walking papers by His Ump, and for the first time in the history of this game the bases were filled. The fans were also filled, but with enthusiasm and pent-up excitement. Devore might have made a home run bang at this time, but he didn't. He negotiated a detestable insect to Titus, who can stick to a fly when he gets his flippers on it, and instead of four good runs there was none. Nothing up.

Still No Runs.

The sixth was hardly worth speaking about except for a fine running catch of a Snodgrass fly by Magee, equal to one of his long hits. Nobody got around the diamond.

In the seventh Lobert flied out, and Paskert got the first hit off of Ames. It seemed very hard for the Phillies to make a hit with Amesy, old boy. No runs, among the Giants. Merkle sent one to right field to see if the gent out there could hold it, and he found out and went out. Bridwell and Devlin walked. Bridwell going as far as second before he was through exercising. He might have walked all the way, but Meyers and Ames forgot to put up their fly screens and suffered for it. No runs. This is becoming monotonous.

In the eighth Doolan struck out, and Dooin hit one hard enough to get to first. Moore struck out, and Titus gave Devore an opportunity to show how he could catch a ball when it came his way. Seems kind of queer that batters can't learn not to knock balls to people who are there to catch them. No toddles yet. The Giants started in with a pretty hit by Devore to pitch, where it bounded off to second and got to first, but not quite soon enough, though several individuals wanted to slug the umpire for not deciding otherwise. Snodgrass and Murray struck out. Some more no runs.

When the ninth opened there was a feeling that it was time for somebody to do something or everybody would go home. Forty or fifty innings can be stood for in warm weather, but nine is the limit when the temperature is down about to the mark that was on the score board up to this time. Knabe, to begin for the Phillies, made a fly to first. Lobert hit to first and got to second on Magee's hunt, which took the heavy hitter to first. Paskert hit to first, and Magee was forced out at third. Lobert tried to reach home from third, but was glad to get back safe. Luderus hit a two-bagger, the only one so far, and Lobert and Paskert went to home, sweet home on it. Uproarious applause, like the ice breaking up after a hard Winter. Two entire runs. Two—count them. You won't have another chance. Nobody thought the Giants would do anything in the last half, which is what they did. Merkle walked down to first, and that is as near as they came to making a run. Score as usual.

Summary of runs:

Philadelphia	2
Total runs	2

The lid was off at the Polo Grounds,
But nothing much was done;
The fans they thought the Giants would,
At least, a half a run,
But they didn't.

RECORD CROWD SEES GAME.

How the Phillies Beat the Giants in Polo Grounds Opening.

The greatest crowd of spectators that ever jammed into the Polo Grounds to see a baseball game shivered and groaned when Philadelphia made a ninth-inning rally yesterday and downed the Giants by a score of 2 to 0 in the opening clash of the National League season. This crowd was an enormous, noisy, restless jam of people—30,000 or more—and it assembled so early and sat so long waiting for the game to begin that it was none too well behaved. It wanted to see the Giants take the first game, and when McGraw's best batsmen were plucked, inning after inning, by the shooting tangents of Pitcher Earl Moore, the fans lost enthusiasm and were anxious to get out and go home. It was hard enough fighting one's way into the Polo Grounds, but it was harder fighting for an exit.

Leon Ames was the Giant moundman. He's a good cold weather pitcher and has opened the season for New York in other years. Ames has been pursued in these spectacular battles by a hoodoo. For most of the distance he pitches great ball, then comes into the stretch and blows up. He did this yesterday. For eight innings, Philadelphia bowed obeyance to his wide, revolving curves, and in the ninth inning when he appeared to be going strong, the crash came with stunning suddenness and a fluky bunt and two hard, singing smashes gave the Phillies the victory. Moore did not pitch so well as Ames for eight innings, because two or three times he began to totter and wobble, giving eight bases on balls, but each time when a timely smash would have cleaned up for the Giants, Moore tightened up like a vise and pitched himself out of the hole.

Luderus Breaks Up Game.

To Luderus, the Phillies' new first baseman, goes the honor of the victory. With two out in the ninth inning, the first baseman whacked out a resounding, killing smash to centre field, which sailed far over Snodgrass's head and bounded toward the fence. The long hit sent Lobert and Paskert over the plate.

It was a sad occasion for the gala day of New York's season. The opening of the season at the Polo Grounds has become something of a holiday on Manhattan Island. Just as if prescribed by law, desks are closed and locked, clubs are deserted, and the general humdrum and routine of Broadway and the busy downtown section ceases for a time, while everybody chokes the elevated and Subway in the long, unending rush for the opening game. It was a bit too cold for baseball. There was some comfort in the sunny seats, but in the shadows of the big stands it was chilly and bleak. The popular garment should have been an ulster instead of a Spring overcoat. There were not as many women and girls in the stands as on other opening days. A few pretty misses with Napoleonic straw hats and dolled out in coronation purple were seen in some of the boxes and in the upper tiers, but their pearly teeth chattered before the Giants were trailed in the dust.

Long before the gates opened after 12 o'clock, crowds roared at the portals to the grounds. They squirmed this way and that way, and when the barriers went up there was a wild rush for seats. It has been a long time since seats sold for a quarter at the Polo Grounds, but this season a big section has been provided in centre field for the "two bits" crowd. It didn't take long to fill up, although far away from the scene of action these bleacherites were unceasingly noisy.

Invited Fans Shut Out at Gates.

The seat holders and the folks who came with invitations, did not start to gather until about 3 o'clock, and then the line to the gates stretched out, and it flowed through the gates slowly. Before the game started, there were so many people packed into the place that the gates were closed and scores of disappointed people went away. The players came out early and scattered over the diamond, tossing the ball around to keep warm. The crowd watched the practice with interest for a while and liked it, but after an hour or so got restless. In some sections the fans got unruly and hurled bags of peanuts and newspapers at innocent citizens, who jammed into the crowd in search of a seat. Derby hats went flying, and all late comers got a rough reception. There was lots of pushing and shoving, and the Pinkertons were kept busy every minute. No count was kept of the number of feet stepped on, but from the general run of the conversation of the spectators, it is not unreasonable to believe that thousands of corns were awakened from slumber.

Some of the fashionably dressed women, with Spring gowns of gay hue, had a hard time being pushed through the crowds by their escorts. One girl with a hobble skirt made slow progress.

Ever try to push through a mob with a hobble about your ankles? No?

Well, climbing up the side of a brick building is easy compared with it. This same young lady remarked that it was bad enough crushing one's way to a seat, but it was about the limit when a fresh roysterer picked a rose off her new Spring hat and disappeared in the bubbling populace.

Who were they all and where did they come from? Well, that man with the cigar and dignified look is a physician who left a notice on his office door, "Will return soon." The youth next to him with the cap and dark, smiling face is a bootblack. Next to him is an office boy who got permission last Winter to attend this sporting function. He has been saving up his energy all this time, and turned it all loose yesterday. That's why he is so hoarse that he can't even whisper. Everybody rubbed elbows with everybody else. It didn't make any difference who you were or what your calling, all were united in the one cause—to see the Giants win. Three Chinamen found their way into the twenty-five-cent seats. They left before "Red" Ames blew up, because they weren't dressed for the weather.

Arrival of Mayor Gaynor.

The monotony of the long wait was broken just after 3:30 o'clock when Mayor Gaynor, accompanied by Secretary Gray and the Mayor's party, started across the field. The snapshot artillery, already nearly exhausted, started a new attack and the shutters clicked at the new comers from every angle. The Mayor shook hands with Umpire Murray and Capt. Doyle on his way across the park, and then went to a box in the upper tier, and the umpires, Johnstone and Eason, came on the field. Johnstone stood in front of Mayor Gaynor's box, and after adjusting his hat, his Honor made a pretty peg with a new white ball, and Johnstone trapped it. He made a quick recovery and picked up the ball. The Seventh Regiment Band played the "Star-Spangled Banner," the bell clanged, and the game was on.

The very first ball that Ames whipped over was a strike, and the crowd howled with delight. Then followed four balls and Titus walked. Knabe sacrificed the runner to second, and he went to third on Lobert's out. Ames to Merkle. Titus set himself at third base, ready to romp home, when Sherwood Magee, the league's mightiest batter, stepped to the plate.

No, Mr. and Mrs. Reader and all the little Readers, Magee did not pummel the ball. He grounded out to Merkle.

It looked a bit rosy for the Giants in their half of the inning. After Devore had died on a harmless grasser to Moore, Doyle nailed a single to left. Snodgrass rattled a grounder to Knabe at second, which Otto proceeded to boot. "Snod" was safe. Murray's chance for a clean-up never came earlier in a season than right now. You'd hardly believe it, but Murray fanned, and at the same time Doyle and Snodgrass started a double steal. Dooin shot the ball to third and Doyle was out sliding into the sack, a victim of the season's first double play.

Ames's pitching was deadly in the second inning. He fanned Paskert, Luderus, and Doolan in a row. Then everybody said, "Ames is there to-day; he'll shake that old hoodoo of losing the opening game as he has during the past couple of seasons."

In the second inning Merkle, the first man up, drove a sizzling grounder through second base, and Doolan made the hair-raising stop and pick-up of the game, scooping the pill with one hand and whipping it to first in time to cut down Merkle. Snodgrass almost got a hit in the fourth inning, hammering the ball between the left and centre gardens, but Paskert made a running catch that was a daisy.

Giants Miss Chance to Score.

In the fifth inning the Giants thought they had Moore ready to go back to the paddock. Merkle, first up, walked. Bridwell sacrificed him to second. Devlin grounded to Lobert and Merkle was caught between third and second. Devlin stole second. Meyers walked. Moore was getting wilder every minute, and when Ames walked and filled the bases to overflowing the stands rocked with the enthusiasm born of Moore's careless, rampant pegging.

It was now plainly up to Joshua Devore. You'd think when a man has a chance to be smothered with the loud blessings of some 30,000 people he would take advantage of the fact and clean up. Maybe Devore had the best intentions in the world, but the thing he did was to pole a beautifully sailing Antoinette into the hangar of Titus, and the inning of high-tensioned promise ended.

It wasn't until the seventh session that Philadelphia got a hit off Ames. In that period Paskert singled to right, but was forced out at second. Moore threatened to become wild again in the seventh, when, with one down, he walked Bridwell and Devlin. Meyers laced a long fly to deep centre, but Paskert raced back and gathered it in. Ames fouled out, and another hope flittered away.

Ames's pitching up to this time had been a pretty exhibition of mysterious heaving and commendable control. He had fanned seven of the Phillies, had given but one base on balls, and two harmless hits. Knabe, the first man up in the ninth, skied to Merkle. Hans Lobert rammed a single to right field. Magee deposited an unapproachable bunt in the grass in front of the plate. Ames made a wild attempt to get the ball. He made a wide throw, which pulled Merkle off the bag, but Magee had arrived as soon as the ball, anyway. Lobert went to third on the play. Paskert tapped to Ames, and there was a scramble to catch Lobert off third base or Magee going to third. Magee was finally put out by Meyers, and Lobert got safely back to third.

Giants' Hopes Fade Away.

The final scene would make strong men weep. Luderus, the Phillies' first baseman, who has been so kind as to strike out on two occasions, faced Ames once more. Zip! a high one looped across the plate for the first strike. The next one was made to order for Mr. Luderus. He waved his stick at the ball with madness in his eye. The very moment the bat hit the ball you could tell by the sound that it was time to get up and go home. The bunt went high and far, and neither Devore nor Snodgrass could have reached it if he had been built with wings. It rolled almost to the fence, and Lobert and Paskert scored. Doolan fanned for the third out. In the Giants' half of the ninth Merkle got a base on balls, and the next three batsmen died by the sky route.

'Twas truly a pity, Clarice.

Cubs and Cardinals in a Tie.

CHICAGO, April 12.—The National League baseball season in Chicago was inaugurated to-day with St. Louis as the opponent, when Carter Harrison, Mayor-elect, tossed the first ball into the diamond. After eleven innings the teams were on even terms, and the umpire announced that the game was called on account of darkness. The final count was 3 to 3. The visitors went to the front in the first inning. Reulbach got a bad start. He could not locate the plate, and after walking two Tenney's Boston Team Defeats Brooklyn in Eighth Inning, 2 to 1.

BOSTON, April 12.—Timely hitting in the eighth inning won for the Boston Nationals their first game from Brooklyn in the race for the National League pennant which was inaugurated at the Walpole Street grounds this afternoon. The game was anybody's up to the eighth inning, when the visitors connected with Brown, the local pitcher, and secured a single run before the side was out. With Boston up, a pass, followed by an error and a two-bagger, gave the game to the home team. President Lynch of the National League was a guest at the game.

The two teams marched to the flagpole in centre field for the customary flag raising, and Mayor Fitzgerald threw out the first ball. In spite of a cool wind, a large crowd of loyal fans gave the reorganized Boston Nationals a rousing send-off. The score:

Pirates Bat Reds' Pitcher Hard.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, April 12.—Pittsburg overwhelmed Cincinnati this afternoon by a score of 14 to 0 in the opening game of the season. Both Cincinnati pitchers were hit hard and often, while Adams for Pittsburg was nearly invincible, holding Cincinnati to four scattered hits. Byrne's batting was the feature of the game, he getting five hits and a base on balls out of the six times that he faced the pitcher. Cincinnati played miserably in the field. Score:

TAFT STARTS SENATORS OFF.

President Tosses First Ball—Boston Team Beaten in Poor Game.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—For the second time during his term as Chief Executive President Taft to-day officially opened the American League Baseball season. From his box in the new grand stand at the local grounds he tossed the first ball to Pitcher "Dolly" Gray of the Washington team, and saw Washington win from Boston in a very ragged game by a score of 8 to 5.

A crowd estimated at 16,000, breaking all Washington records, cheered the President first and then forgot all about him when, in the sixth inning, the home team, overcoming a lead of four runs piled up by the visitors in the third and fourth sessions, batted Wood out of the box and scored six runs. Gray, who started to pitch for Washington, gave way to Walker in the sixth inning, having been removed to make a place for a substitute batter.

The Boston team did not make a very good impression, its fielding being decidedly off color. It was due more to bad support than poor pitching that Wood was taken out for the visitors. His removal did not help matters much. The game was slowly played in a chilly east wind. President Taft sat muffled up in a heavy fur overcoat throughout the struggle.

"Uncle Nick" Young, former President of the National League, was one of the distinguished spectators.

Walter Johnson, Washington's truant pitcher, came back from Coffeyville to-day and was in uniform. He will not pitch for several days yet. The score:

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, April 12.—The New York Americans, heralded as the most dangerous team to prevent the present world's champions from repeating their brilliant conquest of last year, were victors over the Athletics in the first championship battle of the year at Shibe Park to-day by a score of 2 to 1. Eighteen thousand persons witnessed the game. It was a cold, bleak, unseasonal day for the National sport, and the attendance was a personal tribute to the holders of the world's title and a testimonial to the affection with which the great pastime is held by the average American.

There was nothing to indicate that the Athletics were world's champions for 1911. Not a sign or a signal indicated that they represented the best in the baseball world, had won its blue-ribboned title, yet they were playing their first contest under their official title of winners of the world's pennant. Another day, later in the season, fitting ceremonies will celebrate their historical conquest of the snapping and snarling Cubs of Chicago. The opening differed in no respect from the first day games of former years. The crowd expected nothing unusual.

The lower section of the grand stand and the bleachers had nearly filled by 2:30 o'clock. The gates had been opened at 1

UNFOOLING THE FARMER.

We suspect that the gentlemen of the protected interests are too much gnarled and cankered by their sordid pursuit of tariff bounties and unholy profits to indulge in the roars of laughter that ought to shake their sides at the spectacle of a Ways and Means Committee actually introducing a bill to lower customs duties for the benefit of the farmer. For wellnigh half a century the farmer has been the great bulwark of the protective system. The beneficiaries of all Republican tariffs have systematically fooled him 365 days in the year, and most particularly on Election Day. They have made him believe that without the duties they graciously placed upon his farm products, most of which were never in the slightest imaginable danger from foreign competition, his farming business would go to ruin and he to the poorhouse. They made him believe anything and everything they said, and he has gone to the polls like a sheep to the shearing, and, under the influence of the organs and the orators of protection, he has cast his vote for the party that fooled and fleeced him.

Now, at last, the farmer has his eyes open. Much talk about Canadian reciprocity has led him to look into the subject, and he sees that while free or freer trade with our northern neighbor will in many ways benefit him, he has also become aware that he has not been benefited but has been taxed and burdened by scores of the imposts placed upon commodities coming not merely from Canada, but from other countries. Accordingly he has protested, at least in some parts of the country, that the reciprocity treaty does not do enough for him. It is to appease his newly awakened hunger for lower duties that Mr. UNDERWOOD of the Committee on Ways and Means has introduced the bill placing on the free list many articles consumed by the farmer which are now dutiable. Mr. UNDERWOOD'S bill is only a beginning, and not very much of a beginning either, in the work of unfooling the farmer. The removal of these duties will help him a little, but a measure extending real relief to the farmers would have to invade the schedules including pottery, glassware, chemicals, textiles, metals, and sundries. The cotton schedule and the woolen schedule are down on the Democratic programme for separate treatment. In the further work of revision to be taken up at the regular session the Democratic House will doubtless make very many other reductions that will be of benefit to the farmer.

The articles placed upon the free list by the Underwood bill are for the most part not extensively imported, because we can produce or manufacture them here, duty or no duty, in competition with all the world. For instance, last year agricultural implements, which are now dutiable at 15 per cent., were imported to the value of only $142,000. In 1907, the last year of normal trade, we exported agricultural implements and machinery to the value of $27,000,000. We import cotton bagging to the value of less than a million dollars a year. Our importations of cotton ties are insignificant. We can make boots and shoes of a better quality and at a lower price than any other country in the world. The present duty of 15 per cent. is obviously unnecessary. Of tanned calfskins we imported $206,000 worth in 1907, when the duty was 20 per cent.; the present duty of 15 per cent. is not of serious consequence to the cattle-grower. Harness and saddlery were imported in 1907 to the amount of $160,000; the present duty is 35 per cent. Wire rods, rope, and wire for fence purposes, on which the duties range in the neighborhood of 50 per cent., are imported in only small quantities. The removal of that duty may be of material benefit to the farmer in forcing a reduction of the price which, under protection, the American manufacturers have been able to charge. Of wheat flour, now dutiable at 25 per cent., we imported in 1907 only $160,000 worth. Of sawed timber we imported in that year $15,000,000 worth, on which duties of $1,853,158 were paid, equaling a little less than 12 per cent. ad valorem. Salt, of which not very much is imported, averages about 43 per cent. ad valorem. While these remissions will not remove all the farmer's burdens, the benefit accruing to him will, it is to be hoped, suffice to undo the false teachings of the advocates of high tariffs. This extension of the free list is made for his benefit. It ought to put him in a mood wholly favorable to the Canadian agreement.

THE YEAR'S INSURANCE BUSINESS.

The tables of business done by the life insurance companies of this State last year, published in THE TIMES of Tuesday, discloses a growth of business by $96,838,000. To this may be added a gain of $38,361,000 industrial business, making an aggregate increase of $135,209,000. The growth is not so huge as in the boom days, but it may be more substantial. Moreover, the growth of the home companies seems to be gaining impetus, and the growth of the business of the companies of other States to be moderating. This is no more than might be expected. The decline in the business of home companies would have been disastrous if it had not been checked, and the other companies would soon have done all the business.

In 1909 the companies of other States increased their business $109,407,914, or about double the growth of the home companies. Last year these proportions were almost maintained, the home companies increasing their business $34,669,000, and the other companies $62,169,000. It is still disquieting to find such poaching on the preserves of the oldest, strongest, and best companies of the country and to find such diversion to companies which, not being of equal excellence, must be inferior from the standpoint of the buyer of insurance, however creditable to their promoters. It cannot have been any intention of the reformers to discourage insurance in home companies of such incontestable superiority, and to expel the business to seek accommodation in the companies which sprang up everywhere to do the business which forsook the New York companies.

In order to appreciate the strength of this expulsive force it is necessary to remember that life insurance is almost always sold, and rarely bought. The buyers of insurance seldom seek it, or do any shopping for it. The company which does the best soliciting gets the most business, and does most good when it makes the most profit. Nothing was more marked in the reform laws than the limitation of business, and the limitation of the expenses of doing business. Both influences are still operative. Three companies with a total insurance of $783,000,000 increased the total about five millions. Practically they stood still. And it is to be noted that the new business increased about as the expenses of getting the business increased. Thus the commissions paid by the New York companies were less than sixteen millions, and the commissions paid by other companies were over thirty millions of dollars.

We have passed beyond the time when separate companies of this State were losing business at the rate of ten to fifteen millions each, and the companies of other States were making similar gains, but the conditions are not yet what they should be on a comparison of the relative merits of the companies. We are approaching perhaps the time when it will be possible to examine the hysterical legislation of a few years ago with calmness, and perhaps to bring it into better accord with sound business principles.

THE CONDITION OF WAGE EARNERS.

The British Board of Trade has been investigating the conditions of living for workmen in the United States, but Englishmen hardly know what to make of it. It is easy to anticipate that American opinions on the report will be equally divided, although for different reasons. The substance of the report is contained in the summary:

> The cost of food and rent combined is 52 per cent. greater in the United States than in England and Wales, but these heavier relative charges on working class income have been accompanied with weekly wages which are as 230 to 100.

The British commentators attack the motives of the report. The British tariff reformers, or protectionists, are sure that the report is a deathblow to free trade. The British standpatters, or free traders, contend that the fortunate American workmen are only superficially well off, "their real condition being at least as melancholy as anything the United Kingdom can show." This sad state of affairs results from the fact that the employers save in the conditions of employment the money which they disburse in wages. It is our defective factory legislation which enables the wage earners who survive to be pampered and overpaid at the expense of those who are offered a sacrifice to modern industrialism.

On this side the ocean the report will be challenged as to its facts. It will be admitted readily enough that farmers and artisans are more prosperous than other classes among us, or had been so in 1910, the date of the report. At that time things were going too much the way of those pampered favorites of fortune for the welfare of the rest of us. The agriculturists and the trades unionists certainly were profiting at the expense of consumers and employers. But it will be asked which were the twenty-eight towns investigated for a statement of the general conditions among workmen. Also there will be curiosity whether Mr. GOMPERS was asked about the conditions on which he is such a high authority. He has declared officially that the Nation is shocked by the conditions in the basic industry, and has asked the million minds of which he is master, he says, to raise a fund to fight the organization which made an $8,000,000 addition to a pension fund of $4,000,000 started by Mr. CARNEGIE. Outside the trust the conditions are even worse, a leading competitor working its men 84 hours a week at 12½ cents an hour. It is true that some doubt is thrown upon these statements, inasmuch as the appeal for funds did not produce a strike, and since nobody has been convicted of the killings which were declared to be murders.

These things are referred to by way of suggestion that there are two sides to every story, and that there are workmen here who will not recognize their happy lot as described by the British Board of Trade. There are still others who will not agree that protection caused the better condition of our workmen, if it exists. There is a break in the proof that wages are raised because the schedules of the tariff are ever higher, and, if the scale of wages is higher, it is because the general range of profits is higher here than in England for reasons not related to the tariff. Extreme caution is needed in the acceptance of statements made with suspicion of interest. This is especially true of all facts related to tariff agitation, as is even better illustrated by the arguments regarding Canadian reciprocity than regarding commerce between the United States and England. Canadians and Americans alike reverse each other's arguments. The arguments in Canada against the agreement become arguments in support after crossing the border, and arguments against the agreement by some Americans are arguments for it in Canada. The British report which fails to command English credence will hardly fare better in the United States.

A BUREAU OF DOMESTIC SCIENCE.

Representative WILSON of Illinois has introduced a bill proposing that $60,000 be expended to establish a Bureau of Domestic Science in the Department of Agriculture. This Bureau shall investigate methods and appliances for the preparation of food, and gather information to be used in training the boys and girls of the schools and colleges in household and institutional management. The Bureau would have branches in some of the colleges wherein experimental research should be conducted. Semi-annual reports of such research are to be forwarded to Washington "for general distribution in the homes of the people of the United States."

The development of scientific methods in the home has come late. The home is, of course, the most conservative of human institutions. In it may be found excellent survivals of the old patriarchal and matriarchal government, but the relations of master or mistress and servant are similar to the relation of master and serf in the Middle Ages. The domestic institution has, until lately, been proof against the introduction of labor-saving machinery. It retains some of the old hand occupations; inventions that displace them are looked at askance. But their introduction will not be denied, and the "general distribution in the homes of the people" of informing documents that point out new and better and more economical ways of daily living would do much to revolutionize the domestic economy of the people. There are many bureaus at Washington, too many. But perhaps the addition of a Bureau of Domestic Science is needed.

A DOG OF WAR.

We had awaited with interest and the expectation of much amusement the cry that Mr. MAXSE of The National Review would emit over the speech of Sir EDWARD GREY inviting general arbitration between Great Britain and the United States. In a sense we knew, of course, what would be the nature of his utterances. Anything that involves the possibility of peace must seem to Mr. MAXSE to lessen the chances of a fight with Germany, and to stir up a fight with Germany, to guide the whole policy of the nation toward such a "scrap," is what Mr. MAXSE, as a journalist, altogether lives for. But our curiosity was aroused as to how he would get around certain very obvious facts.

We wondered, for instance, how he would treat the cordial and quite unqualified assent given by Mr. BALFOUR, the leader of Mr. MAXSE'S party, to the views of Sir EDWARD GREY; how he would regard the numerous and strong expressions of sympathy from this country, such as never before have greeted similar proposals; what he would have to say to the prompt action of the French Government in seeking to open negotiations of the same sort as those Sir EDWARD and President TAFT contemplate; and how he would get around the recent expressions of good feeling on the subject from the Government of Japan, whom the war party in England confidently expected would put a spoke in the wheel of the negotiations. We must admit that we are disappointed in Mr. MAXSE. He resorts to the simple plan of practically ignoring these elements in the situation, except one or two, which he lamely misrepresents. He admits that his position and that of the anti-peace men generally is "somewhat compromised" by the utterance of Mr. BALFOUR, which is a weak way of saying that their position was absolutely repudiated by the leader of the Opposition. With regard to Mr. TAFT he dismisses the deliberate statements of the President, followed, as they have been, by opening negotiations with the British Government, as "obiter dicta," and proceeds to describe the American Senate as a fatal obstacle to Presidential plans for general unlimited arbitration.

Now this may be, in the favorite phrase of Mr. MAXSE, "abysmal ignorance," or it may be deliberate misstatement. This Teutophobe fire-eater ought to be informed as to the history of the latest preceding attempt to secure a general arbitration treaty with Great Britain. It was made by President CLEVELAND fourteen years ago. That President sent to the Senate a treaty negotiated by Mr. OLNEY and Lord PAUNCEFOTE, "for the arbitration of all matters in difference" between the two countries. It commanded the approval of a large majority of the Senators, but fell short by three votes of the two-thirds required by the Constitution. "The promise of transcendent good" afforded by the treaty, to use the eloquent words of Mr. CLEVELAND, was appreciated by the country even then, though there had been comparatively little discussion of the subject. Since then the agitation has been earnest, progressive, and effectual. There is to-day in this country no sign of any opposition to Mr. TAFT'S far-reaching plan for the promotion of peace, from any considerable element in America. There has been, on the contrary, a general and deeply enthusiastic favorable response from all parties, from all classes, and from all interests. Indeed, nothing that any President in recent times has done has so appealed to the conscience and the reason of the American people. Mr. TAFT, by that act, following on his effort in the same spirit to weld the ties of amity by commercial agreement between the United States and the great English-speaking State on our northern boundary, has established himself upon a new and higher level of popular esteem and confidence.

These are facts which the professional peace-haters of England may ignore if they choose, but they do so at their peril. Our readers are aware that we recognize the existence of grave perils in the path of Great Britain and Germany, imposing particular difficulties upon the former. But how foolish, how utterly spiteful and peevish it is, for those who claim to be the special guardians of Great Britain, as against Germany, to belittle and scoff at an intelligent attempt on the part of the British Government to secure permanent peace in other directions. The Government of the United States has nothing to say, and certainly nothing to do, with the relations of Great Britain and any other nation. It seeks peace with all. Why should that effort be opposed by those who are sure that Great Britain is going to have trouble elsewhere?

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Again the Parental Paradox.

A phenomenon noticed long ago—the fact that practically all fathers considered worthy of the name work hard to save their own children from the early hardships and difficulties which by almost universal assumption would do more than anything else to prepare them for later usefulness and success—may have received the beginning of an explanation in an address delivered this week by Dr. JOHN ELLIOTT before the Federation for Child Study. At any rate, he offered a new theory, more plausible than most of those hitherto presented, to account for the alleged inferiority of the rich man's son, as compared with the poor man's.

The latter, Dr. ELLIOTT said, learned while very young to realize the responsibilities with which his father is burdened, and, voluntarily or involuntarily, took a part of them on his own shoulders. Often the part was too heavy for the boy's strength, but if he escaped or survived that danger he received a training which the boy whose father needs no such help entirely misses.

Just how much there is in this argument it would be hard to tell—as hard, perhaps, as to tell whether or not the sons of poverty average better than those of wealth. The belief that they do is widespread, but it rests on no trustworthy statistics, and its acceptance seems to depend on forgetting, for one thing, that only the rich boys who make sensational failures of their lives, and the poor boys who make sensational successes, attract much notice, and, for another, that the vastly greater number of poor boys puts the rich boys at a disadvantage in supplying candidates for fame and the biographical dictionaries.

That poverty crushes and ruins its thousands where wealth wrecks its hundreds is undeniable, and there is room for the suspicion that money neither makes nor unmakes the boy who has in him the elements of any kind of eminence—that though it is an influence, it is rarely or never decisive.

Generous, But Not Tactful.

Col. BURK BURNETT of Fort Worth, Texas, has a curious fad—that of paying the hotel bills of men with more or less right to call themselves statesmen. Whether this is a habit or a purpose of the Colonel's the dispatches on the subject do not make quite clear, but apparently it is in some degree both, for the report is that a Colonel who has worn a much higher title found that he had no account to settle after a recent visit to a Fort Worth hotel, and that like experiences are in store for a Texan Governor and a Texan Senator wherever they may "put up" while in the State.

It seems improbable, however, that all eminent public men will care to accept hospitality of this peculiar form very frequently, and some of them might prefer to pay their own hotel bills, if not always, at least whenever the personal relation of guest and host is clearly established. Col. BURNETT, we read, has land that he measures by the square mile, not by the acre, and on the land he has more cattle than he could easily count. But these facts are better proof that he can afford to pay the hotel bills of other people, if he cares to do so, than that the chosen objects of his generous ardor would not be happier—and safer—if they lightened their own purses instead of adding to the weight thereof that of an obligation which might some day be inconveniently heavy.

Of course the presumably well-intentioned Colonel will be cruelly hurt if his kind offer of free board meets with rejection, no matter how delicately worded the refusals may be, but from the pain he may learn wisdom. It may even be borne in upon him that there is an element of impertinence, not to say insolence, in the making of such a proposal. The rich men of the country have, indeed, not a little reason for assuming that anything they want to give anybody will be accepted, if not with gratitude, at least with a semblance of it; but ready as we are to accept gifts from which many profit, even though the many are quite able to pay for whatever they need, there is a limit of toleration which has not yet been passed in the matter of individual assistance.

Fighting Over a Definition.

All this excitement among the French wine growers seems to be due to the determination of part of them to limit as narrowly as possible the application of the word "champagne," and of others to stretch its meaning until it covers a lot of ground. To put the case differently, the owners of vineyards producing what has always been called champagne violently object to sharing the value of the name with neighbors, near or remote, who make a wine which under any other name would not sell as well.

The desire to restrict is no less easily comprehensible than that to extend, and the interests involved are too contradictory for reconciliation or compromise. The man who says that "champagne" is wine made in a certain place—his place, by the way—will never agree with him who insists that it is wine made anywhere—including his place—in a certain manner. They can never come to an agreement, for their quarrel is over a definition.

The public, though, as usual, the party most deeply concerned in the controversy, will have no voice in its settlement. The situation is one made familiar to us by our own "pure food" rows, and from their outcome we have learned that only too often the results of victory and defeat are much the same.

TIME FOR TREE PLANTING.

Many Neighborhoods in This City May Now Be Beautified.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Spring has come, and with it the season most favorable for street tree planting, an enterprise which the Tree Planting Association specially commends to the tree loving and wide-awake property owner. Despite the prolonged cold weather, the wonderful dynamic sap is already energetically imparting its elemental stimulus to every awakening tree and plant, and planting should be undertaken with as little delay as possible, with these advantages, that you are likely to secure more readily a choice of tree or other plant in the now busy nurseries, and by anticipating dry, warm days which often occur in the planting season you will be able to do the work under safer conditions. A young tree or other plant, for instance, when taken out of the ground, with good roots full of tender fibres, as ought to be the case, is likely to suffer serious impairment in vitality if carelessly exposed to the sun and wind, since these hair-like roots are a part of the feeding processes of the tree. The roots, therefore, should be protected against such exposure and kept moist until restored to hospitable mother earth.

A well formed, sound young tree, properly planted and maintained, is always an attractive feature about one's habitation, and will add many times its cost to the value of the property so readily and effectively improved.

Our city comprises a vast territory, in many parts of which, in the several boroughs, opportunities are unlimited for the much to be desired roadside tree planting about which we write so much. There are too many dead and disfigured trees still standing to our discredit, hundreds of them, I am sorry to say. These should be removed and replaced by young trees. No new roadway should henceforth be publicly projected and constructed without including in its design provision for tree planting. Not to provide for tree planting as an essential part of our diverse and composite municipal construction is a reproach to our judgment of proper things to do. We have a remarkable example of pitiful and imperfectly developed legislation in the fifty-million-dollar highway law, which went into effect a year or so ago. Every member of the committee secured provision for the building of a road for his particular bailiwick, but no one thought of making provision for the planting of roadside trees, nor has there been any such provision since.

It is by no means impracticable, but on the contrary it is entirely feasible, to plant trees in many parts of the city, especially in localities north of Washington Square and extending both sides of the Park into the more resourceful Bronx Borough, while in the Kings, Queens, and Richmond territory there are exceptional opportunities for beautifying and giving character to many neighborhoods.

Hospital Saturday and Sunday.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Our last year's figures show that the forty-five New York hospitals which are aided through the Hospital Saturday and Sunday Association are caring for 3,155 free bed patients every day in the year on an average. All our contributions are used solely for this most necessary service to the sick poor. The appeal both to pity and to good citizenship should be irresistible when one thinks of these 6,155 beds, each containing a suffering man, woman, or child whose own home can offer little comfort or means of recovery. Think of the tenfold increased cost to society of failure to give proper care to the sick or injured among the poor in New York's crowded tenements.

Charles Lanier, our Treasurer, has received to-day a new contribution of $2,500 from a New Yorker abroad, who wishes it included in the distribution about to be made to the hospitals. Some of them do not know which way to turn for daily maintenance. Surely there are many others who will gladly respond to such a need at such a time as this. Ten dollars provides a week of hospital care that may save a life.

Many gifts large and small are still needed to make up the $200,000 which is called for this year. They may be sent to Charles Lanier, Treasurer, 59 Cedar Street, or to Mrs. James Speyer, Treasurer Woman's Auxiliary, 257 Madison Avenue, New York City.

Suffragists' Attacks on Officials.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

This morning's TIMES, under the heading "An Assertion with an Application," expresses surprise at the statement that suffragists, as a society, are content to attack no public officers except those opposed to votes for women.

Since the suffrage ranks are composed of hosts of women interested in the general welfare, who have found their efforts for public improvement defeated simply because they lack the power of the ballot, it is scarcely a matter of wonder that they have learned the wisdom of concentrating on the one essential.

Moreover, should the suffragists, as a society, endeavor to attack all corrupt officials they would find themselves constantly employed.

The Bacon-May Engagement.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Neither the Ambassador to France nor Col. Henry May discussed settlements on Robert Low Bacon or Miss Cecilia May. Miss Cecilia May severed her engagement because Mr. Bacon refused to make the required promises relating to mixed marriages of the Catholic Church.

NEEDS OF LAKEVIEW HOME.

Its Mortgage of $12,000 Has Not Yet Been Raised, Miss American Writes.

Miss Sadie American, President of the Lakeview Home, opened at Arrochar, S. I., last Sunday, under the auspices of the New York section of the Council of Jewish Women, writes to THE TIMES:

"In your account of the dedication of the Lakeview Home, at Arrochar, S. I., on Sunday, you state that the mortgage of $12,000 was raised or would be raised by the end of the week. I regret to say that we were not so fortunate, and that this statement might prevent our securing the money necessary to raise the mortgage. I am, therefore, taking the liberty of asking you to correct this statement and to say that we hope we will receive the money before long to raise the mortgage."

A DANGEROUS SHORE.

Accidents to Ships Along Southern Long Island Are Costly.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The letter from a "Hydrographic Engineer" which you published yesterday, in which the writer sees in the accident which befell the Prinzess Irene an "impressive argument" for the development of Montauk Point as a port of entry, is certainly timely. It is no exaggeration to say that the southern shore of Long Island is one of the most dangerous in this country. No stronger proof could be cited than the fact that the Government finds it necessary to maintain twenty-eight life-saving stations along it. Yet it is over this dangerous course that our transatlantic liners must pass in order to reach their piers in New York.

That past experience shows that life and property are in constant jeopardy over this route is seen in a report which General Superintendent Kimball of the Life Saving Service made in Washington last December. He announced that from July 1, 1890, to June 30, 1910, a period of twenty years, the records of his department showed that during the time mentioned the southern coast of Long Island had been the scene of 162 accidents, resulting in a property loss of $3,492,875. He was proud to note, however, that while the accidents occurred on vessels that had a total of 4,281 souls on board, only 42 persons lost their lives, which small number he attributed to the number of life-saving stations the Government maintained on one hand and the high efficiency in which they were manned on the other.

Of Doubtful Convenience.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Is it not just about time to compliment the train dispatchers' office of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company on its success in arranging at least some parts of the train schedule for the "convenience" of the public? I refer especially to the transfer point at 149th Street and Third Avenue during the non-rush hours, when trains run on six to fifteen minute headway. So as not to hurry any one, the schedules on the "L" and Subway are arranged that the trains on each reach the stations at the same time; passengers, if lucky, can see the train they want just pull out of the station. This arrangement means up to fifteen minutes' wait for the next train and no conveniences on the platform to sit down. Why cannot the starting times on one system be advanced one-half of the headway, which would give all passengers ample time for a convenient transfer and would avoid a disagreeable wait.

Enlisted Men in Navy Menials?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Arthur F. Cosby's defense in this morning's TIMES of the social position of enlisted men in the army, as he has found it, is most encouraging. One would hate to think that the Jeffersonian simplicity of American ideals was so far a thing of the past that the American people would endure to think that the uniform of an enlisted man in the military service "marks him as a menial," as "N. W. C." seems to think. And yet our encouragement at Mr. Cosby's statement is a little the less because his service seems to have been in volunteer regiments and in time of war—i. e., under conditions where there is least of that of which "N. W. C." complains. But we will gladly accept Mr. Cosby's answer for the army. Will any one venture to say the same for the regular navy?

No "Wave of Crime" in Chinatown.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

At a time when there is so much being written and said about a "crime wave" sweeping the city, it seems only fair that the Police Department should be complimented for its efficiency in preserving order and preventing crime in Chinatown during the week of the Chinese Fair. Despite the fact that the narrow streets were thronged with thousands of visitors, to my knowledge there was not one act of violence or theft reported. This seems all the more commendable when the city is alleged to be overrun with all kinds of crooks, who, one would naturally suppose, would seek to profit by such an opportunity.

Small Checks and Creditors.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"Clericus" must be inexperienced or he would know that the only favor a woman asks of her bank is to have her good checks cashed. Business men and concerns may never draw small checks, but often ask big favors in loans, &c. It was not so long ago when the banks of such a large city as New York practically suspended specie payment. My bank has my money and gives me no interest. All I ask is the privilege of having my good checks cashed, be they great or small. "Clericus" has not yet learned that trades people do not present bills at the doors of customers who have credit and can pay by check. Their other customers probably pay cash as they make their purchases

Next Season's Opera Prices.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Is there any possibility that the Metropolitan Opera Company can or will explain why, if it is necessary for them to raise the price of orchestra chairs to subscribers for next season, the companies in Chicago, Philadelphia, and Boston can give opera on regular subscription nights at $5, with popular performances on Saturday nights at half price? The "stars" are of the same magnitude—in many cases the same "stars" who twinkle on the stage of the Metropolitan.

AN INTERESTED SUBSCRIBER.

THE BRASS BAND SET.

A big red touring car;
I love the wine that makes a noise,
A band 'round my cigar.
I love to wear the loudest clothes;
I love to book a bet;
I love the sound of money mad,

I love the sight of money,
The yellow and the green;
I love a noisy woman,
I gown her like a queen.
I love the Lobster Palace,
The girls of a sextette—
The clash of gold and silver;

I love the blare of trumpet
That heralds me to-day;
I love the crash of cymbals
That says I'm on Broadway.
I love the bustling motor
That speeds me into debt;
I love metallic music,

COLLECTORS TO BID ON A GUTENBERG BIBLE

One of the Seven Known Vellum Copies to be Sold at the Hoe Sale on April 24.

Only One Book Ever Sold Higher at Public Sale—England May Endeavor to Regain This Rare Book.

Among the treasures in the Robert Hoe library, the first part of which is to be sold at auction beginning April 24, the book that is arousing the keenest speculation among collectors and dealers as to the price it will bring is the Gutenberg Bible, printed on vellum. Mr. Hoe's copy has been called the handsomest and most richly decorated Gutenberg Bible in existence, and it attained an auction price of $20,000 in London fourteen years ago, the highest sum ever paid for a Gutenberg Bible in the auction room, and the second highest price any printed book ever sold for at auction.

The book holding the record is the famous Mentz Psalter, richly illuminated, printed in 1459, which brought about $24,750 in 1884 at the sale of Sir John Thorold's library in London. It was bought by Quaritch, the dealer, and is now owned by J. Pierpont Morgan. Mr. Morgan has two copies of the Gutenberg Bible, one on vellum and the other on paper, the former not as fine a copy as the one in the Hoe library. Mr. Hoe also had a paper copy, but it is not to be offered at the forthcoming sale.

Most of the Gutenberg Bibles were printed on paper. It has been said that probably 180 copies were so printed. Thirty copies were printed on vellum. There are about twenty-seven paper copies known to be in existence, but five of these only contain a single volume. The Bible, as it left the press of Gutenberg and Fust in Mainz, between the years 1450 and 1455, was in two volumes. The book bears no date, so that the exact year is not positively known. It is the first book printed from movable types.

Of the vellum copies, which were handsomely ornamented with illuminated capitals and other figures, seven copies are said to be in existence. The Morgan and the Hoe copies are the only ones in America. Of the five vellum copies in Europe one is in the British Museum, one in the National Library at Paris, one in the Royal Library at Berlin, and two in libraries in Leipsic.

The Hoe copy has an interesting history. It bears a book plate with the inscription, "Ex Bibliotheca Familiae Nostitzianae," dated 1774. It is said to have been at one time in the Mainz Library. Early in the last century George Nicol, a prominent book dealer of London, obtained it and at the sale of his effects in 1825 it was bought for Henry Perkins, a wealthy brewer and one of the greatest book collectors of his time. He paid for it about $2,500. On the death of his son the Perkins library was sold in 1873 and the vellum Gutenberg was bought by the Earl of Ashburnham for $17,000.

On the dispersal of the Ashburnham library in 1897, one of the most magnificent that ever went under the hammer, Quaritch paid about $20,000 for the book, and he priced it at £5,000 or $25,000 in his catalogue. Just what Mr. Hoe paid is not known, but it is believed to have been a trifle less than $25,000. A great effort will be made, it is believed, to have the book returned to England, as representatives from some of the largest private and public libraries abroad will be at the sale.

The two volumes of this celebrated Bible contain 641 unnumbered leaves without signatures or catchwords. Two of the original leaves, however, are missing, but they have been perfectly replaced in facsimile. The book is what is known in the bibliographic world as the forty-two line Gutenberg Bible, as all of the pages after the sixth leaf contain forty-two lines to the page, the preceding leaves having forty and forty-one. It is adorned with 123 finely painted and illuminated miniature initials, many containing highly finished marginal decorations of ornaments, birds, flowers, fruit, monkeys and grotesques in the best style of Renaissance art, painted ornamental capitals, and running titles of the books in blue and red.

It differs from nearly all of the other vellum copies in having headings at the commencement of the Epistle of St. Jerome and the first book of Genesis printed in red. It is presumed that on account of the difficulty encountered in printing in a second color the task was abandoned. In the British Museum copy these spaces were left blank. The binding also adds to the historic interest of the book, being the original contemporary oak boards covered with pigskin and having twenty ornamental metal bosses and eight clasps.

Seven copies of the Gutenberg Bible are in America. Two of these are the Hoe and the Morgan vellum copies. Of the five paper copies Mr. Hoe had one, which will be sold with a later instalment of the library, and Mr. Morgan owns one, the famous Theodore Irwin copy containing the complete 641 leaves, but with two in facsimile. Another is owned by James Ellsworth of Chicago, and the other two are in the New York Public Library and the General Theological Seminary library.

Mr. Ellsworth's copy is the only Gutenberg Bible that has thus far appeared in American auction rooms. It is the well-known Brinley copy, which was sold in 1881 in this city for $8,000 to Hamilton Cole, a prominent New York lawyer. Brayton Ives bid $7,750 for the book at the time, and a little later, it is said, he gave Mr. Cole $10,000 for the Bible. When Mr. Ives's valuable library was sold in 1891 Mr. Ellsworth bought the book for $14,800.

The first Gutenberg Bible that ever came to this country is the one in the Lenox Library. It was bought by James Lenox in 1847, and it created a great stir in the book world. He paid $2,500, and as book collecting had not attained the grandeur of such high prices as have become common to-day the price was regarded as exorbitant. Henry Stevens, who acted for many years as Mr. Lenox's agent in Europe, says in his recollections of Mr. Lenox that it was heralded as a "mad price" in the London papers. "The sale," adds Mr. Stevens, "was a bibliographical event and was greatly talked and written about both in London and New York, inasmuch as Mr. Lenox, whose name as that of the unlucky purchaser had been freely used, declined to clear the book from the New York Custom House and pay for it. The cost, including commission, expenses, and customs duty amounting to about $3,000, was deemed by him an amount of indiscretion for which he could not be responsible. However, after some reflection and a good deal of correspondence he took home the book and soon learned to cherish it as a bargain and the chief ornament of his library."

The Gutenberg Bible in the library of the General Theological Seminary was presented a few years before his death by Dean Eugene Hoffman. This also has an interesting history. In 1884 it came within $500 of bringing a price equal to that paid for the Hoe vellum copy at the Ashburnham sale. Quaritch paid about $19,500 for it at the sale of the Sir John Thorold Library, a record price in the auction room for a paper copy. It then passed into possession of the Rev. William Makellar of Edinburgh, but at the sale of his library in 1898 brought only £2,980. It is a very handsome copy. What Dean Hoffman paid for it is not known.

The Gutenberg Bible is sometimes referred to as the Mazarin Bible from the fact that the first recognized copy of it was accidentally discovered in the library of Cardinal Mazarin.

MET ON SHIPBOARD, WEDDED IN LONDON

SURPRISE FOR RELATIVES

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 12. — The wedding took place to-day, by special license, at St. George's, Hanover Square, of Meredith Bright Colket of Philadelphia and Lizzie Alberta Kelsey, daughter of the late Israel Kelsey of West Haven, Conn.

PHILADELPHIA, April 12.—News of the wedding of Meredith B. Colket, an attorney of this city, and Miss Alberta Kelsey of West Haven, Conn., followed swiftly a brief announcement of his engagement three weeks or so ago, and came as a great surprise to Mr. Colket's relatives as well as to his friends.

Mr. Colket sailed from New York on the Arabic Feb. 4, and all that his nearest relatives know is that he met Miss Kelsey on the voyage. When Mr. Colket left he intended to spend two or three months among the Mediterranean ports, and so a letter from Cairo, Egypt, was no surprise, but the statement that he was engaged to Miss Kelsey was.

A few days ago Mr. Colket cabled to a brother living in New York that he intended to be married this week in London, but neglected to state the day. Another cablegram received this afternoon notified his relatives that the wedding had taken place.

Mr. Colket, who has made his home at the Merion Cricket Club since the death of his father a year or so ago, was for many years connected with the Employers Indemnity Company in the West End Trust Building. About the first of this year he left the insurance company and entered a firm of lawyers, with offices in the Penn Square Building. A younger brother, who lived with Mr. Colket at the Merion Club, is with him on his European trip and acted as best man at the wedding this morning.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 12.—Miss Alberta Kelsey, who married Meredith B. Colket of Philadelphia in London to-day, is the daughter of the late Israel Kelsey of West Haven. She has been traveling with Mr. and Mrs. William H. Moseley of this city, and met Mr. Colket on the steamer which carried the party to London. They became engaged during the voyage. Upon landing news of their engagement was cabled to their relatives, and their wedding to-day followed.

Miss Kelsey is a sister of Mrs. Moseley, her traveling companion. Their father was President of the Winchester Avenue and West Haven trolley lines and left a large fortune.

MILITARY WEDDING APRIL 25.

Capt. J. A. Barnard of Seventh Regiment to Wed Miss Margaret Walsh.

The wedding of Miss Margaret Ruth Lawrence Walsh, daughter of Mrs. James W. Walsh, to J. Augustus Barnard, which will take place at 4 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, April 25, in St. Bartholomew's Church, might be termed a military wedding.

The bridegroom is Captain of Company K, Seventh Regiment, and the bride's uncle, Newbold T. Lawrence, a former member of the regiment, will give her in marriage. The best man is to be Andrew Varick Stout, who, with five of the ushers selected, are members of Company K. They are Lieut. Bayard Dominick, Lieut. Charles B. Crane, Stanley D. McGraw, Charles W. Ogden, and Murray H. Coggeshall. The remaining three ushers are members of Squadron A—Horace Barnard, James W. Walsh, and Hubert Litchfield.

Owing to the absence of Dr. Leighton Parks in Washington, D. C., on April 25, the wedding ceremony will be performed by the Rev. Dr. William E. McCord, Chaplain of the Seventh Regiment, assisted by the Rev. Dr. William R. Grosvenor.

There will be a small reception at the home of the bride's mother, 525 Madison Avenue, after the church ceremony, at which only the members of the two families and a few intimate friends will be present.

Mr. Barnard gives his bachelor dinner on the night of April 22 at the University Club.

Miss Seward Weds Charles R. Woods.

The wedding of Miss Emma Seward, daughter of Mrs. Seward and the late George F. Seward, to Charles Royal Woods took place last evening at the home of the bride's mother, 136 West Seventy-third Street. The Rev. Dr. Alexander officiated. Owing to the recent death of the bride's father, only members of the immediate families were present.

The bride wore a gown of white embroidered net over satin, and her tulle veil was caught up with orange blossoms. Her only ornament was a string of pearls, a family heirloom. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and roses.

There were no attendants. George O. Seward gave his sister in marriage, and Harry Bullock acted as best man.

MRS. MACKAY QUITS AS SUFFRAGE HEAD

Resigns the Presidency of Her Equal Franchise Society, but Retains Her Membership.

REQUIRES TOO MUCH TIME

Statement Explains That She Finds It Impossible to Meet the Necessary Work Involved.

Mrs. Mackay, wife of Clarence H. Mackay and founder of the Equal Franchise Society, one of the first society leaders to take an active part in the woman suffrage movement, at a meeting of the Executive Board of the organization yesterday afternoon resigned her place as President.

This action on the part of Mrs. Mackay came as an entire surprise to the members of the board. She explained that she was not entirely certain of her plans for the near future, and she felt that she had better resign in favor of some one more certain of the work they would be able to do. She said she would be none the less interested in the society and in the suffrage movement, and as a member of the Executive Committee would give as much of her time as possible to the work.

The Equal Franchise Society was organized with sixteen members, and now in less than three years numbers 3,000. Its rooms on the twenty-eighth floor of the Metropolitan Life Building tower, Mrs. Mackay's private office, an office and reception room occupied by the clerical force, and a meeting room for official gatherings. These have all been paid for out of Mrs. Mackay's private purse, both rent and furnishing. Mrs. Mackay personally superintended the furnishing. She will continue to provide the offices, it was stated yesterday, and still reserve the one she has always occupied for her personal use. Here is a statement given out by Mrs. Mackay regarding her resignation:

The work to secure the political expression of my sex is to me the vital issue of the day, and our cause must always be the greatest interest I have to strive for.

In considering the plans for our society's propaganda during the coming months, I find that it will be absolutely necessary for the President to do a great deal of additional work in this office, besides much traveling and speechmaking in outside districts. My plans for the immediate future are so uncertain that it is not possible for me to commit myself to the necessary engagements. In justice to the work that should be done, I feel that it is only fair to this organization that I should resign from the Presidency, while remaining a member of the board, and continuing my interest here.

I have handed in my resignation at the meeting of the Board this afternoon. The First Vice President, Mrs. Aldrich, and the Second Vice President, Mrs. Nathan, can assume my responsibilities until our next annual election, in December, when another President can be nominated and elected.

In organizing the Equal Franchise Society Mrs. Mackay opened her own house for the meetings and presided at them. She organized a series of meetings which were held in the Garden Theatre last year and this last Winter in the Maxine Elliott Theatre. The tableaux given under the auspices of the Equal Franchise Society in January at the latter theatre for the benefit of the suffrage cause and personally directed by Mrs. Mackay, were a notable success.

Mrs. Mackay has given a large amount of her time and personal effort to the work in a quiet way that has not been known except to those close to her in the work. She has spent on an average four hours a day in her office dictating letters to a stenographer two and three hours at a time.

Mrs. Richard Aldrich, First Vice President of the society, will act as President until the next annual meeting.

GET MANHATTAN FOR 10 YEARS

Shuberts Will Continue to Run Theatre as a "Combination" House.

The Shuberts announced last night that they had leased the Manhattan Opera House from Oscar Hammerstein for ten years. The Shuberts, and the managers associated with them, have had booking arrangements, at the Manhattan for the last month or more.

The theatre will be run as it is at present, as a "combination" house, playing high-grade productions at low prices. The attractions of the Shuberts, Henry W. Savage, William A. Brady, Liebler & Co., Daniel V. Arthur, John Cort, and other independent managers, will be booked there for engagements of one or more weeks.

Since the "combination" policy was started at the Manhattan "Alias Jimmy Valentine," Mrs. Leslie Carter in "Two Women," "The Clerk" and other offerings of a like nature have been given there. It is expected that most attractions will be continued at the Manhattan for at least four weeks.

One of the special features of the new arrangement is that Sothern and Marlowe will play their annual New York engagements at the Manhattan, just as they formerly played at the Academy of Music—for a season of eight weeks. In fact, the conduct of the Opera House will be much the same as that of the Academy of Music before it became a stock theatre.

STAGE CHILDREN'S BENEFIT.

Performance at Broadway Theatre on April 30 in Aid of Instruction.

Lee Shubert and Lew Fields have donated the use of the Broadway Theatre to the Stage Children's Festival Fund for a benefit to be given on Sunday evening, April 30. The idea of providing for stage children was started in 1877 by "Aunt Louisa" Eldridge, Tony Pastor, and Mrs. E. L. Fernandez, and up to the incorporation of the fund this present year, the assistance has gone no further than to provide a Christmas entertainment for the poorer children of the stage.

It is the present purpose of the fund to provide dancing, singing, and other instruction, as well as general assistance to these children, and a house of twenty-two rooms has been donated by the Carter estate at Bensonhurst, L. I., to be used as a vacation home.

The officers of the fund are Mrs. Millie Thorn, President; Mrs. Ruth Litt, First Vice President; Dr. Ida C. Nahm, Second Vice President; Mrs. Kate Douglas Wiggin, Third Vice President; Marie Booth Russell, (Mrs. Robert Mantell,) Fourth Vice President, and Mrs. J. H. Vantine, Treasurer.

Ball Players See "Little Miss Fix-It."

Members of the New York and Philadelphia baseball teams attended the performance of "Little Miss Fix-It" at the Globe Theatre last night and occupied all of the boxes on the right and left of the stage, while the umpires and local officials had orchestra seats. Several verses referring to the opening of the season were introduced by Jack Norworth in the song "Months and Months and Months."

Augustus Thomas Going to London.

Augustus Thomas will sail for London soon to take personal charge of the arrangements for the English production of his latest play, "As a Man Thinks." Mr. Thomas wishes to arrange with some London manager so that John Mason, who is playing the leading rôle here, can appear in the same part abroad.

Bonci Sails for Europe To-day.

Alessandro Bonci, the Italian tenor, who has just concluded a concert tour of seventy-five engagements, will sail for Europe to-day on the Provence. He is to appear at the opera in Rome during May, and thereafter will sail for Buenos Aires. He returns to New York for another concert tour on Jan. 1, 1912.

"La Gioconda" Sung Again.

"La Gioconda" was repeated at the Metropolitan Opera House last evening, with Miss Destinn, Mrs. Homer, Mme. Claessens, and Messrs. Martin, Amato, and de Segurola in the cast. Mr. Toscanini conducted.

Gaelic Society's Concert Sunday.

The Gaelic Society will give a concert at the Broadway Theatre next Sunday evening when the orchestra will be under the direction of Victor Herbert. Mrs. Helen O'Donnell will be heard at this concert, and among those who are expected to be present is Archbishop Farley.

300,000 HONORED JOHNSON.

Silent Throng Lined Streets as Funeral Procession Passed.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, April 12.—A silent throng, the men bareheaded, in the rain lined five miles of Cleveland streets this afternoon as the body of Tom L. Johnson was borne through the thoroughfares. It is estimated that 300,000 persons witnessed the passing of the cortege. At the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway station the coffin was placed aboard a private car, which was attached to the regular train leaving here at 6:10 P. M., and due at the Grand Central Station, New York, shortly after 9 o'clock to-morrow morning.

The body was taken from the house at 4 P. M. The pall bearers, men who followed Johnson in the years of his strength, came slowly forth bearing the coffin to the hearse.

The service in the drawing room had been brief and sobs came as the minister recited the lines from Holy Writ: "The Lord answer thee in the day of trouble." The reading was followed by a prayer in which the Rev. Mr. Cooley, friend of the dead leader for many years, himself came near breaking down.

The funeral procession moved from the Knickerbocker Apartments, a squad of mounted police leading the way. There came no sound as the cortege moved by house after house with the occupants standing bare-headed on the lawns and porches. The greatest crowds were at City Hall. Many had waited for three hours for the coming of the hearse.

The child whose note of love and sympathy for Tom Johnson lay on the mantle in his sick chamber when he died, came to the door of the Knickerbocker Apartments to-day. She bore in her hand a bunch of lilies of the valley.

"Good-bye, dear Mayor Tom," was written on a card attached. "We will never forget you. Dorothy."

The name was the same as that signed to the letter that Mr. Johnson received before he died.

The interment will be in Greenwood Cemetery, Brooklyn, to-morrow.

ART FEATURES OF HARPER COLLECTION

OPIE'S "GIRLHOOD" A GEM

Remarkable Mosaic Glass Curtain Made for National Theatre in City of Mexico on View in Tiffany Studios.

The Harper collection of pictures, books, porcelains, and miscellaneous objects, on view until the dates of sale at the American Art Galleries, are eloquent of a strong interest and a sober rather than a conventional taste in art.

The oil paintings are mostly by eighteenth century artists and include no masterpieces, but much extremely agreeable craftsmanship. The "Master Naylor," given to George Romney, is a sufficiently charming interpretation of youthful character to have been derived from any of the facile masters of the British school, ripe and tender in color and light and firm in touch. There are several replicas of famous paintings by Sir Joshua Reynolds, and a portrait of Dr. Armstrong, that is given to him direct, and is a vigorous description of a gentleman of quality, certain of himself and of his position in the world.

Thomas Gainsborough may very well have painted the portrait of William Pitt that is catalogued under his name, so easy a movement of the brush has placed the fine accents and modeling touches that give the workmanship its singular refinement. John Opie, whose talent merits more than the appreciation commonly accorded it, is represented at his best by the picture entitled "Girlhood," a golden little canvas mellowed overmuch with varnish, but a rich harmony of tawny olives and grays, and engaging in its fresh treatment of the type—a true vision of that "age of innocence" which Sir Joshua never fully succeeded in portraying.

The miniatures are numerous, mostly without attribution, and thus giving opportunity for a good deal of entertaining research.

The Tiffany Studios.

The Tiffany Studios are showing in their private gallery a remarkable piece of glass work, a mosaic glass curtain which has been made for the National Theatre in the City of Mexico. The curtain is said to contain more than 2,500 square feet of glass mosaic and to weigh twenty-seven tons. Minute pieces of glass forming the design are set into a cement backing, and the whole is lighted from the front. The curtain will be operated by hydraulic pressure.

The scene is one of sunset, the noble snow-capped peaks of the two great volcanoes, Ixtaccihuatl and Popocatepetl, rising from a flower-filled valley against a brilliant sky. The artists who made the studies for the final composition are to be congratulated upon the result of their labors, the picture, regarded simply as a decoration, irrespective of the feats of craftsmanship involved, having great beauty and a moving quality of color.

At the Women's Cosmopolitan Club this week are paintings and works of applied designs by the members. There are portraits by Amanda Brewster Sewell characteristic of that artist's direct style, portraits in wax by Ethel Mundy, and two portraits by Julia Dewey, both excellent in construction, and the one of a child in blue beautifully modeled and charming and sensitive in color. The warm whites and pinks of the other portraits also are skillfully harmonized in a general tone that has freshness without crudity.

Arlington Art Galleries.

At the Arlington Art Galleries in Brooklyn is a double exhibition of paintings by May Lewis Close and H. Ledyard Towle. The former are rather amateurish in quality, good student's work, but too glib in expression. Mr. Towle is more serious. His "Portrait of Mrs. T.," despite the weakness in the drawing of the hands, is full of character, and the structure of the head has been carefully sought. The little landscapes, of Whistlerian inspiration no doubt, are well worth while. "The Coming Storm, Fire Island," having notable virtues of drawing in the forms of the sky and water, as well as much delicacy and purity of color.

Thought and energy in a young artist's performance promise well for his future, and if the first predominates, as in this case, the pleasure given by the work will be of a rewarding quality.

Ex-Police Inspector John Brennan.

Ex-Police Inspector John Brennan, who was for years one of the best known police officers in Brooklyn, died yesterday afternoon at his home, 277 Madison Street, that borough. He was born in Ireland seventy-six years ago, and came to this country when he was 15 years old. Mr. Brennan joined the old Metropolitan police force in 1861. In 1883 he was placed in command of the old Fifth Sub-Precinct in Brooklyn as commanding Sergeant, and a few years later he became a Captain, commanding the Lee Avenue Precinct. He was made an Inspector in 1896, and continued as such until he retired from the department, in 1903, after a service of forty-two years. Inspector Brennan was a member of the Royal Arcanum, the Police Mutual Aid Association, and the Veteran Policemen's Association. He is survived by a son and four daughters.

Neighborhood Association Gets Use of It—New Charges Against Devlin.

The use of the auditorium of the Commercial High School, Brooklyn, for entertainments to be held under the auspices of the Brooklyn Neighborhoods Association on Sunday evenings, for which an admission fee would be charged, was permitted by the Board of Education yesterday.

It is the intention to have lectures and concerts and other forms of entertainment in the school, the charge to be nominal, to partly cover the cost.

On resolution of City Supt. William H. Maxwell, additional charges were filed against Michael E. Devlin, Principal of Public School 8. The charges include neglect of duty and insubordination.

Mrs. Doyle, who was 76 years old, came to Chicago in 1852. Twelve years later she entered the Harrison family as a nurse. During the following nine years she became acquainted with many of the Irish voters of the city, assuming a political leadership over them that became an important element in the political affairs of the city.

When Carter H. Harrison, Sr., became a candidate for Congress in 1873 Mrs. Doyle began her career as an active politician.

CAUTION

Good teeth are of such vital importance that you should use the greatest care in selecting your dentist.

Students and young college graduates must, of course, get their experience, but for important work on your teeth you do not want to be experimented on, and you want the best skill and appliances that modern dental science can give you. Our operators are all college graduates of many years' experience. Only such have the skill requisite for the class of work we do.

You should also know something more of your dentist's qualifications than what he says of himself. What his patients say of him and his work is of more importance to you. We give below extracts from a letter written to us by Mr. William Collett:

G. Gordon Martin, Inc.:
Gentlemen—
The excellent piece of dental work done for me has given me much satisfaction and comfort, and I am convinced that no other form of dental work can equal your expert dentistry. I hope this simple expression of my satisfaction may send many other afflicted ones to you.
Very truly,
WILLIAM COLLETT,
97 Cedar St., City.

We invite you to call at our office for consultation and examination of your mouth, for which there will be no charge, and let us explain what we can do for you.

If you cannot call at once, send for our book,
"Martinolar Dentistry."

SPORTING NEWS

FREDDIE WELSH DEFEATS MOORE

Clever English Boxer Outclasses Quaker at National Sporting Club.

Freddie Welsh, the English lightweight, decisively demonstrated his superiority ove Pal Moore of Philadelphia, in the feature bout of ten rounds before the National Sporting Club, last night. The Britton jumped to the lead before the first round had been finished, and never surrendered it, finishing up with considerable to spare. He left the ring with hardly a mark, while Moore's face bore much evidence of the continual jabbing to which he had been subjected. Welsh drew blood from Moore's nose in the third round, and there was no let-up until the bout ended.

Welsh outclassed Moore in every department of the game, and at every stage of the bout. Pal managed to slip over a few good wallops, but they were very few and were almost entirely lost to view among the shower of jabs, hooks, swings, and uppercuts which Freddie landed on the Quaker City boy. It seemed as if the Briton could land when and wherever he wished. He was quick to take advantage of every opportunity, and Pal left few openings into which Welsh did not send some kind of a punch. Like most of the English boxers, Welsh showed that he could use either hand with almost equal effectiveness, and although he did the bulk of his punching with a straight left, he kept the right fairly busy, too.

Welsh's blocking was another prominent factor in his easy win. He warded off Moore's swings with either hand, and when he did not care to avoid the issue in this manner he gracefully backed up or ducked under Pal's arms as the Quaker swung for his head. In the latter rounds Moore began to dance around and tried to force the milling by jabbing with his left, but he was no more successful at the style than he had been in the earlier rounds. He was able to land oftener, but he usually took a counter blow for his trouble and the majority of these punches by Welsh landed harder than did those of Moore.

Moore was not able to get in his usually effective work in the infighting, as Welsh's defensive tactics were as strong in this feature of the fighting as in the open work. The Briton took care to cover Pal's right arm well in the clinches, and those uppercuts which Moore is in the habit of delivering to an opponent's jaw while holding his left hand on the neck were noticeably absent. Welsh fought just the kind of a fight that would beat Moore and, incidentally, furnished one of the prettiest exhibitions of all-around ring generalship shown in New York this year. Throughout the ten rounds he was the same calm actor, making every punch count, and avoiding the hardest wallops that Moore uncorked without any effort.

The boys agreed to fight straight Queensberry rules, protecting themselves in the breakaway, and this style proved just to Welsh's liking. He managed to protect himself perfectly in the breaks, and incidentally managed to drive over several stinging wallops to Moore's jaw during the break, with sufficient force to shake up the Quaker City boy considerably. In spite of this rule, which usually has a tendency to much clinching, the bout was remarkably free from holding. At the order of the referee the boys broke, and the official hardly had to come between them during the ten rounds. There was no evidence of foul fighting by either contestant.

The story of rounds varies little from first to last, except that in some rounds Welsh's superiorty was not so pronounced as in others. But he generally managed to show enough to gain the honors. The seventh round was the best for Moore and the most exciting of the fight, showing the best toe-to-toe punching of the ten rounds. Welsh earned the round, however, as he did eight of the others, one being even. Welsh's punch seemed to lack power, and there never was a time when Moore was in any danger of a knockout, even when the jabs came the hardest.

The semi-final was a slashing six-round bout between Kid Elle of Paterson and Al McCloskey of Elizabeth, two light heavyweights. In the first two rounds McCloskey, who was much heavier than his opponent, had all the better of the milling, but in the next four rounds Elle outpointed McCloskey and pounded him at will, but was unable to knock him out or even floor him.

In the opening preliminary Dick Peters had the better of Dave Dillon in six rounds. In the second preliminary Joe Blum, the Philadelphia protégé of Battling Nelson, outpointed young Lee. This bout also went the full six rounds.

TO REGULATE BOXING.

Senator Frawley Proposes State Athletic Commission to Control the Sport.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 12.—Boxing matches and exhibitions will be under the supervision and control of a State Athletic Commission to be appointed by the Governor, if a bill which Senator James J. Frawley of New York will introduce Monday night becomes a law. In previous sessions Senator Frawley attempted to secure more liberal legislation in reference to public boxing bouts, but none of the measures he introduced was enacted.

Under the new bill associations or clubs formed for the purpose of giving sparring exhibitions must be licensed by the State Commission. They must also file a bond in $10,000 with the State Controller and pay into the State Treasury 5 per cent. of the gross receipts. Those who engage in boxing contests must also be licensed and produce a physician's certificate to the effect that they are able to stand a reasonable amount of punishment in a ring; that they are of good character, and that they have never been convicted of crime.

The referees nominated by the contestants must be approved by the commission, and they are given power to stop a fight if one of the contestants is overmatched or if the fight becomes too brutal.

Physicians to examine pugilists are to be designated by the commission, and the physicians' certificates are to be good for one year. In addition to the annual examination the pugilists must also be examined by a physician on the day set for a contest. The sale of liquor in a building in which sparring contests are given is prohibited, and reports as to the number of tickets sold and the gross receipts must be filed with the State Commission after each contest.

There are to be three members of the commission, two of whom must be residents of New York. They are to serve without pay, but their expenses and the salary of a Secretary, limited at $5,000 a year, are to be paid out of the proceeds of the tax on boxing clubs. A club which permits a fake fight forfeits its license and another may not be issued. If a fighter is a party to a fake bout he forfeits his license and is declared guilty of a misdemeanor.

BOXING AND WRESTLING.

Packy McFarland will arrive in New York on the Twentieth Century Limited to-day. The Chicagoan will go directly from the train to his training quarters in Canon's Roadhouse to get in shape for his match with Tommy Murphy at the Fairmont A. C., April 17. He will have nearly five days to put on the finishing touches. Packy is already within one pound of the required weight, 135 pounds, which means that he can devote most of his time to boxing. Murphy had another good workout yesterday, this time in the ring of the Fairmont A. C. The Fairmont Club will hold its weekly stag on Saturday evening, on which occasion Biz Mackey of Cleveland and Boyo Driscoll, the Irish fighter, will meet in the main event of ten rounds.

Dr. B. F. Roller, who is now touring the South, is anxious to prove that he is the light-heavyweight champion wrestler of America. Roller is eager to meet the Greek champion, Demetral, who created a furore hereabouts a short while ago by his agility and cleverness against Frank Golch. Demetral has issued a challenge to Americus, and a number of Western promoters are anxious to stage the contest. The Twentieth Century A. C. has secured Demetral's signature to meet either Americus, Roller, Kid Cutler, Westergaard, or the newly arrived Bulgarian Turk.

SAMSON AFTER STEPHANOFF.

German Hercules Wants to Wrestle New Wonder from Bulgaria.

The advent of Johnny Dunn's new wrestler has apparently been the means of augmenting the troubles of the versatile manager from the jump, as attested by the following communication to THE NEW YORK TIMES, which speaks for itself:

Reading the challenge issued in behalf of Stephanoff, the new giant Bulgarian wrestler, in your paper, I have sent a telegram to Paul Samson, the German Hercules, to give me any information at once if he is willing to wrestle that terrible newcomer, from the Balkans here in New York. Samson, who bars none, including Hack, Gotch, Marmout, and Zbyasko, answered: "I accept Mr. Stephanoff's challenge at once and will wrestle him under any condition—catch-as-catch-can preferred."

Johnny Dunn states that Stephanoff stands 6 feet 3 inches and weighs 250 pounds. Samson weighs 260 pounds, is 6 feet 3½ inches in height, and is 29 years of age. Samson is remarkably fast and clever, and he proved that with Kid Cutler and Frank Gotch. He was never put on his shoulders in this country. Samson is a fair wrestler, too, on the level without pull.

If Johannes Dunn means business and sport united peacefully together, let him come and accept for his protege and latest importation from the Balkans—and the lovers of the grappling game have at last a great and fair wrestling match on the level to a finish, and that's what the public want to see, and not faking. Hoping you will publish this, I remain yours truly in sport. G. W. SPRENGER.

SPEEDWAY PARADE MAY 6.

Road Drivers to Hold Another Show —Brushes to be Arranged.

The special meeting of the Road Drivers' Association, which was held last night at the clubroom at Durando's Roadhouse, Dyckman Street, for the purpose of discussing plans and final arrangements for the horse show and parade of the organization, proved to be one of the best attended gatherings that the horsemen have had this year.

All the members present were very enthusiastic over the coming parade on the Speedway, and many new suggestions were offered to make the affair excel all others of its kind held in conjunction with light harness sport. The suggestions all appeared to meet with general approval. May 6 was named as the date for the show.

A subject that caused plenty of discussion was the arranging of dates for the Summer brushing season, which is held throughout the Summer months with regular scheduled events for all classes, in which ribbons are awarded and also trophies for the total points of the meeting. The series will consist of six dates, starting May 10. One meeting a week will be held for six weeks following the opening date.

The Treasurer's report showed a balance on hand of $1,000, which is the biggest amount held in the treasury for some time.

WHITE MAKES HIGH BILLIARD AVERAGE

Brooklyn Player Cleverly Outplays Millette in 18.2 Class B Tournament.

C. E. White of Brooklyn celebrated his competitive entrance in the 18.2 Class B billiard championship tournament last night with a victory over J. M. S. Millette of Brooklyn by a score of 300 to 157. Incidentally he hung up the record average of the series thus far with 8 4-37.

Played in the Riverside Billiard Academy, the match attracted a gallery which soon caused standing room to be at a premium, and the onlookers were rewarded with a sight at the best balk line of the championship, White breaking into double figures eleven times, with high runs of 38, 33, 27, 25, and 20 at different periods.

The winner cajoled the ivories in fine fashion, showing an average of 14 at ten innings, but dropped off a bit in the run to the twentieth inning, where the string accounted for a total of 217, an average of a trifle over 10. From this time on to the twenty-seventh inning, inclusive, he suffered a slump, netting but 21 in the interim.

Millette never seemed able to get the spheres to roll kindly, being usually confronted at his turn at the table with spread shots which took some making, and even when a tally was made the balls were invariably in such a position as to call for round-the-table play.

White won the bank and chose the black ball, rolling up 25 before taking his seat. Millette retaliated with a goose egg, missing an easy single cushion. Although he scored in each inning up to his fifth, it was at this period that White showed that he had his billiard clothes on, as he netted 38, with a total of 72. He continued this speed up to his thirteenth time at table, at which time his average was nearly 13, failing to add to a run of 20 by a miss of a massé which seemed one of his strong suits.

In his seventeenth inning he settled down in a most businesslike way and banged out 27 by the aid of nice, close billiards, interspersed with some skyrocket shots which each got a big hand. When he swung past the 200 point mark his opponent had an even 40 on his string, and was being further set back with each of White's times at the bat.

Millette instilled some hope in the breasts of his followers in his portion of the seventeenth inning, however, when he accounted for 22, the first time in the game that he had worked into double figures. At the completion of this run, brought about because he was compelled to play a five-cushion shot, Millette's string showed 62, while his opponent was just 10 beyond the 200 mark.

White had passed the 250 figure and seemed well on his way for a run when after he had totaled 254 he called a foul on himself, which the referee and his opponent had failed to notice. A little later on while in good position he failed to get the balls out of balk just when he was within hailing distance of the 300 mark.

The afternoon game called out C. G. Baxter and C. D. Conway, and although Conway went away in his first inning with a run of 22 and led to the thirty-seventh inning inclusive, Baxter overhauled him in the next. He afterward had the whip hand, finally winning by 300 to 261. The summaries:

YALE CREW AT SPRINGFIELD.

'Varsity Eight to Row on Connecticut River During Easter Vacation.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 12.—Capt. "Jack" Frost of the Yale crew to-day took his 'Varsity oarsmen to Springfield to spend Easter week rowing on the Connecticut River in preparation for the race with the University of Pennsylvania, which opens the Eli scheudle May 13. Only the regular 'Varsity eight was taken, consisting of the following: Stroke, Vanderbilt; No. 7, Van Biarcom; No. 6, Oldenborg; No. 5, Adams; No. 4, Philbin; No. 3, Romeyn; No. 2, Field, Bow, Capt. Frost, and Coxswain, Barnum.

The oarsmen left here at 2 o'clock and went to the Hotel Kimball, where they will be quartered the rest of the week. They have been assigned boating quarters at the boathouse of the Rockrimmon Club on the banks of the river, and they rowed a practice spin this evening on the course which they will use in the race with the Quakers.

It was announced to-night that Robert F. Herrick, Chairman of the Harvard Rowing Committee, would referee the Yale-Pennsylvania race.

CORNELL GETS STADIUM.

Ithacans Arrange for New Field of Elaborate Style and Type.

ITHACA, N. Y., April 12.—Cornell football warriors will in all likelihood be enabled to pursue their Fall gridiron practice in a new stadium which is to be cut in Kite Hill. This has just been decided upon by the Athletic Field Committee, which decided upon a general arrangement of the new athletic field on the land recently allotted by the university trustees.

John V. Van Pelt, a New York architect who submitted the plans, was instructed to proceed with the grading plans so that the grading of the fields may be begun next month. He was further authorized to finish the plan for the training house, the contract for which will be let at the earliest possible moment.

There is about $80,000 on hand at the present time for the work, and other amounts will be due within the next two or three months.

While the general plan will be subject to more or less modification as the work proceeds, it is in the main as follows:

The building for the entertainment of the visiting teams will be located on the top of Kite Hill. The stadium or grand stand will be erected in the west side of the Hill. In front of this, on about the same level and directly south of the present playground, will be the football field and athletic running tracks.

The baseball field and stand will be located on a level eighteen feet below this, and there will be ample room to the north and west for practice fields for the candidates for the various Varsity teams.

The entire area to the east of the playground will be known as "Students' Commons," a name officially assigned to it by the committee, it being understood that on this field will be carried on the sports engaged in by students not candidates for the 'Varsity teams.

The members of the Athletic Field Committee are Judge Charles H. Blood, '83; George W. Bacon, '92; Prof. W. W. Rowlee, '88; Col. W. H. Sackett, '75, and R. H. Treman, '78.

HARVARD SOCCER TRIUMPH.

Yale's Lead Overcome and Crimson Wins in Second Period.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 12.—Jubilant at beating Yale in football the Harvard soccer team returned to Cambridge to-night wild with enthusiasm. In their annual match on Yale Field this afternoon the Crimson players got a bad start, but rallied in the second half and finally won, 3 to 1. When the first half closed Yale led 1 goal to 0.

Yale had the advantage of the wind in the first half, but erred in not forcing play. When the teams changed sides for the second half Harvard quickly rushed matters, tied the score, and then dashed into the lead, accumulating two goals in five minutes and making the third just before the game closed.

There were two accidents, Capt. Prime of the Yale team being forced to retire because of a wrenched knee, and Chang, the Yale Chinese star, being compelled to take the time limit because of an injured arm. Chang refused to quit and returned to the game after his injury was bandaged.

The play of the forwards was even, but the Harvard backs excelled in accuracy and strength. Hallowell's catching, Hamilton Fish's 55-yard kicks, and Seamans's general aggressive play were the Harvard features. Chang's all-around play was the best shown by Yale.

Thompson of Yale scored the first goal from scrimmage in the first half. In the second period Capt. Seamans centred the ball to Byng, who scored early in the half. Seamans quickly followed with the second goal from scrimmage. Needham scored the last goal for Harvard on a swift, short shot from right wing. The line-up:

COLLEGE AND SCHOOL BASEBALL

The baseball team of Stevens Institute defeated the ball tossers of St. Francis Xavier College at Hoboken yesterday by a score of 9 to 1. The visiting team made nine errors, and this fact, together with somewhat heavy hitting by the Hoboken boys when runners were on bases, enabled the home team to obtain a substantial lead early in the game. Finished Products Quieter—Harriman Lines Order 72,000 Tons of Rails.

Commenting on trade conditions, The Iron Age says:

In point of new business both pig iron and finished material markets have been quieter in the past week than in any other since January. A feeling of disappointment is appearing, but against it is the fact that even the bare hand-to-mouth buying which is now the rule has some favorable surprises week by week. Moreover, the unfilled orders in the hands of the steel companies now represent actual business, much of it for early rolling.

The Harriman lines have placed 72,000 tons of rails, which presumably cover only a part of the year's requirements. The Illinois Steel Company will furnish 21,225 tons of Bessemer rails, the Tennessee Company 28,000 tons of open hearth rails, and the Colorado Company 8,000 tons of open hearth rails. The Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company has bought 2,000 tons, the Boston Elevated 1,500 tons, and one of the Chicago terminal roads 2,500 tons.

The Iron Trade Review says:

All centres report a decline in the demand for finished materials, and with the exception of wire products and tin plate specifications are not as heavy as in March. Pig iron is firm and notwithstanding the low prices that are being made consumers are not inclined to cover for extended deliveries. Shading in prices has been reported on open hearth billets and sheet bars, and in the West a contract for plates was closed at a concession of $2 a ton.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

SOME STEEL PRICE CUTTING

New Orders Light, Though Mill Operations Show Little Reduction—Some Railway Financing.

Trading on the Stock Exchange yesterday was even duller than on the dullest day of last week. Not since July 3, 1908, has a smaller total been recorded than that which represented the aggregate of the day's operations. That was on the eve of a holiday and yesterday, too, something of the holiday spirit entered into the market with the approach of the three-day adjournment which the Stock Exchange will take to-day, when trading will cease until Monday of next week. The expectation of this holiday added just one more influence to those previously at work in keeping Stock Exchange business at a low ebb. Nothing in the day's developments afforded an offset to this further restrictive influence with the result that the movement in prices, taking the list as a whole, was as unimportant as the volume of trading.

Further suggestion of the quiet now prevailing in business came to hand yesterday in the weekly reviews of the iron trade which spoke of further contraction in the demand for steel and iron, although mill operations appear to have been conducted on about the scale prevailing at the opening of the month. This indicates, of course, that the steel mills are running on old orders, and a continuance of this condition for the next fortnight would necessarily mean a reduction in the unfilled orders of the steel companies when these are next reported. Some shading of prices for certain steel products is reported which emphasizes the slackness in the present demand. The Iron Age notes that price cutting on rivets has precipitated an open market in that product and a decline of $5 a ton from the price which has been considered the regular basis.

Some further corporate financing is in preparation, but yesterday's announcements included only several small railway issues, among them an issue of notes put out to provide for an outstanding issue of notes which matures shortly. This incident furnished another example of the disposition recently shown to refund note issues by further issues of the same form of short-term financing. The details of the Pensnylvania stock issue to the amount of 10 per cent. of the outstanding stock were announced, but the essential features of this offering were made known by the Pennsylvania management some weeks ago. A further loss of $339,000 was reported in the banks' transactions with the Sub-Treasury, bringing the total loss since last Friday up to $1,470,000. This seems to have been offset by gains from other quarters, and the money market was even easier than earlier in the week. Call money loaned as low as 2 per cent., and funds for some maturities were put out at concessions from the rates at which loans were previously offered.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.
Wednesday.

Considering the general condition of dullness prevailing in Wall Street, the market on the Consolidated Stock Exchange was a fairly broad one, thirty-eight different stocks being represented in the sales. The best prices for the day were attained in the closing dealings, when trading became a little more active on the advance. Missouri Pacific was a feature in the early afternoon.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, April 12.—Trading in the local market to-day was dull and uninteresting. On the sale of a single share of Calumet & Hecla a gain of 2 points was recorded. Old Dominion and Franklin made fractional gains during the first hour, while Superior and Boston and Inspiration were fractionally weaker. Business continued dull, with the tone irregular until the close.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Eight-Thousand-Share Hour.

Dullness has become a flat topic, but it was noted yesterday that the noon hour produced transactions of only 8,000 shares. The day made another low record for the year. Brokers were confident that the Governing Committee would grant the triple holiday, and the prospect was the only break in the gloomy horizon, but the recollection that five times in the last fourteen years there had been no triple holiday, and that twice in these five there had been no holidays at all, brought enough uncertainty into the matter to make talk.

Cotton Men Waiting for To-day.

Cotton brokers will come down to-day primed for action, not in the market, but in debate. The meeting called for this afternoon, at which a ballot is to be taken on the Board of Managers' recommended changes in the by-laws, promises to be one of the liveliest in all the long fight over the so-called reforms in Cotton Exchange methods. The changes to be voted on, which go a short way on the road toward the reforms suggested in the Government's report, are only grudgingly accepted by a considerable body of the Exchange, who are well satisfied with things as they are, and they do not please at all the minority who have for years been fighting for a contract of greater commercial value. Some of these men are incensed at the paring down of their reform recommendations by the Board of Managers, taking the ground that the officials should have put the whole matter squarely before the Exchange for a vote, and not have attempted a compromise. This feeling is so strong that some of the insurgents have announced that they will vote against the proposed changes rather than see a half-way measure go through. They believe that if the whole question is left open it will be easier to get all that they want at some later date—perhaps when the Scott bill comes out of committee and is before Congress.

The Steel Slow-Up.

Business so far in April has been disappointing to the steel trade, and new orders are reported at the lowest ebb since January. The Steel Corporation has fared somewhat better than its rivals, it is conceded in trade circles. While the recession from the upward turn, which began early in the year, was to have been expected in the present period of suspense, the extent of the let-up has been a bit beyond expectation. The buying from hand to mouth, however, has its encouraging side in that it is an indication that the buying, even for immediate necessities, furnishes a very comfortable volume of business. Rail orders, particularly, are not bad. The Steel Corporation is reported to have sold 45,000 tons within the last week. The Bethlehem Steel Corporation, which, because of its large number of specialties and its armor-plate contracts has been running within 10 per cent. of full, has also felt the let-up since the first of the month, according to trade authorities.

Gates Optimistic by Proxy.

John W. Gates on his return from Texas yesterday denied himself to reporters, but his usual optimism found voice by proxy. President Yoakum of the Frisco lines said after a conversation with him that Mr. Gates's report of conditions in the Southwest entirely coincided with his own. President Yoakum added that a tremendous drought would be necessary to offset the effect of the copius rains which have favored the Southwest this season.

***

Election Fights.

Nothing further is heard of an opposition ticket for the Stock Exchange election next month, but on the Consolidated Exchange the regular ticket was no sooner announced yesterday than the old-line element which led in the election of the last two Presidents began a canvass for a petition to induce President Jarvis to run again. Feeling is strong, and the contest is likely to be hard fought.

COMMODITY MARKETS.

WHEAT.—The wheat market was weak outside of the developments in Chicago May. For a short time during the morning some strength was exhibited, but crop and weather news was of too favorable a character, and the whole list in all markets sold off, closing at about ⅛ to 1c decline, excepting Chicago May, which closed at an advance. The May-July premium at Chicago widened out at one time to 3¼c. Only a short time ago May was about 1c under July. The running in of shorts in the May delivery has developed a greater congestion in the May than had been looked for, and as a result the sharp advance in the May premium which gained about 1c a bushel during the day. Weather conditions were about all that could be desired. Crop reports from the Winter wheat sections were optimistic, claiming conditions better than shown by the Government report. The Nebraska advices were particularly brilliant. Reports from the Northwest were favorable and there were favorable reports from Manitoba. Wheat receipts, however, were again small and there was a decrease of 500,000 bushels in four days at Minneapolis. Export demand, however, is very flat. Shippers reported only five loads of No. 2 red at New York for Antwerp and four loads of Manitoba wheat at outports. Locally the stock of red wheat is being rapidly reduced. Cables were irregular, some lower, some higher, but in the main showed disposition to consider the American crop reports bearish. Cash wheat was quoted No. 2 red, 94¾c; No. 1 Northern Spring, $1.06⅛; No. 2 hard Winter, 99c; No. 1 Northern Manitoba, $1.00½, all on the free on board basis.

CORN.—The corn market was active with prices very firm during the morning, making new high levels for the advance influenced by the light receipts and reports of delays to farm work on account of the wet weather. Cash corn was higher and reported offering sparingly. Selling on the advance, however, developed pronounced volume, and after mid-day future prices declined ¾ to 1c, closing unsettled at the low point for the day. The decline was accompanied by reports of increased country offerings and of disappointing export demand and slow demand for cash at the interior. No. 2 was quoted 56½c, free on board; No. 3, 56c; steamer, 55½c; No. 4, 53c, all in elevator, export rate.

OATS.—The oats market was active and strong at the opening with a good deal of buying on the reports of material delay to oats seeding on account of the rains throughout the West. Shorts were quite good buyers, but after mid-day, when the selling movement started in, other grain offerings were much more liberal, and with the reports of heavier country offerings prices declined about ½@¾c, closing at about the low point. Cash oats were closing at about the low point. Cash oats were 39c; No. 2 firm. Standards were quoted at 39c; No. 2 white, 39½c; No. 3 white, 38½c.

PROVISIONS.—There was a better tone with prices showing a net advance at the close, although final prices were somewhat under the best. Hog prices were somewhat lower generally, and this induced selling at the opening, but the buying of futures credited to the packing interest turned the market upward and traders were also fairly good buyers.

COTTONSEED OIL.

Following a decline to new low levels for the season, as a result of liquidation brought about by margin calls, and hedge selling, a better feeling developed. There was good support from brokers believed to be acting for refining interests, while the firmness in lard was also a factor in restricting pressure. Crude oil advices were mixed, but the sales during the early part of the session in the future market were thought to be against purchases at the South, with a hedge desired evidently, irrespective of the unsatisfactory basis for such operations. Crude generally quoted at 5.08 to 5.14. Future quotations follow:

COTTON.

Operations were in reduced volume as compared with Tuesday, and it was thought that the confusion among traders was resulting in a more cautious attitude and a subsequent inclination to curtail commitments, especially in view of the proximity of the Eastern holidays. There appeared to be further liquidation during the early trading for account of important holders, with the belief that bulls in May were selling that month quietly, while the narrowing of the May

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Madison Avenue Plot Purchased by Builder for Improvement With High Class Private Dwellings—Resale in the Seminary Block—Tenements for Investment.

One of the notable transactions in the realty market yesterday was the sale of a valuable Madison Avenue corner for immediate improvement with high-class private residences. The plot to be built up in this manner is the southwest corner of Madison Avenue and Seventy-ninth Street, fronting 102.2 feet on the avenue and 60 feet on the street. An operation of this nature is so out of the ordinary in view of the disposition to purchase property in residential districts for apartment houses that it directs attention to the fact that the private house market is not absolutely quiet. Another feature of interest is that Charles Buek, a builder, who has erected many fine residences and apartment houses in different parts of the city, is the buyer, known officially as the Charles Buek Construction Company. Mr. Buek will erect four American basement houses of modern type, and they will be the equal of the finest dwellings on the Madison Avenue. Three of the houses will face Seventy-ninth Street and one on Madison Avenue. The property has been held at $250,000, and is a portion of the plot formerly owned by the J. C. Lyons Construction Company, and was acquired from the latter a few years ago by the Lawyers Title Insurance and Trust Company. The brokers in the deal were Pease & Elliman. This is the largest private building operation of its kind undertaken by a building speculator for some time in that vicinity. Cornelius Luyster erected one house to sell on the Lenox Library block over a year ago, which he disposed of at a good price, and he is now finishing two more private houses on the same block facing Seventy-first Street.

Another interesting transaction in this residential locality was the reputed sale of the 50-foot lot on the south side of Seventieth Street, being the westerly portion on that street of the old Union Theological Seminary block fronting on Park Avenue. Louis M. Starr bought this inside parcel over a year ago. It adjoins the big Seventieth Street corner on which George Blumenthal is to build a large residence, and on the Sixty-ninth Street corner will be the future residence of ex-Commodore Arthur Curtiss James of the New York Yacht Club. The brokers who sold the theological property, the Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown Company, declined to confirm or deny the report of the sale. Mr. Starr never made any effort toward improving the property, and it has been rumored for some time that he intended to part with his holdings.

New 86th Street Loft Sold.

A deal of more than average note in the loft district was the sale of the twelve-story building at 53, 55, and 57 West Thirty-sixth Street, lately finished by the Fackner-Coates Construction Company. The sale was made for the latter by Henry D. Winans & May, the buyer being an investor. The building has a frontage of 60 feet.

The H. M. Weill Company have sold the four-story front and rear buildings at 133 West Thirtieth Street, a plot 25 by 100 by irregular, for an estate represented by Dr. Broughton as a client. The Chase Realty are not the purchasers, as previously rumored.

The Private Dwelling Market.

Judson S. Todd has purchased from the Cleland estate 28 East Seventy-third Street, a 20-foot three-story and basement dwelling. Mr. Todd intends to remodel the house into an American basement for his occupancy. The J. P. Whinton-Stuart Company negotiated the sale.

Pease & Elliman sold for John Wagner 124 East Sixty-first Street, a four-story high-stoop dwelling, on lot 18 by 100.5, to a client for occupancy.

On the west side Mary V. McDonald sold 325 West Seventy-fifth Street, a four-story dwelling, on a lot 22 by 102.2, between West End Avenue and Riverside Drive.

Buy to Protect Light and Air.

The Security Mortgage Company has purchased from F. Smith 157 West Twenty-fourth Street, a four-story and basement building, on a plot 20.10 by 98.9. The buyer owns the adjoining six-story loft building, 149 to 155, and made the purchase to protect its light and air. S. M. Bier negotiated the sale.

Buying Tenements for Investment.

Tenement property continues to attract investors, several parcels being disposed of yesterday. On the lower east side, Lowenfeld & Prager resold to Meyer Vassall the five-story tenement on a plot 26 by 100 at the southeast corner of Delancey and Suffolk Streets.

On the west side Mrs. A. G. S. Bradley sold to an investor 522 West Fifty-fifth Street, a four-story tenement on a lot 25 by 100.5.

St. Vincent's Hospital has purchased through Jackson & Stern 449 to 453 West 163d Street, two six-story tenements on a plot 75 by 112.6.

James K. Holly has sold for Adam Schuhmann 450 West 151st Street, a five-story double flat on a lot 21 by 100.

Builders Buy Vacant Plots.

On the heights Jackson & Stern sold to Gross & Herbener the plot, 100 by 99.11, on the south side of 158th Street, 125 feet east of Broadway; also to H. M. Block & Brother the plot, 50 by 99.11, adjoining on the east.

Further north, in the Dyckman section, the Robert Gordon Realty Company sold the plot of four lots on the north side of 210th Street, 200 feet east of Tenth Avenue, 100 by 99.11. The purchaser is W. J. Huston, who is the owner of several parcels in the Dyckman section. The property will be improved with apartments.

Resale of Manhattanville Plot.

The plot, 150 by 100, on the east side of Claremont Avenue, 100 feet south of 125th Street, purchased by Robert M. Silverman last week, has been resold. The buyer is a builder who, it is said, will break ground at once for a six-story apartment house.

Gardner Ellsworth of Bayside a parcel having a frontage of 60 feet on the east side of Gardiner Street, 65 feet south of Lamartine Avenue, Bayside; also a parcel having a frontage of 60 feet on the west side of Sound Street, 65 feet south of Lamartine Avenue, Bayside.

Bing & Bing Buy Scientist Plot.

The Willbrook Realty Company (L. S. & A. M. Bing) are the purchasers of the vacant plot sold by the First Church of Christ Scientist, adjoining the church on the south corner of Central Park West and Ninety-seventh Street. The plot is 100 by 200 feet and was bought by the church officers in 1909 for $300,000 to prevent an undesirable building operation. The contract for the present sale involves consideration of $262,812.50, the buyers agreeing to erect a high-grade apartment house, leaving a ten-foot court between the structure and the church.

Lease in Fourth Avenue District for Improvement.

A large transaction in the new Fourth Avenue section was consummated by Maurice B. & Daniel W. Blumenthal, as attorneys for the estate of John A. Bagley, in the leasing of 45 East Twenty-eighth Street to Ernest A. Turner for a term of twenty-one years, involving a gross rental of about $125,000. The attorneys made the lease for the estate pursuant to an order of the Supreme Court, to which application had to be made, because no power to sell or to lease was left by the late owner. The property has been in the Bagley family about fifty years. The lessee will remodel the premises for business purposes.

BUSINESS PICKING UP IN THE HUDSON TUBES

Small Deficit in Net Income Account Reported Due to a Variety of Causes.

GROSS REVENUE MUCH MORE

Large Increase in Passenger Traffic—Construction Being Rapidly Completed to Newark.

The report, made public yesterday, for the year ended on March 31 of the Hudson & Manhattan Railroad Company, which operates the McAdoo tunnels, shows a deficit in the net income account of $41,890 as against a surplus of $77,389 for the preceding year. This small difference on a turnover of more than $4,000,000 is due to a variety of causes, including increases in operating expenses, interest on bonds, and car-purchasing agreements, rentals, and amortization of the debt. The increase in gross revenue amounted to more than $1,000,000. Regarding interest charges, President McAdoo says:

As important portions of the system are still under construction and the operated portion represents only a part of the total capital expenditure and capacity, interest charges on bonded debt have been apportioned between operation and construction. There is now being deducted from operating income interest on a total of $50,000,000 of bonds, and there is being charged to construction the interest on $14,500,000 of bonds. With the extension of service over those parts of the line now under construction the amount of interest deductible from income will be increased and the amount charged to construction will be reduced, so that the charge of interest to construction will progressively disappear.

As required by the regulations of the Public Service Commission, this company has charged off and set up depreciation and amortization reserves, with a result that at March 31, 1911, in addition to actual expenditures in maintaining the property at the highest point of efficiency, we have absorbed into operating expenses and set up a reserve of $585,081. A better showing of net earnings might have been made by less conservative methods of accounting, but we believe that future results will reflect the wisdom of the policy which has been adopted.

The report states that there has been a gratifying growth of traffic. In the twelve months covered, 50,926,980 passengers were carried, as against 34,574,815 for the year ended March 31, 1910. This, however, the report says, is not a fair comparison, as the downtown tunnels were not put into operation until July 19, 1909. The number of passengers per mile operated, was 7,643,251, as against 6,799,373 for the preceding year, an increase of 12.4 per cent. This represents a real growth, but the ratio is not truly indicative of the normal increase of traffic to be expected, as it is based on an average of miles operated, increasing as new portions were put into operation. During October and September, 1909 and 1910, the road was operated on practically the same mileage, and the traffic of the latter period showed an increase of 24 per cent. over that of the former.

Concerning the proposed extension to Grand Central Station, and that along Ninth Street, from Sixth Avenue to Fourth Avenue, to connect the tunnels and the Interborough subway system, the report says:

The present uncertainty about the new subway lines in New York City presents a problem which makes it unwise to begin this work, or even satisfactorily to prepare plans for it, until the city has reached a decision on the main subway question.

The report points out that the new station at Thirty-third Street, as well as the terminal at Cortlandt Street, are equipped for handling baggage, mail, and express matter, but that these sources of revnue cannot well be tapped until the connection with Newark is completed. It is expected that service to Newark will be started this Summer on the joint high-speed line in conjunction with the Pennsylvania Railroad. This, the report says, will provide an additional station of great importance at or near the Boulevard, Jersey City Heights. Of this prospect the report says:

With an efficient rapid transit service connecting it with uptown and downtown centres of New York, this part of Jersey City will build up rapidly as a residential section. The Hudson terminal will then become the downtown terminal of the Pennsylvania system. Trains will be scheduled from the Hudson terminal to connect with the Pennsylvania trains at the Manhattan transfer just east of Newark, and it is intended that all Pennsylvania Railroad traffic to the downtown district of New York shall be handled by this company from the Manhattan transfer through the Hudson tunnels.

A new local station in the heart of Newark will be an important feature of this joint rapid transit line, which will offer such advantages in the way of through and frequent service and quick time between Newark and its suburbs and New York that a large and continually increasing traffic may be confidently expected.

The Hudson Terminal Buildings, the report says, will be rented to the extent of 90.3 per cent on May 1 next. The gross income from the buildings for the year ending May 1, 1912, will be $1,566,316, as against $1,509,628 for the year ending May 1, 1911.

Miscel. railroad revenue	72,345	148,691
Total railroad revenue	$1,801,086	$2,795,040
Operating exp. of railroad	860,882	1,090,169
Net op. rev. from R. R.	$940,204	$1,604,871
Taxes on operat'g properties	101,954	167,462
Net inc. from R. R. op.	$838,250	$1,437,409
Net income from Hudson Terminal, &c.	738,149	883,862
Total net op. income	$1,576,399	$2,301,271
Non-operating income	10,865	13,781
Gross income	$1,587,264	$2,315,052
Income deductions	1,509,875	2,356,942
Net inc. to surp. acc't.	$77,389	*$41,890

*Deficit.

The report says many reductions in the cost of operation have been made, and when the system is completed the ratios of operating expenses should show further decreases.

MORE PENNSYLVANIA STOCK.

Directors Vote Increase of Ten Per Cent. Authorized by Stockholders.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company announced yesterday that the Directors, meeting in Philadelphia, had voted an increase in the capital stock, as authorized some time since by the stockholders, amounting to 10 per cent. of the stock outstanding, at the close of business on May 5.

Stockholder of record at that time will have the privilege of subscribing for the new stock at par, $50 a share, between May 31 and June 5, to the extent of 10 per cent. of their holdings. Warrants specifying the amount of stock to which stockholders are entitled to subscribe will be issued to each stockholder by assignment, of which the privilege may be sold and transferred. Payments may be made in full at the time of subscription, or 50 per cent. at that time and the remainder between Aug. 28 and Sept. 1, inclusive.

WOULD JAIL BRIDGE PLAYERS

Bill in Jersey Legislature Makes All Games, for Cash or Prizes, Criminal.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., April 12.—A bill introduced in the Assembly to-day by Mr. Turner, a Cumberland County Republican, provides imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten days of all persons concerned in the playing for money or any valuable thing of cards, dice, billiards, pool, tennis, shuffle board, faro bank, &c., at any day or time, whether directly or indirectly interested, or if they be present during the playing of such games of chance.

If this measure should become a law it would permit the imprisonment of women who play euchre or bridge for prizes.

NEW RAILROAD FINANCING.

Notes, Certificates, and Bonds Placed to the Amount of $4,850,000.

New railroad financing, aggregating $4,800,000, was announced yesterday.

F. S. Moseley & Co. of Boston and New York have bought one-year notes of the Maine Central Railroad, dated April 1, 1911, to the amount of $1,500,000. The railroad will use the proceeds to pay off its 5 per cent. four-year notes in the same amount, maturing June 1.

Potter, Choate & Prentice have purchased $1,000,000 Cincinnati, New Orleans & Texas Pacific 4½ per cent. ten-year equipment trust certificates, Series C, payable in twenty semi-annual installments up to 1921. The certificates are secured by certain equipment pledged under the deed of trust and further secured by a cash payment by the company of 25 per cent. upon the total number of notes sold.

The Chicago, Indianapolis & Louisville Railway Company has sold to Potter, Choate & Prentice $2,300,000 refunding mortgage 4 per cent. bonds, due in 1947. These bonds were issued to retire a like amount of Louisville, New Albany & Chicago Railroad, Chicago & Indianapolis Division first mortgage sixes, due Aug. 1 next. On that date the refunding fours will become an absolute first mortgage on the entire mileage owned by the company, aggregating 509 miles of road.

LONG TERMS FOR CRIMINALS.

General Sessions Judges, Noting Crime Wave, Inflict Maximum Penalties.

Judges in General Sessions showed their intention to assist in ridding the city of criminals when forty men who had either been convicted of crimes or had pleaded guilty were sentenced to long terms. Judge Rosalsky sentenced twenty-five criminals and Judge O'Sullivan fifteen. The crimes ranged from picking pockets to highway robbery.

Judge Rosalsky sentenced Joseph Markham of 406 West Forty-sixth Street to nineteen years and six months in Sing Sing for robbery in the first degree. Markham was the leader of a gang who made a practice of holding up Ninth Avenue business men. He was convicted, with two of his companions, for entering a delicatessen store at 436 Ninth Avenue, holding up the proprietor, Isidor Gustav, and stealing $27 from the cash register. One of Markham's gang, Edward Dwyer, of 512 West Fifty-fifth Street, was sentenced to not less than five or more than ten years in Sing Sing at the same time. In sentencing Markham Judge Rosalsky said:

"Two years ago I was induced to suspend a two-year sentence I had imposed on you for a serious offense. I placed you on parole with Father Curry. But you became the leader of a gang, and you and your associates have been holding up business men at the point of revolvers. If you are not careful, young man, you will wind up in the electric chair. But I am going to give you such a good taste of the law made for such evildoers as you that it will strike terror into the minds of others disposed to follow your example.

"Those responsible for the administration of justice in this city are going to aid the police in every way to rid this city of crooks and criminals. New York has all it can do to take care of its own criminals, but word has gone forth, I am given to understand, that this city is wide open. I intend to show all criminals of your ilk that this is not so."

One man received a sentence of fifteen years after the court had recognized him as a man upon whom it had previously suspended sentence.

Two other young criminals, John Daly, 18 years old, who gave his address as 442 Manhattan Avenue, and James Green of 949 Washington Avenue, were sentenced to not less than five nor more than ten years in Sing Sing, after they had pleaded guilty to stealing $200 worth of silverware from the home of Robert O'Brien at 57 East 107th Street on March 17. Jacob Richtman, who also pleaded guilty to the charge, withdrew his plea when he saw how things were going, and was warned that if he was convicted he would receive the maximum sentence.

Joseph Fred Smith, who was convicted of burglary in the first degree a week ago, was sentenced to nine years and two months in Sing Sing, and to pay a fine of $250.

Judge O'Sullivan in sentencing fifteen criminals, most of whom were not 21 years of age, said:

"Ninety per cent. of the burglars convicted in these courts appear to be young men just starting out in life. They are just starting upon a career of crime. For them to adopt the most hazardous part of a perilous profession seems to me most surprising."

Druggist Halper Is Acquitted.

The jury in the case of Jacob Halper, druggist, of 2,101 Amsterdam Avenue, who has been on trial before Judge Crain in General Sessions, was acquitted at 10 o'clock last night. The jury had been out five hours. Halper was accused of substituting bichloride of mercury for a gray powder prescribed for the four-year-old daughter of Harry S. Hand, Brooklyn passenger agent of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad. The child died. Halper's defense was that he did not personally fill the prescription.

96 YEARS OLD; WAS WITH A. T. STEWART

"And a Mighty Good Meal It Was," at the Second Table of a Famous Hotel.

Thomas G. Stearns, a retired dry goods importer, who was with Alexander T. Stewart for several years when the latter, in the early days, had a four-story dry goods shop on Broadway, between Murray Street and Park Place, celebrated his ninety-fifth birthday at the Waldorf-Astoria yesterday by a dinner party to the members of his family. Among the guests were his two sons, Richard Hutchinson and Frederick Wellington Stearns, with their wives, and his daughter, Mrs. Fred Eugene Bright, with her husband.

Mr. Stearns appeared to be in the best of health and spirits, and feels confident that he will live to be 100. His father was 94 years of age when he died, his two uncles were 96 and 98 respectively, and two of his aunts lived to the age of 92. He complained to a Times reporter yesterday that he found a little difficulty in reading the newspapers, but said that he could see better without glasses than he could with them.

"When I first came to New York from Eastport, Me., in 1837, on the sailing packet Boundary, which took ten days to make the passage," he said, "we got into a heavy storm off Cape Cod and were blown nearly down to Cape Sable. In those days the nearest railroad to this city was from Providence to Boston, and in 1832 I had my first ride on the iron road. About the same time I saw Morse make his first experiments in public at Faneuil Hall, Boston, with the telegraph system. The first residences in Chambers Street, near Broadway, were erected for George and Nathaniel Griswold, the wealthy India merchants.

"At the City, Waverly, and Globe Hotels on Broadway, near Fulton Street, the meals were 50 cents for the first table and 25 cents at the second table, and mighty good meals they were for the money. Green-vich Street, from Fulton Street to the Battery, was the fashionable residential quarter then, and was crowded with carriages from 3 to 5 in the afternoon, like Fifth Avenue is to-day. The East and North Rivers were filled with clipper packets from all parts of the world. I have voted the Whig and straight Republican ticket since 1837."

"What about smoking?" he was asked.

"Well, I smoked my first cigar at the age of 11 and quit when I was 16."

"Did you ever take any intoxicants?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Stearns, "but I did not take very much, and have drunk more in the last thirteen years by the doctors' orders than I ever did before."

The old man said that he walks two hours for exercise every fine day, and does not feel fatigued. When he sees a woman standing in a car he gets up from force of habit and offers her his seat. "And they frequently take it," said his son-in-law, Mr. Bright.

Mr. Stearns lived in this city until 1897, when he moved to Bridgeport. His wife died at the age of 75, after they had celebrated their golden wedding.

COTTON MAN A SUICIDE.

President of Alta Vista Mills in Virginia Shoots Himself.

Special to The New York Times.

ALTA VISTA, Va., April 12.—A. C. Hutchinson, President of the Alta Vista Cotton Mills, committed suicide here today at 11 o'clock in his office. The sound of a pistol attracted people to the building in which Hutchinson had his office. Men rushed in to find him dead in a chair, with blood flowing from his temple.

He had written a note to his wife, which was sealed. Before killing himself Hutchinson took off his glasses and propped himself in his chair. His temple was burned from the powder of the gun, so close was the barrel held to his temple.

Hutchinson had just returned from New York. The cotton mills are new and are now under construction, and will cost $300,000 when completed; $150,000 of the bonds were sold this week in the North through Hutchinson's efforts. Some time ago the millwork was stopped for lack of funds. The suicide following on what appears to have been success is regarded as due to mental conditions following a business strain.

POLICE GET TOM BACK.

Patrol Driver Buys In Popular Horse and Will Give Him a Home.

Tom, who had drawn the patrol wagon of the Snyder Avenue Station, Flatbush, for many years was sent away recently to be sold at auction, and many were the lamentations by men of the precinct.

Policemen Michael Kearns and Thomas Burns, drivers of the patrol, were among the chief mourners, and each decided to buy him at the sale yesterday.

Unfortunately Burns was on duty, but he sent an agent to bid for the horse. Kearns went personally. Neither knew of the other's plans. When Tom came up on the block Kearns bid $75, and Burns's agent decided that the horse was not worth that much. Kearns brought the horse back to Flatbush.

All yesterday afternoon Tom was at home to his friends. When Burns saw old Tom back he offered Kearns $200 for the horse, but Kearns refused to sell him for $2,000. Tom will spend the rest of his life on the farm owned by Kearns at Rochester Avenue and Tulip Street.

Asks Mayor About Her Relatives.

Mayor Gaynor received a letter yesterday from Mrs. Anna Decker of Bedford, Ohio, asking him to assist her in finding her relatives. She writes that she has been separated from them since she was a child when she was placed in a home in this city. Mrs. Decker gives this information about herself: "My father was William Anderson, a shoemaker. He married Harriet Bethel of Quebec, Canada. My mother's brother was Francis Bethel, a butcher in New York City. A sister of my father married a James Campbell of Canada. I have heard that Campbell lives in Brooklyn, New York. My mother's relatives are the Holdens, Delaneys and Sinnotts of New York, and the Bethels and Fitzpatricks of Quebec."

Mimi, a Maltese Terrier, Missing.

Mimi, a white Maltese terrier belonging to Mrs. Paul P. Marcone, is missing, and her mistress asked THE TIMES yesterday through the Lost and Found column to help in the search for it. The dog is mourned by the entire household. Mrs. Marcone took Mimi for a walk late in the afternoon. When she returned to her home, 840 West End Avenue, she thought that Mimi followed her into the house. Half an hour later it was discovered the pet was missing. A search was at once made through the neighborhood, but without success.

FAVOR TOMKINS'S PLAN.

Estimate Board's Committee Hears Argument on Eleventh Ave. Tracks.

The special committee of the Board of Estimate to consider the removal of the New York Central west side tracks from grade held a public hearing at City Hall yesterday. Dock Commissioner Tomkins and the committee are at odds on the matter, the former having recommended the erection of an elevated structure to be jointly used by the Central and other railroads as part of his joint freight terminal plan, and the committee of engineers appointed by the latter having reported in favor of the depression of the tracks.

The first speaker yesterday was A. R. Smith, representing the Merchants and Manufacturers' Board of Trade. He spoke in favor of Commissioner Tomkins's plan. It was also indorsed by James T. Holle of the Manufacturers' Association of Brooklyn, Welding Ring, ex-President of the Produce Exchange; C. H. Callahan, Chairman of the Committee on Piers of the Maritime Exchange, and Frederick B. De Berard, Secretary of the Merchants' Association.

R. A. C. Smith asked on behalf of the Chamber of Commerce that its Committee on Harbor and Shipping be given an opportunity to confer with the committee. There were several other requests that the committee delay final action and the hearing was postponed to Tuesday next. The matter was to have been taken up by the Board of Estimate to-day, but it will doubtless laid over for at least a week.

AGAINST BRONX HOSPITAL.

State Charities Board Rejects Dr. Jacobi's Proposal.

The State Board of Charities disapproved yesterday the articles of incorporation of the Bronx Hospital, which Dr. Abraham Jacobi and seventeen other physicians, fifteen of whom are residents of Manhattan, have been anxious to establish in the Bronx. The site Dr. Jacobi and his fellow Manhattan physicians had selected for the Bronx Hospital was in the congested tenement district near Valentine and Wendover Avenues.

At a meeting of the State Board of Charities six weeks ago several Bronx physicians objected to the establishment of Dr. Jacobi's Bronx Hospital on the ground that the Manhattan physicians were invading the territory of the Bronx physicians. Many residents of the Bronx appeared in favor of Dr. Jacobi's hospital, but the Bronx physicians stated that a movement was already on foot among them to start a hospital of their own.

The State Board of Charities at its meeting yesterday also refused to grant a license to the Lenox Hill Clinic and Dispensary in Seventy-second Street east of Third Avenue.

HOLD WOMAN AS SLAYER.

Mrs. Brode Says Boarder Shot Himself —Police Say She Admitted Doing It.

Magistrate Geismar in the Fifth Avenue, Brooklyn Court, held without bail yesterday Mrs. Lulu Brode of 6,915 Fort Hamilton Avenue for a hearing on the charge of shooting Isidore Bogsulac, a bookkeeper, who boarded with her. Mrs. Brode denied that she had shot Bogsulac, saying that he had fired at her, and then tried to kill himself.

The police said that C. W. Scott of 840 Seventy-second Street told them Mrs. Brode admitted to him she shot Bogsulac, but that it was in self-defense. Scott heard two shots as he passed the Brode house yesterday morning, and, running inside, found Bogsulac on the floor, and Mrs. Brode, with her twelve-year-old son Simon, standing near by. On the floor between the man and woman, said Scott, was a pistol.

Mrs. Sereno E. Payne Seriously Ill.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Mrs. Sereno E. Payne, wife of the New York Representative, one of the leading Republicans in the House and father of the present Tariff bill in that branch of Congress, is in a serious condition in her home here, suffering from nervous prostration and a general breakdown. For the last year Mrs. Payne has been in failing health.

COACHMAN KILLS HIMSELF.

Horses and Carriages to be Sold for Autos, He Decides to Die.

His occupation gone, Thomas Levine shot himself through the heart in Ossining yesterday and died instantly. He was a victim of the automobile. All his life he had driven horses, and for the last twelve years he had been coachman for John S. Jacobus of South Highland Avenue.

A month ago he was informed that about May 1 the family would yield to modernity and dispose of its horses and carriages and substitute automobiles for them. He sought another place, but told his friends that his heart was not in it. He could not bear to think of learning to drive an automobile, and he realized that the day of the coachman had gone. No one wanted a horse driver, and he felt he was of no more use. His friends tried to encourage him, but to no avail.
